Brazil Coup Gives Vargas Virtual Role Of Dictator

New Constitution Puts Power in Hands of President.

Parliament, State, City Councils Out

Regime to Resemble Corporative State as in Portugal.

By the United Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 10.—Virtual dictatorship was established in Brazil today.

President Getulio Vargas ordered dissolution of the Federal Senate and Chamber of Deputies as well as all state legislatures and municipal councils and promulgated a new constitution.

The announcement was made by Minister of Justice Francisco Campos, named Tuesday to replace Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares, who resigned.

[The new constitution replaces the one which inaugurated the second Brazilian Republic in 1934, the Associated Press reported. It would vest legislative power in a new Parliament and executive power in the hands of a President with a six-year term.

Strong Power to President.

[The new document in part followed advance expectations that it would be modeled closely on the Portuguese constitution. The Portuguese constitution provides for a corporative chamber, which functions alongside the national assembly, the legislative body. Strong power is given the President and his cabinet.—Editor's Note.]

Strict censorship was imposed on all telegraphic and telephonic communication with foreign countries and official information at first was limited to the following bare announcement, distributed by the police censor:

"After a meeting held this morning in Guanabara Palace, the minister of justice announced to accredited press representatives that the new constitution of the republic which will be published today has just been promulgated.

Legislatures Dissolved.

"Ipso facto, the federal senate and chamber of deputies and also state legislatures and municipal councils are dissolved."

Later the censor issued a communique which said the changes were effected "pacifically and had for their purpose assurance of national peace."

The communique added:

"The new constitution, which will be submitted to a national plebiscite, assures in a most complete manner union of authority and provides the government with normal means for defense of order. There will be a Parliament and a consultative council of national economy. All rights and contracts will be guaranteed."

Foreign Minister Pimentel Brandao told the United Press there would be no change in Brazilian foreign policy. He also declared that reports this country may shortly adhere to the German-Japanese-Italian anti-Communist pact were "without foundation."

Coffee Troubles Blamed.

Observers attributed the President's action to general uneasiness throughout the country, provoked by the recent coffee situation and political disturbances, especially in the south.

"I suppose that all former football players (gosh, it hurts to say that) have some pretty fine memories of the men they played against. I know I have. During the three years I carried the blue jersey up and down the field, I ran into a lot of fine players, a good percentage of whom did a bit of running into me—with varying results."

Asserts Scion Had Been Drinking Heavily, Could Not Sign Hotel Register; 'Wife' Had Sworn Paternity Warrant Against Another Man.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hickory, N. C., Nov. 10.—Basil (Pat) Ryan, grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, awakened in a Hickory hotel not only with a wife he could not remember marrying but to learn that the young woman he had met two days before was the mother of a 2-month-old son.

This version of the marriage of Ryan, son of John Barry Ryan, socially prominent New York sportsman, author and publisher, to the former Martha Barkley, 21, of Morganton, was provided tonight by Ryan's attorney, C. W. Bagley, of Hickory. It was based, Bagley said, on statements by Ryan and members of the hotel staff.

Ryan's failure to remember his marriage to Miss Barkley last Thursday night, Bagley attributed to the young man's heavy consump-

Edith Maxwell May Get Ruling Today on Plea

Virginia Girl Sentenced in Father's Death Seeks Her Third Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10.—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals may rule tomorrow, decision day, on the case of Edith Maxwell, former Pound, Va., school teacher seeking a third trial on a charge of killing her father, Trigg Maxwell, in 1935.

The defendant was sentenced to 25 years in prison on conviction in her first trial and sentenced to 20 years in the second.

The young woman admitted at her first trial that she struck her father with a slipper while he was beating her. He died an hour or so later. The prosecution insisted at Edith's last trial that she struck him with an ax. It suggested that the ax had been thrown into the Wise River, but introduced in evidence one that "looked like it."

The introduction of the ax as evidence is one of the grounds on which Charles Henry Smith, prominent Alexandria attorney, asked for a third trial. He contends that Judge Ezra Carter should not have admitted the ax as evidence. After the jury had been shown the ax, Judge Carter reversed himself and ordered the evidence stricken from the record.

Miss Maxwell served more than a year in jail. Since being released on bail, she has been living on a farm near Drewry's Bluff, Va., with her mother and two small sisters.

Japanese Blast Nantao to Oust Doomed 6,000

50,000 Land at Hangchow Bay; Expected to Drive Toward Nanking.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Nov. 11.—Japanese, seeking to annihilate an estimated 6,000 Chinese troops trapped in the ancient walled Nantao section of Shanghai, opened fire with their biggest guns today in the heaviest bombardment of the second Shanghai war.

Japanese warplanes joined in the devastation, bombing and machine-gunning Chinese "dare-to-die" soldiers who had sworn to defend Nantao to the last man.

The Japanese apparently moved up their heaviest guns during the night west of Nantao to avoid shelling over the International Settlement and French Concession, as happened yesterday.

Chinese officials reported that the Japanese had landed nearly 50,000 reinforcements near Kwan-Hai-Wei, on the south side of Hangchow Bay, for an expected mass attack on China's Hindenburg line which protects the central capital in Nanking. Kwan-Hai-Wei is south of here.

Simultaneously the Japanese revealed that their two armies driving inland toward Nanking from the Shanghai area had effected contact west of this city, trapping an estimated 20,000 Chinese soldiers still

Neglected Amazons to Rule Men In 1,000 Yrs., Says Psychologist

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—A serious "sex battle" with women emerging as rulers of the nation 1,000 years from now was predicted today by Dr. William Moulton Marston, noted psychologist, formerly of Harvard University.

Man as the "boss," he said, is doomed.

"The next 100 years will see the beginning of an American matriarchy—a nation of amazons in the psychological rather than physical sense," he said.

"In 500 years, there will be a serious sex battle. And in 1,000 years women will definitely rule this country."

That isn't all, either. Not according to the professor, whose "Who's Who" niche fills 38 lines.

By the year 2937 A. D., said Dr. Marston, people will be living to be 1,000 years old, because by that time the three great motivating forces of life will be properly balanced—success, love and fun.

"There is no physiological or biological reason why man shouldn't live 1,000 years," he said. "Once the nerve strain, the poison of emotional conflict has been eliminated and the human body has become mentally and physically balanced, people can live ten centuries with ease."

But to get back to the women—

"Women have twice the emotional development, the ability for love, than man has," he explained, leading up to his theory of an amazonized America. "Thus women have been driven to loneliness or naughtiness.

"Today, realizing that their love motive has no sustaining force, nothing to feed on—in fact," he interjected, "they're just out of luck as far as men are concerned—so today women are diverting their energies into other channels. And as they develop as much ability for worldly success as they already have ability for love, they will clearly come to rule business and the Nation and the world."

Women don't want to rule, he said—"they are being driven to it by a desire for love."

The armistice that ended World War hostilities November 11, 1918, will be commemorated throughout the Nation today with observances led by President Roosevelt.

At 11 a. m., the hour when 19 years ago the "cease firing" order became effective on the fighting fronts, the President, who was Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the World War, will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

The President's tribute will be followed by elaborate ceremonies in the National Memorial Amphitheater in Arlington under auspices of the American Legion. These will be chief events of the day's program in the ceremony which will begin at 8:30 a. m. and continue until 5 p. m.

Services for Wilson.

Two special services will be held in Washington Cathedral. First of these, at 3:15 p. m., will be the annual Armistice Day tribute to President Wilson. Immediately afterward services will be held under auspices of the National Capital Chapter, No. 2, Disabled American Veterans, in honor of "nurses and other women who have served our country in time of war."

President and Mrs. Roosevelt head a distinguished list of patrons for the Armistice ball of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which will be held tonight at the Willard Hotel. Miss Josephine Day, recently crowned "Miss V. F. W." in a contest conducted by 20 local posts, will be queen of the ball.

The Legion's Armistice Day activities will also be climaxed with a ball at the Mayflower Hotel. National Commander S. J. Doherty, Ferdinand G. Fraser, new national head of the Forty and Eight, and diplomatic and society notables will attend.

Legion Chief to Speak.

Legion Commander Doherty will give the principal address on the legion's program, which will start at 11:15 a. m. and continue until 1 o'clock. Other speakers will be Thomas Mason, jr., district commander of the legion; Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, national president of the Legion Auxiliary, and the Planning Groups First Designed as 'TVA's'—Norris

Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), of Nebraska, said yesterday the eight regional planning authorities proposed in legislation now pending in Congress were originally designed to be "TVA's."

Informed the President had warned reporters against calling them "little TVA's," Senator Norris said:

"Maybe the President has changed his mind, but I thought they were to be TVA's."

Before calling Congress back into special session, the President listed the regional planning proposal, originally sponsored by Senator Norris, as one of the five items of special session business. The President said the regional authorities would be limited to planning duties and must submit their recommendations to Congress.

The pitiful family devoured the food eagerly while William's body lay under a sheet in the kitchen of their tenement home—his feet showing through holes in his shoes.

$700,000,000 May Be Saved on Works, Relief, Farms.

Byrd Denounces New Deal 'Waste'

Revenue Structure May Be Simplified and Made Fairer.

By Sidney Olson.

The New Deal turned its back last night on deficit spending and stood pledged to a balanced budget achieved by slashing pump-priming expenditures.

In one of the most significant pronouncements of his tenure as Secretary of the Treasury, quiet-voiced Henry Morgenthau, jr., last night promised the Nation that hereafter the Administration will try to live within its income.

He warned that too rapid a reduction in expenditures now would be as dangerous to the national economy as no reduction at all, but he coupled that warning with a declaration that $700,000,000 can be cut from expenditures for public highways, public works, unemployment relief and agriculture.

Speech Made in New York.

These, he said, were the classes of Government expenses "that have mainly been responsible for our past deficits."

The Secretary made his detailed reassurance to private capital and the business of the Nation in New York City last night in an address delivered before the Academy of Political Sciences.

His speech was made available here, as was the address of Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Byrd, long identified with demands for Federal economy, slapped at Federal spending in a forthright description of the New Deal as "the most costly and wasteful bureaucracy at Washington in the history of the United States."

No Tax Decrease Due.

But even the unusually forceful attack of Senator Byrd—even his outright demand that the Government "stop writing checks" in order to avert a "disaster"—was dwarfed by the definite assurances to industry and finance by the Treasury head.

Of taxes, Morgenthau said frankly that no increase is contemplated in the total tax burden.

He qualified this by pointing out that the character of the tax structure may be revised to eliminate tax inequities and simplify tax laws in order to distribute the tax burden "as fairly as possible" and to make tax collection "as little burdensome to the taxpayer as possible."

He stressed that fair taxation would follow "if we were to reduce the number of consumer taxes

Treasury's Chief Stops Address to Answer Hecklers

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Sporadic jeers met one statement Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau made tonight before the Academy of Political Science.

He said that "not once during even the darkest days of the depression did the Treasury experience the slightest difficulty in borrowing all the funds that were required."

Morgenthau departed from his prepared speech as he turned toward the direction of the laugh and remarked: "You try it."

Applause greeted the sally.

N. B. C. Bans Johnson's Talk on Social Diseases

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said his prepared radio broadcast tonight for a commercial program was banned by National Broadcasting Co. officials because it dealt with the subject of social diseases.

N. B. C. officials said his subject was not acceptable under its policy, established after consultation with physicians.

Government-Business Moves

President Roosevelt mapped a campaign for a Nation-wide privately-financed housing program with a newly-appointed committee of businessmen, industrialists and officials.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, in New York, said conditions now require a change from deficit-financing to budget-balancing, that such a change must be made by reducing expenditures rather than increasinng taxes.

Sennator Byrd demanded that the "wasteful" New Deal "stop writing checks," in order to avert a "disaster."

Leaders of the House Ways and Means and Agriculture Committees indicated preference for use of general revenue rather than processing taxes to finance the new farm bill.

The Ways and Means Committee heard two Treasury experts testify on mounting complaints against the undivided profits tax.

General Taxes May Finance Crop Program

House Committee Will Not Be Bound to Processing Levy, Leaders Say.

By Robert C. Albright.

Resort to general taxation, rather than processing taxes, to finance the new crop adjustment program, arose as a distinct possibility last night.

Conferences at the White House and at the Capitol failed to settle the controversial question of farm tax procedure, and a showdown may come in the House Agriculture Committee today.

The issue to be determined is whether processing taxes on farm commodities shall be levied in the new farm bill, or whether the House Ways and Means Committee shall take jurisdiction and draft a separate revenue measure.

Leaders Confer.

Ways and Means spokesmen said last night they will not be bound to processing taxes if farm plan financing is left up to them, but will ask freedom to propose whatever tax they deem most desirable.

A conference of leaders of the House Agriculture Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee was held in the office of Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton late yesterday. It was decided to put the questions first to the full Agriculture Committee, which yesterday appeared about evenly divided on the wisdom of processing taxes.

"If they think it is our duty to take jurisdiction, we will do so," said Doughton, after the conference. "But of course we would want to know how much the program will cost. No one seems to know that yet. And we would want to be free to propose the type of taxes we think advisable."

Processing taxes on some farm commodities already have been included in a tentative draft of the House farm bill, but committee members are divided over constitutionality of the levies, invalidated

House Tax Body Weighs Plaints On Profits Levy

Vinson Sees Merit in Some, None in Others as Study Begins.

The House Ways and Means tax sub-committee yesterday began considering those provisions of the undivided profits levy which have brought loudest complaints.

Although the committee reached no conclusions on methods of amendment or agreement or what changes should be made in the law to relieve hardships, Chairman Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky, declared the committee's objective was "to relieve inequities" wherever they appear.

"I think there is merit in some of the complaints and perhaps no merit in others," said Vinson, announcing the committee intended to sift testimony of both business and the Treasury in detail before reaching a conclusion. The round table discussion dealt with operation of the tax on the following instances:

(1) Debt-ridden corporations, (2) corporations with impaired capital, (3) expenditures for business expansion, (4) new corporations, (5) problems of inventory, (6) forgiveness of indebtedness, (7) disallowance of capital losses, (8) earnings unavailable for dividend distribution and (9) deficiency and refund problems.

Studies based upon typical cases of complaint as to hardships imposed on industrial expansion and development, for the most part submitted by the United States Chamber of Commerce, were presented to the committee by Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury; Arthur H. Kent, Treasury counsel, and Lovell H. Parker, chief of staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Vinson explained complaints regarding what he termed "forgiveness of indebtedness" involved, for example, a corporation which may have purchased its own bonds below par. This, he said, apparently raised the question whether the difference between the price paid and the par value of the stock was taxable.

Hand Cut Off, Bandit Pockets It And Fights Until Shot to Death

By the Associated Press.

Santa Rosa, Calif., Nov. 10.—A story of a duel between a 79-year-old rancher armed with an old, rusty sword and an intruder, brandishing a butcher knife, was pieced together by officers today from the dying rancher's gasps.

Instead, he seized a gun, killed the invader with one shot.

Elliott was so critically wounded hospital attendants gave him little chance to survive.

Sheriff Harry Patteson reconstructed this story of the grotesque battle:

Answering a knock at the door of the house where he lives alone, Elliott was confronted late last night by a hooded man, holding a flashlight in one hand and a butcher knife in the other.

"This is a robbery," the hooded man said. "I want your money!"

A sudden swipe of Elliott's sword cut off the stranger's left hand. The stranger picked up the hand, stuffed it into his pocket.

Then, despite loss of his hand, the intruder overpowered the rancher and waved his butcher knife menacingly.

Elliott stumbled toward a cupboard. But instead of cash, he picked up a gun, turned and fired. The invader was slain.

Elliott staggered a quarter of a mile to the home of his nearest neighbors.

The sheriff found the slain body in the wildly disordered room. The man, about 50, was plainly dressed. The hood over his head was a barley sack with slits for the eyes.

Committee Is Set Up to Frame Low-Cost Home Program.

Plan Will Be Put Before Congress

President Gives Idea in 2½-Hour Talk With Industry Leaders.

By Franklyn Waltman.

In his first direct action to stem the industrial recession, President Roosevelt yesterday revealed he had set up a new housing committee, including outstanding business leaders, to frame a program for stimulation of construction by private enterprise of low-cost dwelling units for sale and rent.

Named a week ago, this committee's existence was not disclosed until the President met with the group at the White House in a 2½ hour session in which the groundwork for its task was discussed. The aim of the group is to attract millions of dollars of private funds into nation-wide housing construction during the next year with the dual purpose of providing employment and avoiding an acute housing shortage in the near future.

Based on a plan of co-operation with business and industry, with the Government doing what it can to facilitate the operation, the President's action was taken as confirmation of reports that he was determined to encourage private enterprise to meet the present economic set-back instead of using Treasury funds to do it.

FHA Revision Favored.

As a starting point, the committee is in agreement on the necessity for revision of the insurance provisions of the FHA national housing act, to facilitate and simplify the flow of private funds into construction of multifamily housing projects, especially for rental to low-income classes. It is estimated millions, if not billions, of dollars could be soundly expended on such construction in the next four years, if the machinery of the building industry were properly geared to the financial markets.

But this is only one aspect of the task before the President's new committee. One obstacle in its way is the high cost of housing construction, and it left the President with instructions to explore this field for possible remedies, such as the organization of the construction industry for large-scale housing operations. Schemes for large-quantity purchasing of material and a reduction in the hourly labor rates in return for a guaranteed annual income figure in that undertaking.

Eccles Is on Committee.

The committee which the President assembled at the White House comprised:

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust Co. of New York.

Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., huge mail order house.

Edward F. McGrady, director of labor relations, Radio Corporation of America and former Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Henry C. Turner, president of the Turner Construction Co., of New York, large-scale builders.

Miss Perkins Hints Changes In Wages Bill

Labor Secretary Silent on Details But Insists on Flexibility.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said yesterday a Labor Standards Board "is essential" to administer any wages-hours law that contains "flexible" provisions, in line with her announced views that a wages-hours law must be flexible in character to be equitable.

Miss Perkins revealed after a White House visit, that she will suggest certain changes in the bill when hearings begin before Congressional committees but declined to disclose details.

Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), Virginia, also a White House visitor yesterday, said his position against the bill was unchanged. Smith was a member of the House Rules Committee bloc which sidetracked the wages-hours measure in the last session.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, House Rules Committee Chairman John O'Connor of New York, declared:

"The present situation on the wages and hours bill is so messed up and muddled that it is hard to say what will come of it. I do believe this—that if they try to take the bill back to the Labor Committee again and rewrite it, there isn't much chance of it passing this session.

"From the standpoint of strategy, if they want to make further changes the thing to do is propose them as amendments on the House floor. If they go back to rewriting the whole bill in committee, that means a new measure that must go back to the Senate. That course will take more time than we have in the special session.

"Now they are talking about taking the matter away from my committee and sending the bill back to the Labor Committee for rewriting. I've tried hard enough, but there are some people you can't help."

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor announced all legislative representatives of labor organizations here affiliated with the federation and representatives of the Railroad Brotherhoods, had been invited to a conference November 17 to consider legislation to come before the special session.

Roosevelt Favors Smith Airport Plan

President Roosevelt still favors construction of a national airport at Gravelly Point, Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, Va., said yesterday after a White House conference.

Representative Smith said he "gathered from the President's remarks" that his measure, providing $2,500,000 of Federal funds to finance the terminal, would receive White House backing when it comes up for consideration by Congress at the January session.

The Gravelly Point airport plan has long had the backing of the Board of Trade and other civic organizations, but airline operators and Washington's Airport officials assert the site is too near the Army's Bolling Field for safety.

Jewish Group Sets Polish Issue Study

The circumstances of 350,000,000 Jews in Poland will be considered at a national conference of the Jewish Peoples Committee to be held at the National Press Club, November 19 and 20. More than 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

William M. Cubert, national conference secretary, said yesterday the committee was a national organization composed of representatives of 100,000 Jews in local and national organizations. He has established offices in the Annapolis Hotel.

Cubert asserted that Jews in Poland now were being persecuted and that the committee would plan steps to check the tide of pogroms, which he declared had spread throughout the country. The conference also will consider protecting the rights of Jewish minority under the Versailles Treaty, Cubert said.

Officers Elected By Greenbelt Unit

Stanley B. Rider has been elected president of the newly formed Greenbelt Citizens Association, it was announced yesterday.

Gathering at the first community meeting, more than 200 residents of Greenbelt also elected Yale B. Huffman, vice president; Mrs. Louise W. Endsley, secretary, and Walton O. Cone, treasurer.

Plans were made for a nonpartisan political rally at which time ten nominees for the Greenbelt Council will deliver campaign speeches.

Nominations for the council, which will be composed of five members, closed yesterday. Elections will be held November 23. A first annual Thanksgiving dance will be sponsored by the association.

Politics and People

New Deal Apparently Has Made a Realistic Start on Long-Delayed Housing Program.

By Franklyn Waltman

NOTHING as important has happened here in several moons as the housing conference which took place at the White House yesterday. So much has been written and said about housing and so little done that there is a general tendency to dismiss such meetings and moves to stimulate residential building as so much more blah.

WALTMAN.

Do not, however, underestimate the importance and significance of the two and one-half hour session which the President had with five of the country's outstanding business leaders and three of the Government's most realistic housing experts. That meeting marked the kickoff for the first determined effort made under the New Deal to bring the anemic housing-construction industry to a rosy hue of vigorous health.

Such a development would have been important any time during the last two or three years. Coming at this particular time, when the country faces an industrial slump, the proportions of which may possibly be great, it is doubly important. Indeed, if the much-needed housing boom can be started within a few months there need be little fear about any prolonged industrial recession. Housing construction, as England bears witness, is the best recovery promoter in the economic card deck.

We are far from a housing boom, however, and it will take more than White House conferences to bring about one. We have had such conferences before—by the dozen. Perhaps the present effort will fail to produce the desired results. Housing due to high costs has become a thorny problem. But at least a realistic start now is being made after four years of indifference in high places or misplaced emphasis or starry-eyed bungling.

The reasons why the group which met with the President yesterday raise new hopes and expectations are several. One is it has undertaken to approach the problem through private capital and private enterprise, and not Government spending.

In the past, most of the emphasis has been on Government-financed building programs. Aside from the creation of the Federal Housing Administration, with its insurance provisions for moderately priced home construction, nothing has been done to spur private enterprise in the housing field—and the FHA clearly was inadequate because the situation called for building operations on a large scale.

For various reasons the amount of housing constructed by the Government has been pitifully negligible. Even the Wagner housing act, providing for $500,000,000 of construction in the next few years, passed by Congress last August, if administered to perfection, would not make a dent in the situation. That can be proved by simple arithmetic. Assuming the maximum cost for each family unit is $4,000—an assumption which will not be realized—only 125,000 family units can be constructed with $500,000,000.

Conservative estimates are to the effect that 3,000,000 houses or apartments will be needed over the next four years if a serious housing shortage and an acute rental crisis is to be avoided. That is an average of 750,000 family units annually or six times as many as the maximum possibilities of the Wagner act will produce in three years.

So at last action is being taken under the President's auspices on the realization that the housing problem is primarily one of private enterprise. Machinery now has been set in motion to determine ways and means of getting private enterprise going, with the Government undertaking to facilitate the operation instead of doing something in lieu of it.

Not the least significant aspect of this new move is the personnel of the committee which the President a week ago set to work on this problem. In the past, New Deal housing committees have consisted chiefly of representatives of the major departments and independent agencies, with persons outside of the Government, with one or two exceptions, serving only as copsultants and not as the framers of the program.

Mr. Roosevelt now has turned the problem over to a committee of five business leaders and three representatives of the Government—and the latter long have been sympathetic to encouraging private enterprise to carry on the housing program. Of the business leaders, one is a Wall street banker; another is head of one of the country's largest equipment-manufacturing industries; another is a big-scale builder; a fourth, the head of a huge mail-order house, and the fifth, while long associated with labor's ranks, now is in the big corporate money. They are a hard-headed lot and have proved they know how to make business ventures succeed.

Those seeking to divine what is going on in Mr. Roosevelt's head at this time should take note of this turning toward the business world for assistance and cooperation. It is so rare since the New Deal started that it is noteworthy—and, it may be said, Mr. Roosevelt himself selected that committee.

There is nothing new or sudden, however, about the undertaking to stimulate private housing enterprise. Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner S. Eccles has been working on such schemes since 1933. He brought J. Matt Daiger, the FHA financial adviser, into the Government service as a housing expert. Mr. Daiger and Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, have been working on the problem for several years—have been working intensely on it for months, quietly and without ballyhoo.

They first won the President's active interest—as far as surface indications go—last summer when Mr. Roosevelt one day did a lecture to his press conference on the necessity for housing for rental purposes. The present industrial slump and the necessity for stimulating industry translated his interest into action early last week when he summoned Mr. Eccles to Hyde Park.

Taber Praises Roosevelt for Calling Congress to Act for Agriculture.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 10.—On the eve of the special session of Congress to enact permanent farm legislation, Louis J. Taber, of Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, suggested today ten basic principles, which he told delegates to the annual convention should be contained in any workable agricultural program.

Commending President Roosevelt for calling the special session, which is to convene Monday, in ample time for Congressmen to give statesmanlike study to the subject, Taber said that "Congress, in redeeming its pledge to pass such a law, should give full play to the processes of democracy, of discussion, of elimination, of compromise and of approach to a sound, workable program."

Parity for Agriculture.

Basic principles suggested by Taber:

1. It should seek to increase the farmer's share of the Nation's income and give to agriculture parity of income.

2. It should be built on voluntary co-operation, rather than a governmental straightjacket. It should provide for continuing farmer control.

3. It should grant basic exemptions and give maximum benefits to the family-sized farm, placing as much of the regulation as possible on commercial and large-unit operators.

4. The legislation should contain a sound framework for a long-time land policy; provide for retirement of submarginal land, and increase of forestry, water and wild-life resources.

5. It should be built around the soil conservation act, with benefits going to all farmers who follow good soil practices.

Crop Loans Included.

6. The program must be sufficiently flexible to protect the interests of all sections and give special assistance to surplus and export crops.

7. The American market must be guaranteed to the American farmer to the limit of his ability to supply efficiently the needs of the consuming public.

8. Loans for crop storage on farms should be provided and funds for the surplus commodity corporation increased. Marketing agreements should be strengthened.

9. A larger amount of tariff revenue should be set aside for research to find new uses for farm products, new plants and new crops and to equalize prices.

10. The program must consider the Federal Treasury and protect the interests of the ultimate consumer. It must be workable and constitutional.

Corn Forecast Raised.

By the Associated Press.

Federal experts increased their estimate of this year's corn crop by 89,000,000 bushels yesterday in a report which probably will be used by Administration officials as an argument for new production control legislation.

The Crop Reporting Board predicted the corn harvest would total 2,651,593,000 bushels, the largest since 1932 and 73 per cent larger than last year's short crop. The prospective yield would exceed the five-year average for 1929-34 by 96,761,000 bushels.

Government economists expressed belief that the crop would prove considerably larger than domestic and export requirements.

Shortly after the corn forecast appeared, Secretary Wallace told a press conference he did not consider it likely the Government would offer similar loans to those on corn in an attempt to bolster wheat prices.

Bankruptcy Takes Historic G. O. P. Club in Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Hamilton Club, a Republican citadel for two generations, surrendered today to bankruptcy.

Directors conferred with Liquidating Trustee Fred E. Hummel. Club President Oscar E. Carlstrom said he had "400 loyal men as an embryo" for a new organization.

Every Republican President since William McKinley has been a guest of the club and every Republican Governor of Illinois since 1892 has been a member.

Prohibition issues split club opinion in the middle '20s. Officers searched lockers, and serving of "setups" was banned.

The bankruptcy plea listed obligations of about $1,500,000. Its membership was currently around 900, less than a third of its peak in 1924.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 10.—The Western Maryland Employes Association has been selected by secret vote to represent all seven crafts of the Western Maryland Railway Co. The results of the election held by the National Mediation Board to certify who would represent the maintenance of equipment department employes on that system resulted in the association receiving 70 per cent of the vote.

Hatch in Favor Of 'Mechanical' Court Changes

Head of Recess Inquiry May Ask 11 Justices; Shuns Party Fight.

Abandonment of the party-splitting court fight of last session and substitution of "purely mechanical" masures to improve the administration of justice was favored yesterday by Senator Carl A. Hatch, New Mexico Democrat.

Hatch, author of the Administration's court plan compromise of last session, who has been directing a recess Senate investigation of the Federal court structure, said revival of the court battle would be "unfortunate."

He favored appointment of new Federal judges to speed up clogged dockets in some judicial circuits, possible submission of constitutional amendments on retirement of aged judges, and geographic representation of circuits on the Supreme bench.

D. C. Circuit Favored.

Hatch, who with other members of House and Senate Judicial Committees has passed the summer studying circuit court conditions, recommended designation of the District of Columbia as an eleventh court circuit.

"For practical purposes, the District already comprises a circuit. The courts here do as much or more work than any one of the other ten circuits, and the volume of Government litigation here is increasing."

Hatch may renew his proposal of a constitutional amendment to increase the size of the Supreme Court permanently to a fixed number of 11 judges, with each of the ten present circuits represented geographically.

Wants Fair Deal Here.

"If we do this, that would leave the District of Columbia not represented, and there is no reason it should not be counted as a circuit. It would be unfair to jurists here to say they could never serve on the highest court, under a geographic system of appointments, unless named as chief justice."

Hatch said he may propose legislation designating the District as a circuit, whether or not the constitutional amendment is proffered.

He said he was not particularly interested in geographic appointments to the court, believing it might narrow the field for selecting the best legal talent. But several amendments are before the Senate Judiciary Committee proposing the change.

Committee Meets Soon.

Hatch said the special Senate judiciary committee which has been investigating court conditions will meet shortly after the special session convenes, for pooling of information. He predicted early consideration of the need of new lower court judges to speed up judicial processes.

Hatch believes there will be little opposition to a constitutional amendment providing for voluntary retirement of justices at 70 and compulsory retirement at 75.

Bland Will Call House Group For Study of Shipping Evils

Committee Head Agrees With Maritime Commissioner's Report Attacking 'Disgraceful' Labor Conditions in Merchant Marine.

Representative Schuyler Otis Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, said yesterday he would call the committee together soon to consider legislative remedies for "chaotic conditions" in the American merchant marine.

He said he agreed with the United States Maritime Commission that the labor situation in the merchant marine was "disgraceful."

In the last session, Bland introduced a bill to set up a maritime mediation board modeled after the Railway Labor Board. He said yesterday that he didn't think the committee would report his bill to the House, at least in its present form, because a number of changes appeared necessary.

The Maritime Commission recommended that such a board be established. It also suggested a plan for the training of 500 American youths each year for service in the merchant marine.

Board Plan Urged.

These two, together with a recommendation that the development of transatlantic passenger service by flying boats be placed under the Maritime Commission, were expected to produce most of the reaction to the commission's report.

In New York representatives of the groups most affected by the commission's report, ship owners, sailors and airlines, declined to comment until they had studied the report.

A spokesman for the National Maritime Union, C. I. O. affiliate, said the committee was at work "on a report of our own." The district committee of the union, he said, realized that the report of the Maritime Commission was an important one, and wished to withhold public comment "until our own ideas are clearly thought out."

Aviation officials declined direct comment on the Maritime Commission's recommendation that transatlantic air service be placed under its wing, saying they would wait until the issuance of a supplemental report dealing exclusively with aviation.

Strike Settled.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Furness-Bermuda Line today announced settlemetn of a one-day strike against two of its ships after a conference with representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association. The ships affected were the Queen of Bermuda and the Nerissa.

Uniform Fines Backed by N. Y. Traffic Judge

Chief Magistrate Assails Delays in Prosecution at Safety Seminar.

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 10.—Advocating uniform fines and penalties—applied rigidly and impartially by local courts—and striking at long delayed prosecutions as "disastrous," Jacob Gould Schurman, jr., chief magistrate of New York, today described traffic courts as key weapons in the struggle to combat highway casualties.

Speaking to 50 newspapermen gathered in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for a third session of the Commercial Investment Trust Seminar of Safety, Schurman said he agreed with a plan submitted recently by Washington's Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran to adopt uniform penalties as a measure for equal justice in all traffic cases.

At the same time, Schurman attacked another projected plan in Washington to establish a separate traffic court with a permanent presiding judge. Experiments in this city, he said, indicated that uniform fines—retaining the system of rotating judges in traffic court—were more feasible than a separate unit.

700,000 Cases in Year.

The volume of traffic business in magistrate's courts here, Schurman declared, "staggers the imagination." He predicted a total of 700,000 cases before the end of this year, bringing revenue in fines exceeding $1,200,000. These figures, he added, are more than double the volume in 1934.

nlike other urban centers, Schurman reported, speed offenses in New York form but 2 per cent of court cases. Parking violations, he said, contribute 50 per cent of the business, with signal-light infractions forming 25 per cent.

He surprised his listeners by announcing that only about 1,500 cases of drunken driving reach his court annually and comprise but about .3 of 1 per cent of the traffic offenses.

Sentences Suspended.

In 1934, when Schurman was first appointed a magistrate, he said approximately one-half of all serious offenses brought suspended sentences. One magistrate, he said, was suspending penalties in 95 per cent of all cases he tried.

Through relentless publicity and a revision of the system, however, suspended sentences dropped so that now less than 2 per cent of major cases are treated with such lendency.

Schurman also scoffed at Washington's system of permitting recommendations from the corporation counsel before a case is presented in court.

The Seminar heard William J. White, assistant to Charles Hartnett, New York commissioner of motor vehicles, who discussed problems of registering and licensing automobiles.

The policy of suspending permits for first-offense speed offenses, adopted last year by District Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, was described by White as "a bit drastic, but nevertheless effective."

Local Debate Set.

Washington traffic and its increasing problems will be the subject of a discussion at the weekly luncheon today of the Central District Business Association at the Harrington Hotel at 12:30, when George Kenelpp, general manager of the Keystone Automobile Association, will be the guest speaker.

The traffic problems now confronting motorists and pedestrians of Washington will be freely presented, said A. M. Manning, executive secretary of the business association, and Kenelpp's talk will be principally directed toward a possible solution. Hugh V. Kelser will preside.

Closed Shop Ruled Legal in New York

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Justice Mitchell May of the Brooklyn Supreme Court ruled today that the closed shop is constitutional in New York State and denied the request of six subway employes that they not be forced to join a union to hold their jobs.

The workers, claiming the closed shop violated their constitutional rigth to earn livelihoods, brought suit to enjoin the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. and the Transport Workers Union of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, from enforcing the agreement under which certain employes will be discharged unless they are union members by tonight.

Dr. Harris Will Speak.

The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry M. E. Church, will address the weekly luncheon of the Washington Round Table at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Cosmos Club. Dr. Harris, who recently returned from Europe, will tell some of the experiences of his trip. William A. Edeblut will preside.

Pomp, Ceremony and Beauty Mark Apple Harvest Festival in Martinsburg

Heralding the opening of Martinsburg's third annual apple harvest festival, Mary Jane Irvin (below) sounds trumpet. To the right (lower) the king's coach and six white horses approach while approximately 8,000 spectators applaud. And, of course, the reasons for this impressive West Virginia pageant, about 10,000 apples (upper), also are pictured with two young men sprawled atop.

Millions of Red Apples Flood Market With Mosaic of Color

175,000 Bushels Fill Warehouses as Heavy Windfalls Resulting From Frosts and Rain Drive Prices Down to 40-65 Cents.

What seemed to be enough apples to hold at bay all the doctors in the world were to be seen yesterday in the Farmers' Southwest Market, making huge mosaics of red, white and pink over the pavement under the big shed, hiding the broccoli, spinach and pumpkins in the shadow of row on row of applebaskets.

More and more apples, mostly from down Winchester way, were arriving in truckloads. In the big Terminal Warehouse across the street, 175,000 bushels, making a good many million apples in all, had been stored.

Two factors, market men said, were responsible for the big aple invasion. First, the bumper crop and, secondly, the winds, frosts and rains last month, which kept pickers from the orchards and vastly increased the proportion of windfalls, sending down the price for slightly dented Winesaps, York Imperials, Ben Davises, Black Twig and Rome Beauties to from 40 to 65 cents a bushel, retail.

But another good freeze, according to Royce Wareham, foreman in charge of apple storage at the Terminal warehouse, will about clean up the windfalls and open the market for choicer pickings. By Christmas, Wareham thinks, good 3-inch Staymans should be fetching anywhere from $1.74 to $2.25. However, for purposes of immediate consumption, he admitted, a windfall apple makes perhaps "better eating" than the fancy storage apples, picked hard and not yet fully ripened.

The storage apples, Wareham said, will take over the market toward the end of December. By January they start moving out the Jonathans and Grimes Goldens, which don't keep as well as some other varieties.

The Staymans and Black Twigs are cleaned out by April 15, but the old-fashioned Winesaps last until the summer apples come, about July 1. Even then, a few Winesaps are held over for the luxury trade. The Rome Beauty, prince of pie apples, lasts through March and April, said Wareham, but hardy old Delicious lasts al the way from Christmas until June.

Roosevelt Sets Up Body to Spur Home Building

Aim of Group Is to Get Private Capital for Vast Program.

Isador Lubin, Commisioner of Labor Statistics.

Appointment of the group a week ago was kept secret until yesterday, even though it held a preliminary meeting here Tuesday and yesterday morning. Even after the session with the President there was a reluctance to discuss the committee's task. All members of the group referred inquirers to Eccles and he in turn made only an oral, perfunctory statement. No word came from the President.

"This group of men was brought in as a committee to discuss a housing program that would involve the use entirely of private capital," Eccles asserted. "It is our hope to be able to develop a program that will be national in scope for the purpose of getting a larger volume of housing construction next year."

Federal Loans Barred.

Having uttered that brief explanation, Eccles was reluctant to say more and declined to state what had transpired with the President, except to emphasize that neither Government expenditures nor loans were involved and to say that the group would return for further conferences. In reply to questions, he said that the group was concerned with both large and small housing projects, but not with industrial or commercial construction.

From other quarters, however, it was learned that the selection of this committee and the assignment to the task of seeking to facilitate housing construction by private entrepreneurs with private capital now idle, including the funds of small investors, marked a new and determined effort on the President's part to revive lagging residential building.

The White House meeting was not as casual as it appeared on the surface. This undertaking was decided on by the President and Eccles at Hyde Park early last week. The difficulties of the problem have been under survey by Government housing authorities for many months, and eventually would have come to a head. The present industrial recession, however, spurred the New Deal's efforts to stimulate private housing construction activities.

Studies Began Last Spring.

Eccles, Lubin and Daiger have been occupied with the problem of reviving private housing construction ever since last spring, but at that time the President apparently was indifferent to their efforts and the emphasis on Capitol Hill was on a Government-financed housing program, as provided by the Wagner act, which authorizes expenditure of $500,000,000 for that purpose during the next three years.

The President first gave an indication that he regarded this program as inadequate last summer, when he discussed the subject of rising rents and a developing housing shortage with his so-called "human needs" committee. Subsequently, Eccles, Daiger, Lubin and Charles E. Merriam, of the National Resources Committee, prepared and sent to Capitol Hill a series of proposed amendments to the national housing act which, through the FHA, provides Government insurance for certain types of residential mortgage loans. These were described in some detail in The Washington Post on August 18 last.

These proposals, however, were submitted in the closing days of the last session of Congress, when the rush for adjournment was on. The House Banking and Currency Committee gave them, it is understood, only perfunctory consideration and voted them down, 10 to 8. Subsequently, several Democratic members of the committee learned they had Administration approval and they were offered in the House as a rider to the Wagner act, but were ruled out on a point of order, as not germane to a public housing bill.

Congress to Get Proposals.

It is understood that these amendments, substantially as they were submitted last August, will be proposed in the special session of Congress by Senator Robert F. Wagner and Representative Henry B. Steagall, respectively chairman of the Senate and House Banking and Currency committees. An effort for prompt action will be made.

These amendments include several technical changes in the present law regarded as highly important by the experts. The major changes, if made, would fall into two categories. As the act now stands, the FHA has power to assure mortgages of individuals up to only $16,000 on dwellings for not more than four families, except that it also may insure larger mortgages of limited dividend corporation and public-housing authorities.

It is proposed to amend the act so that the FHA would have authority to insure mortgages of private individuals up to 80 per cent of the value of newly constructed multi-family dwellings up to $200,000, subject to a cost limitation per room. This is designed to make insurance available for the financing of comparatively small apartment houses of the "walk-up" (without elevator) type which could be rented to persons of moderate incomes.

The second set of major amendments would permit the "national mortgage associations" provided for in the FHA act to make insured loans to limited dividend corporations and public housing authorities. This change is designed to facilitate financing for a much larger type of project, one costing $800,000 or $1,000,000.

At present, the "national mortgage associations" provided for by the act are restricted to purchase and sale of mortgages made by other institutions. They have no authority to originate loans. This fact as well as the limitation on the right of such associations to issue debentures (it is now limited to 12 times their capital) are given as reasons why no such associations have been organized.

It is proposed to increase the debenture-issuing power of these associations to 20 times the amount of their capital and to permit them to make direct loans, but only to limited dividend corporations and public housing authorities. This would not put them in competition with other financial institutions, it is held, but it would make the associations a new financial mechanism through which individuals and small investors could channel their savings and surplus funds directly into long-term amortized mortgages on large housing projects.

Since only the large institutions are in a position to make loans of approximately $1,000,000 on housing projects, there is a need for that kind of financing, it is held.

Efforts to have these changes in the law adopted will be made as soon as Congress returns. Further amendments to the Federal insurance and housing legislation may also be suggested later on by the President's new committee. When that group will meet again has not been determined, but in the meanwhile members of the committee will be engaged in seeking solutions to some of the problems in the housing field.

Model Homes Planned.

New Orleans, Nov. 10 (AP).—The National Lumber Manufacturers Association, meeting here today, mapped plans to help the average citizen buy a low-priced home.

Officers said the association would build eight model houses in Washington, D. C., to show that attractive and comfortable homes can be built at from $2,000 to $5,000, including the cost of the lot.

Plans of these homes will be available to dealers who, in turn, will make them available to prospective home builders.

He was released unharmed after payment of a $40,000 ransom.

Malina said papers found on Sanders showed he had spent approximately $20,000 in California and had more than $5,000 on deposit.

Newton Baker Sees Peril Of Second World War

Cleveland, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, on the eve of the armistice anniversary, tonight called on America to use its position among world powers to maintain peace against a second world conflict.

The World War Secretary saw "both in Europe and Asia a contest to determine anew who shall dominate the earth."

General Taxes May Be Used To Finance Crop Program

These members feel that a separate tax bill should be drafted by the Ways and Means Committee, covering the new revenues into the general funds of the Treasury, from which farm appropriations would be made.

This strategy was followed in financing the railway retirement act, following invalida on. But proponents of the direct processing tax argue that social security act taxes were validated by the court, and these were not levied in a separate measure.

Jones Ready to Accede.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture committee, has favored inclusion of processing taxes, by another name, in the farm bill, but Senate farm bill draftsmen have urged a separate tax measure. At yesterday's conference, Jones indicated he would insist on inclusion of the levies in his own measure.

In its tentative form, the House farm bill proposes processing taxes on cotton, corn, wheat and rice. They would not be included in the more compulsory tobacco program, which imposes instead a 50 per cent penalty tax on excess quota production.

Spokesmen for corn and cotton farmers yetserday opened an attack on the processing tax method. Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, of South Carolina, chairman of the cotton subcommittee, opposed processing excises, and favored instead an 8-cent-a-pound tariff on jute imports, which he estimated would yield about $80,000,000 annually.

Process Tax Opposed.

Another member of the cotton subcommittee, Representative Harold D. Cooley, of North Carolina, said inclusion of a cotton-processing tax in the farm bill might jeopardize constitutionality. He favored separate action by the Ways and Means Committee.

Members from corn-growing States opposed processing taxes on that commodity. Chairman Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Agriculture Committee, said only 10 per cent of the corn crop is processed, and revenues would be inadequate. He opposed alternative processing taxes on hogs, or other livestock, for which corn is a feed crop.

Members of the Ways and Means Committee, now drafting a general tax-revision bill, indicated that in no event would farm taxes be included in the general measure. The President and the committee are committed to not raising the total amount of taxes in this measure.

The Principal Alternative.

Opposition to consumer taxes (of the processing type) is widespread and recently has been reflected in statements of Administration officials. The principal alternative, if general taxation is resorted to, may be that of dipping more deeply into the income tax structure for revenues.

Although no full estimates are available on cost of the farm plan, it will include the $500,000,000 soil conservation and probably more than $200,000,000 to finance the additional ever normal granary features.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace at his press conference yesterday said the program for wheat and corn would cost at least $200,000,000, plus soil conservation benefit payments. He said there would be in addition a possible loss on loans.

Educators Pay Horace Mann High Tribute

Dr. Johnson, of Howard U., Places Him in Same Rank as Lincoln.

Educators and legislators joined last night to pay tribute to Horace Mann, "father of American education," as the climax of the year's observance of the Horace Mann centennial.

The program, held in the Departmental Auditorium, was under joint sponsorship of the Department of Interior, Office of Education, and the National Education Association.

The great educator, who gave up his law books and prosperous practice in Massachusetts to accept the position of secretary of the Massachusetts State board of education 100 years ago, was paid tribute by Payson Smith, professor of education, Howard University; Mordecai Johnson, president, Howard University, and Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah.

Dr. Smith, former commissioner of education in Massachusetts and chairman of the Horace Mann Centennial Committee of the N. E. A., stated that Horace Mann's greatest contribution to civilization was the establishment of free universal public schools.

"We are apt to think of Horace Mann as only a great educator," Dr. Smith said, "but he was more than that; he was a reformer.

Horace Mann was responsible for the transformation of the school from what it had been, an agency of the Puritan Church, to an agency of all people toward the betterment and enlightenment of all people," he stated.

A great number of Mann's fundamental principles in education still remain unheeded, but American education will eventually capture them, Smith said.

Calling Horace Mann the Negro's greatest friend for his work in establishing schools for the slaves, Dr. Mordecai Johnson placed him in the same category with Abraham Lincoln.

Senator Thomas, speaking on "Education and the Future of American Democracy," said that the bases of American education are the profound and admirable principles set by Horace Mann.

Attorney for Ross Will Not Protest Faulty Indictment

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 10.—Judge Frederick W. Coleman would not comment tonight on the prospect of a new grand jury session for Walter L. Ross, under arrest for the killing of Elmer J. Davidson, Washington lawyer, following discovery that the indictment returned Monday is inaccurate.

The indictment names "Walter J." Ross as the man charged with the murder instead of Walter L. Ross, 17-year-old Marine. Judge Coleman said the matter was a judicial one and that he had not had time to give it consideration. Frank P. Moncure, attorney for Ross, said the defense would consent to revision of the indictment.

Commonwealth's Attorney G. B. Wallace said he did not regard the difference in name as vital. Should Judge Coleman require a new grand jury, Mr. Wallace said, this could be provided without delaying the trial set for December 1. Ross' father is Walter J. Ross.

THIS YOUNG MAN

MAY SOON BE BALD

True, he now has a good head of hair. But he knows that he is rapidly losing it, because each morning his comb and brush are filled with fallen hair. His scalp is covered with scaly, sticky dandruff, and it itches constantly. He has tried to ward off baldness by dousing his hair with miscellaneous "cure-all" lotions, but has concluded that they merely make his hair fall faster.

Unless he takes immediate steps to find out exactly what is causing his loss of hair, he'll surely soon be bald. Please tell him, for his sake, that Thomas effectively treats 1600 cases similar to his each day; that Thomas has helped a quarter-million other men to avoid baldness, and can help him, too.

A Thomas scalp specialist will gladly examine his scalp (without charge) and determine exactly which of the 14 local scalp disorders are attacking his hair-growing structure. The reliable, 17-year proved Thomas treatment will then be directed to overcoming those scalp troubles, and almost before he realizes it his abnormal hair-fall will stop; dandruff will disappear; and new hair will start to grow on the thin and bald spots. Why not come in TODAY for a free comprehensive scalp examination?

"I set a DETECTIVE on the trail of a truly great whiskey"

HE SAID

"You say Four Roses has every virtue I could hope to find in a whiskey? Brother, you've got to say more than that to convince me any whiskey's that good!"

I SAID

"Yes? Well, suppose all the picked men in your department could be fused into one man. What would you expect him to be?"

HE SAID

"Scotland Yard on two feet."

I SAID

"Admit that and you've got to admit that Four Roses is a truly magnificent whiskey.

"For to achieve Four Roses we take several selected straight whiskies—each notable for some special quality such as aroma, body, flavor, or smoothness.

"And we combine these several whiskies (and nothing but whiskey!) so as to blend the virtues of them all in one liquor greater than any one of these separate whiskies could possibly be alone.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Brussels Parley Delays Session For Tokyo Note

Reply Expected Friday to 2d Invitation; Rejection Again Feared.

By the Associated Press.

Bussels, Nov. 10.—Further sessions of the Brussels conference were deferred until Saturday after advices from Tokyo today that Japan had not yet decided whether to participate.

The Japanese cabinet was expected to draft a decision on the conference's second invitation at a meeting Friday night. It rejected a first invitation to enter the deliberations seeking a peace formula for the Far East.

Informed sources here expected that Japan's answer might again be a flat refusal.

If it is negative, a spokesman said, conference leaders intended to draw up a report stressing the necessity for strengthening international law.

The exchange of views would be entirely hypothetical, he said, adding that there would be no discussion of possible sanctions against Japan.

Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation, conferred for more than an hour with Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister.

Delbos and Eden also were said to have discussed Italy's adherence to the German-Japanese anticommunist pact.

Delegations speculated whether the new Brazilian constitution implied a Brazilian step toward the totalitarian policy of Portugal and whether Brazil would join the group of so-called "totalitarian states."

resisting the Japanese south and east of the French Concession.

A spokesman for Japanese Commander Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui also announced that Japanese airplanes yesterday again bombed the airdrome and other military centers in Nanking.

The situation in Shanghai was tense. A Japanese gunboat rushed through Whangpoo River barricades off the French Concession and reached the water front wharves in Nantao.

During lively gun battle between the warship and the Chinese the Italian cruiser Monte Cuocoli was peppered with bullets.

Despite China's disastrous defeats at Shanghai and in the North, there still was no sign that the Chinese "will to resist" was cracking or that Dictator Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was having any trouble in preserving his all-China anti-Japanese front.

Hence, the Chinese believed, the Japanese army has decided that it must continue its mass attacks despite the fact it now has won its territorial objectives.

The Chinese army spokesman said 34 Japanese troop transports carrying veteran Japanese regular army units from North China entered Hangchow Bay. The transports were estimated to carry about 50,000 men.

It was believed this Japanese force would drive immediately toward Hangchow as part of a scheme to flank the great Chinese "Hindenburg line" in the Soochow lakes region west of Shanghai.

Prime purpose of Lieut. Gen. Matsui is to smash the bulk of the German-trained divisions of the Chinese army massed between Shanghai and Nanking. Once these divisions are crushed, Gen. Matsui believes the all-China front will fall apart.

To prevent the Chinese from rushing up reinforcements from the south, the Japanese navy resumed bombarding Chinese coastal towns, including Amoy.

Japanese Have 250,000.

Chinese believed the triple drive on their "Hindenburg line"—last major defence of Nanking—will be launched at once.

The army spokesman said Gen. Matsui now has more than 250,000 men in the Shanghai-Hangchow area, compared to about 400,000 for the Chinese.

Foreign military attaches believed Gen. Matsui now has the men and mechanized weapons with which to make good his threat to crush the leaders of China.

The general military situation today was:

In North China the Chinese said they had launched a violent counter-attack from north of the Yellow River on the Peiping-Hankow Railway toward the strategic Chengchow-Shihchiachwang Railway area. If the Chinese could win back this area it would cut Japan's supply line from south central Hopei Province.

The Japanese were completing their occupation of all Shansi Province following the capture of the provincial capital, Taiyuanfu. Their main army in Shansi was driving rapidly south of Taiyuanfu toward Tungchow, military key to Shensi and Kansu provinces.

In the Shanghai area the Japanese had increased the length of their irregular line to more than 100 miles.

Military experts said that if the Chinese have adequate munitions and if their morale is still good the impending battle near Shanghai may be one of the greatest ever fought in the Orient—equally or surpassing the battle of Mukden in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05.

Wang Adheres to League.

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—Dr. Cheng-ting T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, tonight declared his country, as a loyal member of the League of Nations, was ready to have any controversy with Japan "adjusted by peaceful means and in accordance with essential justice."

Dr. Wang spoke at an Armistice eve banquet of the International Goodwill Congress. Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, in a prepared address at the same meeting, said it would be difficult for this nation to remain neutral in time of war.

D. C. Girl, Now Roman Countess, Met Husband Here as 'Mister'

Mr. and Mrs. Luigi Savelli henceforth will be known as the Count and Countess, according to reports from Rome, where the couple is visiting at present. Mrs. Savelli, the former Nancy Hall, of this city, married Savelli while he was a student at American University.

Former Nancy Hall Writes Mother of Gay Whirl of Parties as Bride in Ancient Family; Meets Ex-Queen of Spain.

Only a few days before her wedding day the former Nancy Hall, then a secretary for the Foreign Policy Association here, discovered the man she was to marry was a member of the Italian nobility and that the union would make her a contessa.

The story of the romance of the 20-year-old secretary and Count Luigi Giannuzzi Savelli, whom the girl met and knew as plain Mr. Savelli, a graduate student at American University, was told for the first time yesterday by her mother, Mrs. Raymond G. Church, 2328 Thirty-seventh street northwest.

The ceremony was performed June 4. Only a few days before, Mrs. Church said, her daughter learned she was marrying into a noble Italian family. Mrs. Church said she was informed of her son-in-law's status a few minutes before the ceremony. The license was issued to "Mr." Savelli and Miss Hall. Announcements of the marriage carried the same names.

The young couple met while the count, an exchange student from Rome, was living at the International Student House, 1708 New Hampshire avenue northwest, where Miss Hall attended a social function.

Mrs. Church yesterday had a letter from her daughter. It told of being entertained by the Infanta Beatrice of Spain, exchanging greetings with the former Queen of Spain at a tennis match and a round of royal dinners in Rome.

The Contessa Savelli wrote her mother that she was learning Italian, but it really wasn't necessary, because most of her new acquaintances are proficient in English.

The couple are planning to move to Turin soon, because young Savelli's military service is due. He will be in the army's motor corps, but shouldn't have much trouble, because his uncle is a general.

Mrs. Church said last night that she was not making any immediate plans to visit her daughter.

MacDonald Burial May Be in Abbey

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—Great Britain mourned tonight the death of James Ramsay MacDonald, her first laborite prime minister.

It was expected the family of the statesman would be offered the opportunity to bury him in Westminster Abbey.

Attorney Says Ryan Doesn't Recall Wedding

tion of native corn whisky. He said Ryan's condition was such that he was unable to sign his name to the hotel register when he and his bride checked into the hotel with the baby.

He Was Sober, Says Bride.

A new factor was thrown into the case tonight with an admission from Burke County's woman sheriff, Mrs. Nina C. Ross, that she has held for "several weeks" a paternity warrant against Ned A. Parks, 21, Morganton clothing store clerk who disappeared more than a month ago. The warrant, the sheriff said, was issued on complaint of Miss Barkley.

In a statement tonight, replying to Bagley, the bride declared her husband was "entirely sober prior to and after the wedding."

Ryan remained secluded in a Hickory hospital which he had entered Friday morning a few hours after the marriage before a Morganton justice of the peace. Hospital attendants refused to permit him to be interviewed.

"The statement published by the party described as Mr. Ryan's spokesman is utterly untrue and without foundation," Ryan's bride, the former Martha Barkley, of Morganton, declared.

"It is unfair to Mr. Ryan and me to slander our marriage in such a manner.

"I am sure that Ryan will verify my statement that the marriage was legal and all circumstances were discussed by us prior to the ceremony. I am sure that he wants me to say this was a matter concerning only myself and him.

"That he was entirely sober prior to and after the wedding can be substantiated by the register of deeds of Burke County who issued the license and Justice of the Peace Earl Franklin, who performed the ceremony."

Another Ryan To Wed.

Meanwhile, from New York the Associated Press reported that another grandson of Thomas Fortune Ryan, Clendenin J. Ryan, jr., will be married November 19 to Miss Jean Harder. Clendellin Ryan, 32-year-old secretary to Mayor Fiorello H. Laguardia, married the Countess Marie Anne Wurmbrand-Stuppach in 1934 but the union was annulled a year later.

Until Mrs. Ryan's statement tonight, she had secluded herself in the home of her father, W. H. Barkley, declining to see interviewers.

Earlier her father, after some hesitation, decided to discuss with reporters the question of the paternity of a son born to his daughter two months ago. Ryan, he said, is not the child's father. Barkley then added:

"I prefer not to discuss the case, but I will tell you this—there is a seduction action pending against the child's father, a man to whom my daughter formerly was engaged."

Ryan came to Hickory about two months ago. Most of his time here was spent as a volunteer assistant coach of the Lenoir-Rhyne College football team.

Ryan, 28 years old, is one of ten children of John Barry Ryan. The grandfather and founder of the Ryan fortune died in 1928, leaving an estate of approximately $140,000,000, a large portion of which passed to young Ryan's father.

HELEN WRIGHT, 3-year-old daughter of Paul Wright, airport president, and his wife, Evelyn, whom he shot to death with John B. Kimmel when he discovered them embracing.

Wife-Killer Says He Was Sterilized, Feared for Spouse

By the Associated Press.

Glendale, Calif., Nov. 10.—Paul A. Wright, 38, president of Union Air Terminal, who shot to death his wife and his best friend when, he said, he found them embracing in his home, told visitors in his jail cell today "I see their faces constantly."

Mrs. Wright and John B. Kimmel, 32, operations manager at the terminal, were shot early yesterday.

Wright asserted he underwent a sterilization operation after the birth of the couple's daughter, Jerry Geisler, his attorney, said.

"My doctor advised me another childbirth would be fatal for my wife. I couldn't stand the thought of Evelyn going down into the shadow of death again—I couldn't stand the thought of her being hurt at all," Geisler quoted him.

Belgian Quits Attempt To Form New Cabinet

Brussels, Nov. 10 (AP).—Paul H. Spaak tonight gave up his attempt to form a new cabinet.

Encountering the unwillingness of the Liberal and Catholic parties to collaborate, Spaak was released from the task by King Leopold. He was foreign minister in the government of Premier Paul van Zeeland, which recently resigned.

munist activities which were blamed for the uprising in November, 1935, President Vargas last September proclaimed a state of war, or martial law, throughout the republic.

Immediately several alleged extremists who had been freed pending their appeals to the supreme court against sentences for participation in the 1935 revolt, were ordered rearrested. Among those taken into custody was Pedro Ernesto Baptista, former Mayor of Rio de Janeiro, whose prison sentence was annulled several months ago by the high tribunal.

Under suspension of constitutional guarantees, hundreds of alleged Communists were rounded up in different parts of Brazil and opposition leaders, including Gov. J. H. Flores da Cunha of Rio Grande do Sul, fled the country.

Federal intervenors, responsible only to the President, were appointed in many States, thereby giving President Vargan tight control over a wide portion of the nation.

For several months rumors have been circulated that the constitution would be amended to permit President Vargas to succeed himself, and it was believed that, with promulgation of a new federal charter, Armando Salles de Oliveira and Jose America de Almeida would withdraw their candidacies for President. Elections were scheduled for January 3, 1938.

Vargas Stays "Indefinitely."

Buenos Aires, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—President Getulio Vargas of Brazil will remain in office "indefinitely" as head of a corporative state, under a new constitution promulgated in Brazil today, private sources in this city said.

It was announced the integralist "Green Shirts," Brazil's Fascist Party, were not taking over the government and there were no indications that Brazil would join the German - Japanese - Italian pact against communism.

Dominicans, Cubans Plan Good-Will Tour

By the Associated Press.

Dominican Legation officials said yesterday preparations had been completed for the inauguration of a joint Cuban-Dominican 20,000-mile good-will flight from their capital November 12.

They said a warm welcome awaited a Cuban squadron of three planes which would arrive in Ciudad Trujillo from Havana to join a Dominican craft in the tour of American republics.

The flight sponsored by the Cuban and Dominican governments, is intended to promote the construction, as soon as possible, of a lighthouse on Punta Torrecilla, Dominican Republic, in honor of Christopher Columbus.

Armistice Day Rites to Be Led By Roosevelt

Hon. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War.

District Commander Mason and Mrs. Dorothy D. Harper, president of the District Auxiliary, will place wreaths on the tomb. Theodore Cogswell, national chairman of the legion's Armistice Day committee, will call the exercises to order.

Among the other organizations which will hold services today at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb are the District Chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Washington High School Cadets, the Knights of Columbus, the Order of the Alhambra and the Jewish War Veterans.

Other Wreaths Scheduled.

Daniel J. Callahan, supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus, in the name of 700,000 Knights, will place a wreath on the Tomb at 10 a. m. He will be assisted by State Deputy Walter I. Plant and State Warden William A. Mulligan, of Washington; John J. Flanagan, of Baltimore, Maryland state deputy, and Thomas A. Murphy, of Richmond, Va., state deputy.

Dr. Ivy Pelzman, on behalf of the Jewish War Veterans, will place that organization's wreath at 1:30 p. m.

Later in the afternoon the "Tribute of Seven" will be presented by representatives of the Jewish Welfare Board, Salvation Army, National Catholic Welfare Conference, War Camp Community Service, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association and the American Library Association.

John M. Miller, Baltimore, supreme commander of the Order of the Alhambra, will place a wreath on the Tomb at 10:15 a. m. He will be assisted by Supreme Vizier Joseph M. McKenna and John J. Carmody, grand commander of Alcantara Caravan, Washington.

War Mothers at Capitol.

The American War Mothers will hold a commemorative service at 11 a. m. at the east front of the Capitol. Former Gov. Dave Sholtz of Florida and Mrs. Irving Fairweather, of Idaho, national president of the society, will speak. Senator William Borah will welcome Mrs. Fairweather.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and other members of the War President's family are expected to attend the cathedral services for him at 3:15 p. m. They will assemble in the Bethlehem Chapel in front of his tomb. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will conduct the service and deliver the commemorative address.

At the service immediately afterward under auspices of the Disabled American Veterans, Bishop Freeman will greet the congregation, and the address will be delivered by Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior.

Classes Out at G. W. U.

National and local officers of the veterans will march in the procession. Music will be furnished by the Cathedral Choir, assisted by the United States Marine Band.

George Washington University will hold a convocation at 11 a. m. Ten o'clock classes will be dismissed at 10:55 and 11 o'clock classes delayed until 11:15, so all students may attend. Dr. William Crane Johnstone, jr., associate professor of political science and dean of the junior college, will address the meeting in Room 10, Corcoran Hall.

The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, minister of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Connecticut avenue and N street northwest, will preach at an Armistice Day service at 5 p. m. in the church. Dr. McCartney will read excerpts from his pamphlet, "The Unknown Soldier Wakes and Walks Again."

Georgetown Plans Tribute.

At Georgetown University the student body will honor memory of the first American to enlist for combat service in the World War, Dennis F. Dowd, jr., of New York, a former Georgetown student who gave his life in France. Assembling in the Hilltop quadrangle at 11:30 a. m., students also will pay tribute to 54 Georgetown men killed in the war. The service was requested and arranged by the student body.

Col. Jesse C. Drain, U. S. A., head of the R. O. T. C., will deliver an address to the Unknown Soldier and the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., university president, will give the benediction.

A graduate with the class of 1908, Dowd left his home at Sea Cliffe, Long Island, six days after war was declared in 1914 and went direct to Paris. He was killed nearly a year before America entered the war.

Woodrings, Envoys Sponsors.

The Cosmopolitan Club will observe the day at its luncheon meeting at the Carlton Hotel. The Rev. W. J. Parsons, professor of history at Georgetown University, will speak.

Besides the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, patrons and honor guests at the Veterans of Foreign Wars ball at the Willard will include the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay, the Ministers of Denmark, Norway, the Dominican Republic and the Irish Free State, Senators Robert J. Bulkley, Walter F. George and Morris Shepherd. Joan Bennett, motion picture star, has been invited.

Boake Carter, radio commentator, and Sayre M. Ramsdell, vice president of Philco Radio and Television Corporation, will visit Walter Reed Hospital and present a radio to veterans there, the ceremony to be witnessed by Secretary of War Woodring.

Which Is President Roosevelt?

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.

By Scott Hart.

A flat proposal that the National Park Special Police, who function under the Department of the Interior, be organized into a separate unit is made by a member of the force, Joseph Piggott, who claims he sees a saving thereby and has written Representative Matthew A. Dunn to push a bill to effect the change.

"On October 20 I mailed a draft of a proposed bill to the President of the United States, asking him to reorganize the National Park Special Police . . . into a separate and independent unit to be known as the United States Public Buildings Police. This organization would function similarly to any regiment in the United States Army. If this bill is passed, it would save the taxpayers about $110,000," wrote Piggott to the Representative. "This," he said, "would do away with a great deal of overhead expense as (many of the positions involved in the change) could be filled by the men of the guard force." Which is something else for Congressional consideration.

George Babcock, management expert of REA, will address the class in administrative management in the South Agriculture Building auditorium at 5 p. m. tomorrow. Before coming to Washington, Col. Babcock was factory manager for an automobile company. He is a member of the Society for Advancement of Management and a writer on administrative subjects. . . . The Fetracom social and welfare club, of the Federal Trade Commission, will hold its annual election tomorrow night and open its social season with a dance in the commission hearing room. The nominating committee has returned three slates. Running for president are S. D. Mayers, incumbent; Clyde M. Hadley and Edward R. Pruner. Other candidates are: For vice president, Miles J. Furnas, Hulda D. Jackson and Andrew N. Ross; for treasurer, Helen M. Drawbaugh, incumbent, and Don B. Gatling; for secretary, Helen S. Edmiston, Margaret F. Harden and Genevieve G. Meehan; and for social secretary, Elizabeth Rundle, Mildred A. Albright and Nettie M. Dawson. From a list of 21 candidates an executive board of 6 will be elected. Polls will be open tomorrow from 9 to 4:30 o'clock.

Progress.

Luther Steward's National Federation of Federal Employes reports "great progress" in a Nation-wide membership campaign that was given the spur by the recent national convention in Springfield. Speaking for the organization, Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally says:

"The campaign has started splendidly. Our aim has been to enlist the co-operation of each one of our local unions and the entire present membership in this drive. It is becoming increasingly clear to all eligible Federal employes that the N. F. F. E. with its record of 20 years of unparalleled accomplishment, its sane, orderly, democratic methods and its complete freedom from outside subsidy or dictation, is pre-eminently the organization best fitted to carry on to future progress." Which sounds like some comparisons are being made.

But the large N. F. F. E., the largest of any Government group, reports some progress on its own lines. Three new locals have been chartered, namely: No. 619 Fort Knox, Ky.; No. 620, Flagstaff, Ariz., and No. 621, Fresno, Calif.

Nuckols Group Claims Lack of Gaming Proof

To Move Directed Verdict at Completion of Case. by Prosecution.

A determined bid to have Justice Jesse C. Adkins quash an indictment charging Carroll P. (Nubby) Nuckols and six others with violation of the District's gaming laws will to be made in District Court today by Attorney Harry T. Whelan, defense attorney, upon expected conclusion of prosecution testimony.

Samuel F. Beach, assistant United States attorney, stated last night he had seven more witnesses to place on the stand, following which, he said, he would rest the Government's case. At that time, Whelan, William Gallagher and William B. O'Connell, all of whom represent the defendants, expect to move for a directed verdict of not guilty on the allegation the Government has failed to prove any of the seven were directly connected with operation of an alleged gaming establishment at 1230 Fourteenth street northwest.

In testimony yesterday, several policemen testified they were ordered to Camp Simms, rifle range for the National Guard, where they were handed sealed orders for the raids. Some 65 places were eventually raided and 200 persons arrested.

The raiders yesterday produced a radio and telephone hook-ups which they said they confiscated when they entered the Fourteenth street place.

Other defendants besides Nuckols are George W. Godfrey, Anthony T. Costello, Moe Morganstein, Harry C. Adams, Robert A. Murray and Lawrence F. Pisani.

Forum to Hear Artist.

Miss Louise W. Blackwell, artist and sculptor, of Wilson, N. C., will address the Civic National Forum at 6:30 p. m. Sunday at the Whitelaw Hotel, Thirteenth and T streets northwest.

War Veterans Still Fighting— This Time Disease Is Enemy

Men in Mount Alto Battle Ravages of 1918; Shrapnel Wounds, Weak Hearts, Spine Injuries Are 1937 Foes.

Nineteen years ago this morning the cannon ceased their firing, but thousands of disabled veterans in Washington and elsewhere still have poignant reminders. Technically, the conflict has been over nearly a full generation, but battles are still being fought daily by Andrew Bradley and Daniel Engle and Mrs. Esther Buck and John W. Thomas and their 52,000 hospitalized comrades.

Their enemies are stubborn shrapnel wounds, heart fluttering, spinal injuries that refuse to heal and other ailments that call for just as dogged a fight as a flank attack ever did.

Andrew Bradley, 43, of Selma, N. C., has been fighting the handicap caused by a shrapnel-filled left leg ever since September 29, 1918, when a shell burst near him as his outfit was advancing. He hasn't been able to hold a regular job since. He is in Mount Alto Hospital, but hopes they'll be abel to send him back to his wife and three children a well man.

Luckily, he has a brother who is helping support his family back home in Selma. Would he go through it again?

"I sure would, if I was physically fit," he replies.

A still more ironical case is that of Thomas R. Lee who machine-gunned at 7 o'clock on the morning of November 11, 1918, lost his left leg, although up to that time he had gone unscratched.

"If I had it to do over again, I'd want to be on the front line," he says.

Many persons do not realize that Mount Alto Hospital has women patients, as well as men, under treatment for service-connected injuries. One of them is Mrs. Esther Buck, who has been gallantly grappling with an asthmatic condition ever since her honorable discharge as a Navy yeomanette.

She did not go overseas. She did secretarial work in the Naval Intelligence, but shortly after her enlistment she began to experience a strange kind of respiratory trouble.

Her husband had joined up and gone to France and when he returned he was the fit one and she the semi-invalid, under treatment ever since.

Hospitalized veterans play cards, read, listen to the radio, collect stamps, write letters—anything but discuss their war experiences with one another. Just the same, many a headphone will be tuned in today on the ceremonies in Arlington. That is one of their few concessions to a chapter in their past they would like to forget.

Liquor Store 'Spies' Nearly Earn Salaries

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury said Tuesday the 800 relief workers who have been inspecting liquor stores for the last two years have nearly paid for themselves.

The workers reported 103,308 violations out of 1,003,000 inspections, bringing the Treasury $1,780,646 in fines. The cost of the inspectors was $1,936,158.

Pepco Applies For 5-Million New Bond Issue

Funds Sought to Repay Its Treasury for 1926 Outlays.

The Potomac Electric Power Co., most prosperous of local public utilities, yesterday aplied to the Public Utilities Commission for authority to issue and sell $5,000,000 in new bonds.

The bonds would be additions to the initial series secured by the company's first mortgage and deed of trust, dated July 1, 1936, and held by the Riggs National Bank as trustee. They would pay 3¼ per cent interest and fall due July 1, 1966.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said that no action will be taken until further fiscal data is furnished by the utility.

The $5,000,000 is sought, the company explained, to reimburse its own treasury for expenditures heretofore made for extensions, betterments and improvements to the company's property. Approximately $4,500,000 of these expenditures extend back prior to December 31, 1926. The other $500,000 was spent in 1927.

The Public Utilities Commission authorized the issuance of $15,000,000 in bonds in June, 1936. The company in its petition recalled that the commission in that order noted that the company had spent $6,641,934.79 for improvements prior to December 31, 1926, and allowed $3,240,000 for the bond issue to be applied as partial reimbursement.

This left a balance of $4,401,934.79, the petition points out. In 1927 capital expenditures by the company amounted to $4,723,505.76, but the petition asks reimbursement at this time of only $598,065.21. This leaves a balance of xpenditures unprovided for of $4,125,440.55.

Besides the $15,000,000 bond issue of 1936, the outstanding securities of the Potomac Electric Power Co. are:

Twenty thousand shares of preferred stock, 6 per cent series of 1925, of $100 par value.

50,000 shares of preferred stock, 5½ per cent series of 1927, of $100 par value.

60,000 shares of common stock of $100 par value.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. also filed an application with the Securities and Exchange Commission for exemption from the requirement of filing a declaration with respect to the bonds. A hearing was scheduled for 10 a. m. November 26.

The commission said that the company proposes to sell the bonds to a limited number of private purchasers, the names of whom will be supplied by amendment to the application.

Envoy Marriner's Body Arrives Home for Rites

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—The body of James Theodore Marriner, American consul general slain in Beirut, Lebanon, arrived here today aboard the steamship Excambion, a few hours after Marriner's assassin was hanged in far-away Lebanon.

Received with military honors, the body in flag-draped casket was started on its way to Portland, Me., Marriner's home, where funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon.

HookFightsReturn On Slaying Charge

Thomas Henry Hook, 32, a former policeman under indictment in Prince Georges County for the murder of a colored "numbers" runner, refused yesterday to return to Maryland.

Hook said he would be willing to return in a ew days ater seeing my attorney."

Hook has been sought for a month in connection with the slaying of Samuel Jeffrees, colored, in front of Camp Springs, Md., beer garden September 30.

Two other men already indicted for the murder are Fred Schinman, 39, 1300 block M street northwest, and Frank Guy, colored, first block of G street northwest. Schinman, also fighting extradition, will be given a hearing in Police Court this morning.

Seabury Attacks Delay In N. Y. Vote Count

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Samuel Seabury, whose investigation of city offices in 1932 led to the defeat of Tammany Hall by a "reform" movement, today blamed delay in tabulating the metropolis' first proportional representation election on "the bungling of machine politicians."

His attack came as State and city inquiries were pushed into reasons behind slowness in counting 2,000,000 paper ballots cast for councilmanic candidates last Tuesday.

Four Parents Want Wallace; Receiving Home Takes Him

Tactics of Father and Stepmother Bewilder 9-Year-Old as They Fight for His Custody in Courts.

Little Wallace Axselle went to sleep in the Receiving Home last night bewildered by a series of events much too complicated to be comprehended by a lad of 9.

Wallace's plight began last August, while he was living with his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Alex McFee Gray. At that time, the child's father, Edward L. Axselle, of Dumbarton, Va., had his former wife (Mrs. Gray) arrested on a perjury charge which allegedly grew out of the divorce trial.

Axselle was granted legal custody of the boy and Wallace was taken back to Richmond. Mrs. Gray was sent to Richmond, to await trial.

Wallace was then brought back to Washington and placed in a boarding school in Prince Georges County. Then, according to a warrant issued several days ago, he was taken from the school by his stepfather, with whom he has been living until yesterday.

A warrant charging Gray with kidnaping Wallace from the school was issued in Prince Georges County yesterday. It alleges that Gray took the child from the home without the permission of Axselle.

When Gray was arrested yesterday, Wallace had to be taken care of, so police sent him to the Receiving Home. Gray waived extradition and was taken to the Hyattsville jail. A preliminary hearing will be held in Hyattsville police court on November 24.

More Election Charges Quashed in Kentucky

Harlan, Ky., Nov. 10 (AP).—On motion of the Commonwealth, charges against Harlan County deputy sheriffs and precinct officials arising from election day arrests were dismissed, today, the Commonwealth citing lack of evidence.

State police on election day, November 2, arrested High Sheriff T. R. Middleton, 13 of his deputies and 27 election officials, on charges varying from violation of the State election laws to carrying concealed deadly weapons. Charges against the sheriff, two of his deputies and five election officials were dismissed yesterday.

'Tobacco Road' Barred.

New Orleans, Nov. 10 (AP).—"Tobacco Road," the social drama of long performance on Broadway, was barred today from presentation in New Orleans by Frank Gomila, safety commissioner, upon requests of clergymen who described the play as "obscene."

Coroner's Jury Frees Driver in Auto Death

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated John H. Nock, 1105 Queen street northeast, after an inquest into the traffic death of Frank M. Crawford, 66, handy man for the Little Sisters of the Poor, 228 H street northeast.

The jury returned a verdict of "accidental," after witnesses testified that Crawford walked into the path of Nock's machine at Fifth and K streets northwest Monday night.

Peace Alliance Elects Bishop Oldham Head

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—The World Alliance for International Friendship today re-elected the Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, bishop of Albany, N. Y., president and voted to meet in San Francisco in 1938.

Florence Allen, Cleveland; Bishop James C. Baker, San Francisco, and Dr. Francis J. Haas, Washington, D. C., were named vice presidents.

Manufacturers Called Before Senate Group

National Association, Other Organizations to Face Liberties Hearings.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee announced yesterday it had summoned representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers and a number of other organizations to public hearings.

Senators La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Thomas (Democrat), Utah, issued a joint statement saying the committee would continue a study of "employe associations and so-called vigilante groups in various sections of the country."

"The scope of the committee's study," the statement added, "will include the groups which have as a purpose the defeating, or influencing the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, or which tend to influence, or repress the rights of free speech and assembly."

[The United Press said the committee had revealed it has begun an inquiry into labor relations at the Ford Motor Co.'s Detroit plant. Simultaneously, Richard Frankensteen, administrative vice president of the United Automobile Workers, a Committee for Industrial Organization Union, called a national meeting of organizers in all of Ford's plants to be held in Detroit Saturady and Sunday.—Editor's note.]

La Follette said subpenas had been served on the following:

Jersey Investigation Asked.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP).—Charging that labor unions were subjected to a "reign of terror" in Jersey City, the Greater Newark Industrial Union Council, C. I. O. affiliate, asked the La Follette Senate Committee today to make a complete investigation there.

The action was decided upon at a meeting of the council last night. A resolution requesting the Senate inquiry declared picketing and other forms of strike tactics were "restricted both by regulations and by plain autocratic force, unsanctioned by any legal process."

Belgrade Commandant Near Death From Shot

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 10 (AP).—General Wojislaw T mic, commandant of Belgrade and holder of many decorations for bravery in the World War, was in a serious condition today from a bullet wound police said was self-inflicted. Tomic, an adviser to Prince Regent Paul and active in military and political affairs, was said by friends to have been depressed.

Military authorities denied reports abroad of mysterious circumstances associated with the shooting or that a state of siege had been declared because of fear of an antigovernment plot.

Still Only An Armistice.

It is profoundly symbolic that it is the Armistice rather than the peace settlement that followed which the world has chosen to commemorate in the years since 1918.

Most of the terms of that settlement have been whittled away bit by bit, sometimes with the voluntary if belated consent of the victors, more often through force applied in disregard of treaty commitments by the dissatisfied powers. Little is now left of the original structure, and even that little is threatened with collapse.

Now, more than at any time since 1918, the world is living in a state of armistice, a truce between the last war and the next. In certain parts of the world, notably Spain and China, the truce has been broken. The world at large is at the mercy of an incident, and the world includes the United States.

But the events of the past few years have also demonstrated that if peace is fragile it is also resilient. The always threatening world war has somehow as yet been averted. And as long as it can continue to be averted there is hope that peace can be stabilized.

History since 1918, however, makes it profoundly clear that mere professions in behalf of peace, mere invocations against the evils of war, are not enough. It is today fashionable in this country to scoff at the aims for which we fought against Germany. To contrast the spread of totalitarianism with the pledge of "making the world safe for democracy." But the presumption back of such cynicism is that the new world order based on peace and democracy could be established merely by blueprints, slogans and prayers, and without our assistance.

For the last 19 years the cause of peace has suffered because this Nation, the most powerful in the world, chose to regard itself as indifferent to responsibilities and immune from dangers which only now and very hesitantly we are beginning to admit. In view of the triple alliance recently formed by Germany, Italy and Japan, it can no longer be denied that the anti-democratic and militaristic spirit which has great and powerful nations in its grip constitutes today a potent element of concern to the United States.

If there are any who fail to realize this, the conversion of Brazil into a Fascist state should be helpful evidence. "If those things come to pass in other parts of the world," said President Roosevelt on October 5, "let no one imagine that America will escape." Seldom is a prophet proved right so speedily.

The democratic nations still have it within their power to block off the Fascist menace now spreading to the New World. Together they constitute so formidable an aggregation of material and moral force as to give pause to any nation or combination of nations prepared to take to the warpath. In such unity, but only in such unity, peace has its strength.

Whether or not the democracies can cooperate for peace is the great question of the present Armistice Day. And on how this question is answered by the nations concerned, and not least by the United States, depends the continuation of Armistice Day as a celebration with something more than a highly sardonic meaning.

Ramsay MacDonald.

With the death of Ramsay MacDonald there is gathered to history the last member of the great triumvirate which developed the British Labor Party from a petty parliamentarian opposition to its temporary fame as the responsible government of the empire on which the sun never sets. It is just over two years now since Arthur Henderson died, and only six months since Philip Snowden followed him. A brief span of time has eliminated three men who, as long as they worked harmoniously together, formed an outstanding instance of effective political leadership.

But the power of this combination was broken long before the death of Henderson, who in 1924 was MacDonald's home secretary, as Snowden was his chancellor of the exchequer in the first Labor government. The split came when, in 1931, MacDonald deserted the Labor Party to join the Conservatives in a "National Coalition" designed to cope effectively with the economic crisis. Most of his old colleagues never forgave the man whom they deemed a renegade for this action, and the Conservatives never really more than tolerated him as their leader. In 1935 Mr. MacDonald was eased from the premiership by Stanley Baldwin, and the last two years of his life were embittered by his loss both of power and of friendships.

MacDonald was perhaps too mercurial, too brilliant, and too much of an aspiring politician to make any very permanent mark in British political life. Whether as an outspoken pacifist during the war, or as a spokesman for Toryism during the depression, there was a certain instability in his character which gradually alienated most of his public following. Two years ago his old mining constituency repudiated him, in favor of an official Labor candidate, by a majority of over 2 to 1. Since then he had been without influence as a public figure.

The first Labor premier was an efficient organizer, a very able orator and a prolific writer of the pamphleteering type. He will long be remembered as one who rose by sheer ability from humble origins to the pinnacle of British politics. But in only one direction does it appear that his work has made any lasting impress on the development of his country. The handful of Laborites which he took with him into the national government in 1931 have unquestionably had a liberalizing effect on British Conservatism, and for this MacDonald's influence is primarily responsible.

The social conscience now apparent in the policies of the national government, however, has naturally not endeared the memory of Ramsay MacDonald to his old Labor associates. On the contrary, they feel that their former leader was not merely guilty of desertion, but also of building effective competition to the organization through which he gained his rise to fame. Certainly it is true that the British Labor Party today seems doubly feeble and unimpressive because of the contrast with the world-wide prestige it enjoyed when MacDonald, Snowden and Henderson were carrying its banner triumphantly forward on both the industrial and political fields.

Time To Face Realities.

Only a few weeks ago President Roosevelt, in one of his speeches in the Northwest, praised his Administration for restoring "prosperity." Even as he spoke a serious business recession was apparent to close observers. Since the Administration has taken so much credit for bringing about recovery, it must now be prepared to take responsibility in equal measure for the present backward trend. Earlier consultations in recognition of that fact would have been more to the point than premature assurances of full recuperation.

The problem by which the Administration is now confronted is the more difficult because past extravagance has made it essential to reduce Government expenditures at a time when unemployment is increasing. Despite the President's promises to cut the swollen Federal outlays, some of his advisers are apparently sponsoring a new program of "pump-priming." Fortunately, Secretary Morgenthau has now come out in forthright opposition to such a policy. Certainly it should be evident that the Government cannot continue indefinitely to create enormous deficits when the net result of the spending program is to accentuate the uncertain outlook for private enterprise and employment.

There has been no lack of pump-priming in the last four years. What the present situation reveals is the inability of the pump to produce a continuous flow after it has been copiously primed. And that failure must be definitely linked with a reform program which in many aspects is unintelligent, unsuccessful and injurious. Its very serious dangers may be temporarily concealed but, as the Administration's present belated anxiety proves, the decepton cannot be permanently maintained.

Critics who have attempted to show that the Administration's program involves too much reform and too little recovery have been constantly damned as reactionaries. Abuse has been hurled at them, their motives have been questioned, and their legitimate questions drowned out by floods of shallow soapbox ridicule. Yet current economic trends indicate the soundness of their contentions.

Several specific factors contributing to the slump may be readily pointed out. The Government cannot diminish the revenue and increase the expenses of the railroads without dealing all industry and employment a very considerable blow. Under normal conditions the carriers buy 20 per cent of the lumber sold in this country, 17 per cent of the steel, and other commodities on a large scale. Both directly and indirectly they are among the great employers of labor. A Government-made slump for the railroads is certain to have widespread repercussions in other lines of business.

Equally evident is the fact that costly attempts to stimulate large-scale housing construction have been a failure. There was a considerable percentage of increase last year and early in 1937, but the tendency for construction activity is now downward. Yet the need for extensive residential building is nowhere questioned. Prosperity cannot be attained in this country without a normal amount of new construction of both dwellings and industrial plants.

Large capital expenditures by the utilities industry are held in abeyance for want of credit and because uncertain governmental policies make plant expansion inadvisable. More power and light facilities are needed in many localities. The output of the industry is at a record peak. But managements cannot justify normal spending for extensions when confronted by actual competition or threats of competition from subsidized Federal projects. Whatever the past sins of this industry there is no reason why the entire populace should be punished as a result.

Punitive taxes on capital gains and undistributed earnings have placed a severe handicap upon the functioning of the country's economic system. Furthermore, the depressing effect of this year's enormous cotton crop cannot be attributed entirely to the abnormal yield per acre. In part it is a result of excessive Government loans which encouraged more intensive use of fertilizer as well as a larger acreage.

The cumulative effects of these specific factors go a long way toward explaining the present recession. Will the Administration, as Secretary Morgenthau intimates, courageously face these facts? Or will it merely try to gloss over the situation in a way which may temporarily deceive the uninformed? As Congress returns that is the most vital question before it. Political expediency may appear to call for further hypodermic injections. But the long-range interests of the country clearly demand that Congress should go as far as possible in removing the actual and fundamental causes of the present setback.

Social Security Reserves.

Last spring the Senate Finance Committee and the Social Security Board, acting in co-operation, appointed an advisory council to study proposals for revision of the social security act. This council, representing industry, labor and the public, has been holding meetings in Washington and has now adjourned to meet again early in December. At that time it is expected to concentrate on the problem of old-age reserves. The question at issue is whether the present "self-sustaining" reserve system shall be retained, or abandoned for a pay-as-you-go plan.

The present system is based upon the fallacious idea that a compulsory Governmental plan of old-age insurance can and should be made as self-sustaining as a well-supervised private insurance fund. Critics have pointed out, however, that the position of the Government is fundamentally different from that of a private agency. The Government can compel people to participate, and the amounts paid in premiums can be changed at will. Moreover, deficiencies can always be covered by levying taxes. Thus there is not the same necessity for establishing reserves actuarially calculated to meet probable future demands.

There remains another important distinction. The law requires the insurance reserves to be invested in Government obligations. In other words, the assets of the Government's insurance agency are the Government's promises to pay. The interest on those promises, furthermore, has to be paid out of the proceeds of taxes.

Thus, the whole complicated structure has rightly been described as fictitious. It is certainly calculated to deceive the public as to the real nature of the arrangement. For there is nothing in common between this kind of government reserve and the reserves of private insurance companies which are invested in income-producing assets of other companies or public borrowers. As one critic has pointed out, the reserve is in effect only a bookkeeping arrangement which determines the division of costs between specially-taxed wage earners and general taxpayers.

However, some people who are not in the least deceived as to the character of the insurance plan favor retention of the present system on purely practical grounds. The pay roll levies, they argue, supply the Government with much-needed revenues, while the reserve fund provides the Treasury with a vast outlet for Government bonds. This aspect of the question was brought conspicuously to mind when the President recently revised his budget statement for the current fiscal year.

He then noted that sales of special obligations to investment accounts (chiefly the old-age fund) and for State unemployment trust funds would exceed $1,000,000,000, thus making it possible to finance a prospective deficit of $695,000,000 and still reduce the debt in the hands of the public by $380,000,000.

The fatal weakness of this system was ignored by Mr. Morgenthau last night. The fund offers a probably irresistible temptation to spenders to perpetrate extravagances. So long as the volume of the outstanding debt can be bought in by the Government for investment account, Congress will not be under effective pressure to cut expenditures and eliminate deficits. Furthermore, the existence of so-called insurance "reserves" is a positive incitement to invent new methods of spending taxpayers' money.

Already Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, has suggested to the advisory council that reserves should be invested in a comprehensive low-cost housing and general building program. This recommendation is said to be receiving serious consideration as a device for stimulating business. Such suggestions are calculated to confirm gloomy predictions that the insurance reserves would be raided to finance all sorts of emergency and extraordinary spending projects. This danger constitutes another strong argument in favor of revising the social security act to bring it into conformity with pay-as-you-go policies.

Revision along such lines would entail frank acknowledgment that the cost of insuring the country's wage earners has to be borne by the taxpayers. That is true whether the funds are contributed in the form of pay roll taxes or taken from general tax receipts to meet interest on Government securities held in old-age reserve funds.

From An Aristocrat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am an aristocrat from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet and if this letter is published it will evoke a storm of disapproval. But what if it does? It is the truth, and nothing but the truth, and "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

Yes, I am an aristocrat by birth education and condition and I am proud of it. From time immemorial there have been classes and, eternally, the same condition will exist. Water seeks its level and so do all classes of society. A cultured high-class gentleman could no more hobnob with an uneducated hod-carrier than "a lamb could lie down with a lion."

And I've never taken much stock in this well-meaning but futile "uplift" movement. In a long life I have observed that men and women who really feel the urge for "uplift" usually uplift themselves. As an illustration let me cite an incident that happened some years ago:

I happened to own in Washington five small houses (occupied by laboring people) equipped with bath, heat and gas. On an inspection tour of the houses on one occasion I discovered that four of the five families were using the bath tubs as coal bins and vile smelling oil lamps were used in the houses instead of gas. The occupant of the fifth house, who used the bath tub for bathing and patronized the gas company, today occupies a high position in the Government service and "uplifted himself."

And this brings me to this "slum clearing" project. When the slums are cleared do the occupants return to the comfortable homes of baths, steam heat and electricity? They do not! Figures show that 90 per cent naturally gravitate to other slums, where they find more congenial surroundings, and only 10 per cent to the improved living conditions.

It seems to me the acme of pure political hypocrisy on the part of the present Administration, and for vote-getting purposes only, to pretend such interest in the dear "underprivileged." Ninety per cent of these people are happy in their surroundings; so why disturb them?

There Ought To Be A Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Orders for the purchase and sale of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange daily come from all parts of the world. The volume of sales during one day not infrequently exceeds 4,000,000 shares, of a value of probably $75,000,000.

Mr. R. H. Ray in his letters published in The Post, November 1 and 9, informs us that a coterie of wicked speculators in Wall Street runs the prices of these $75,000,000 worth of stocks up and down to suit its own sweet will. There surely ought to be a law against it.

Praise For Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We feel sure that his "The Duke on His Own" will find an echo in the hearts of many right-thinking people.

If it could be said of the "Missus" that she goes about doing good—well, it would brighten up things a bit, but as things are . . . oh...phooey!

Manners At Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was glad to read what someone else had to say about "Exititis" or the Washington custom of assembling hats and coats during the closing number of a concert and then making a rush for an exit before the last note has ceased.

The behavior at the Rachmaninoff recital was disgraceful. Up to the intermission the pianist had to wait before beginning each number until some late comers had settled themselves—after the intermission they began to leave, one by one, during the playing of a number. When the program ended, the scramble for the doors began with no notice taken of the artist who came out several times to bow. It must be inspiring for a performer to give an encore to an audience partly outside, partly moving down the aisles, and the remainder seated, as was done Tuesday evening.

The exit rush at the opening concert of the National Symphony Orchestra was even worse. The two singers who gave the concluding number came out twice to bow to the backs of a disappearing audience. The people in the balcony mostly kept their seats and gave the singers the applause they deserved, but the orchestra was practically emptied by the second bow.

If I were one of those singers I should carry back to Europe a memory of a particularly ill-bred audience in Washington. If a person is so little moved by such playing as we heard Tuesday evening that he does not wish to sit a minute to get his breath back after the music stops, then he has no business there. Last week I attended a very delightful small recital at which the entire audience sat still while the principal soloist came out for several bows and then an encore. After that we all left, and I said to myself "Thank goodness, there are a few well-bred people in this town."

Washington audiences are fortunate in having a beautiful auditorium in which to hear the best the world has to offer; all they need is to learn some of the things expected of a supposedly cultured group of people.

MUSIC LOVER.

Washington, Nov. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Although entirely sympathetic I was very much amused by the description which "Lovegood Music" gave of the disease which he calls exititis. I would not question a word of it, but why not look on the other side?

I remember so distinctly an evening, or was it an afternoon, at Poli's when that was the theater of most artistic events in Washington. Ignace Paderewski was delighting the music lovers of the city. He played as only he could play, I think.

The program was completed and during the usual round of applause about a third of the audience hurriedly made their escape, Mr. Paderewski returned to the stage several times to bow his acknowledgement. Quiet again fell upon the house, with more than half of the audience remaining. Then renewed applause brought the artist again to his instrument. He interpreted a number of fine selections not on the formal program, and again bowed and retired. Again a storm of clapping and another large contingent of the audience found their way to the exits. About a third of the original audience remained as if entranced. They (or we) might have been considered "greedy" but the artist would not think that, and again he returned to his piano.

This time he must have played the music he loved best, and, Oh, how he played. The almost breathless stillness of the auditorium carried a message of appreciation and gratitude from those who had remained in what had become the Temple of Art by the simple means of elimination.

I wonder if there are others in Washington who still remember that event.

Labor And The Duke.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Labor's gratuitous insult to the Duke of Windsor is the culmination of a series of actions indicating that American labor not only lacks statesmanlike leadership, but is the victim of gross stupidity. Criticism of more efficient management methods is akin to blind opposition to progress in the form of labor-saving machinery and processes which actually have increased employment by creating many new jobs.

The main thing which has checked the rapid increase of unemployment has been the decreasing cost of production (due to more efficient management and machinery) which has kept prices low enough so that declining consumer buying did not compel factories to reduce output and employ less labor. Even a grammar school child can understand that reducing working hours and increasing wages must inevitably result in rising prices which end in a consumer's strike.

The public, the principal sufferer from labor troubles, sees the railroads so dominated by selfish labor interests that unwarranted pay increases and legislative restrictions have forced many roads into receivers' hands while rises in transportation costs reduce traffic and income so that government control and political mismanagement of the railroads threaten to add them to the taxpayers' burden. Then, there is the demoralization of American shipping which makes prudent travelers avoid American ships as unsafe and undependable. And how absurd is the notion that a gigantic housing program will promote prosperity. Surely no sensible person is going to build a house when excessive wages and short hours make costs unreasonable, while high-cost, poorly made government houses can never be rented cheaply enough to pay for themselves. Morever, both farmers and consumers should realize the high cost of milk is mainly due to the fact that union milk wagon drivers receive about as much per quart as do the farmers that produce at little or no profit.

It will be a grand day for the public and for labor itself when some big labor statesmen emerge to condemn the present fomenting of class hatred and to proclaim that the solution of labor' stroubles lies in true co-operative relations between capital and labor, whose interests are mutual.

YANKEE.

New York, Nov. 9.

Mr. Hoover's Liberalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I see that Herbert Hoover essays a new role these days, the role of "liberal." This is attested by the tone of some of his recent utterances and by his acceptance of the doctor's degree at Colby College at Waterville, Me., at the exercises celebrating "Elijah Parish Lovejoy, first martyr to the freedom of the American press."

Dr. Hoover's recent espousal of the liberal cause reminds me of an epigram by a prominent writer. A conservative was defined by him as "one who worships dead radicals." I wonder if Dr. Hoover is not really a conservative or reactionary rather than a true liberal?

If Dr. Hoover were really a liberal, he has a chance to make a name for himself by championing the cause of Tom Mooney in jail for many years in California. This case lies right on Dr. Hoover's own doorstep, but with the myopia which cursed him while in the White House, he considers "liberalism" as something "just around the corner" or something belonging to the past.

By taking the initiative in the Mooney case, which now has become a second "Dreyfuss Affair," Dr. Hoover would more likely succeed in convincing real liberals of his "liberalism" than by praising dead radicals.

The System.

THE air was crisp, but sweet with sunshine, and our spirits were, oh, definitely, gala. We had enjoyed three days of roaming through New Orleans' Vieux Carre, with its cast-iron lace worked into balconies, its verdant stinks, its shades of pirates, dueling gallants, and coffee-colored dream girls. Now we had just time for the old French cemetery.

Back of the Church of the Dead it is, but even this stern pointing to its purpose didn't dismay us. We have an affectionate regard for old cemeteries.

The sexton who greeted us at the gate seemed better suited to his calling than the clowns in Hamlet. Thin and dun, he advanced.

"You want to be shown through?"

We nodded, our eyes on the rows of little mausoleums behind him, all packed closely together and facing narrow, flagged alleys. This was a curious burying ground.

* * *

"I'll explain the system we use here." He was off at a drone. "You understand when this here cemetery was built, they couldn't dig down to bury 'em. Two feet down they struck water, and so they had to bury 'em aboveground. Now that New Orleans is drained, they put 'em underground in the new places, but here we hold to the old system."

He ground on methodically. "The oldest part is these here walls." He indicated the high brick wall that darkened the small graveyard. It was a good 6 feet thick. Ranged on its face were slabs inscribed with fading names and dates.

"At first, they buried 'em in vaults in those walls. Pretty old. But they're still in use. See those vaults with no slab? Just bricks?" We nodded. There was a 3-foot square indentation here in the old wall. Down the line there was another. And another.

"Just rented," he explained with some contempt. "If the family can't afford to buy a vault outright, they rent one."

"How much?" Jay asked, as practical about the system as the sexton.

"And if the rent isn't paid?"

"We have to wait a year and a day—that's the law on account of germs—then we tear out the bricks and out he comes. The body—what's left—goes down a hole in the back of the vault. The coffin we burn. Right over there." In a cleared space were the remains of a bonfire. "See the coffin handles in that pile?"

We did indeed.

"Then," I askea, "the vault is rented again?"

"Then it's rented again."

We moved on down the alleys.

* * *

We looked gravely at the marble kennels labeled "Buvier" or "Hulot" or "Cloquet" or "Fouche," all thriftily still in use. Each bore as many slabs as it had compartments, six generally. The oldest was dated some time in the eighteenth century, the newest, in many cases, "1937." Over all a marble angel brooded or an urn spilled stone drapery.

French families tend to size, and those compartments were limited in number. But the system took care of that contingency.

"If the vaults are filled and a member of the family dies, we just open one of the oldest vaults and put him there. Usually there ain't much left of the first fellow. Just a little dust, and we dump that in the back." Just so. Hustled along by the crowding generations.

The houses that he makes last till doomsday—but not the tenants.

"About how long does a body last?" Jay asked.

"Buried above ground like this, the air helps. Not much more than a skeleton after a year."

How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

Faith, if he be not rotten before he die—he will last you some eight or nine year.

Not above ground he won't.

* * *

"Now here's a vault of a family that's died out. When that happens, after we bury the last one, we put in a marker like that."

In one corner of the newest slab, a neat marble sign read: "Closed forever." The finality of the words was mocked by the gaping slab itself. Cut thin, it had buckled badly and quickly in New Orleans' heat and damp.

We wandered on, observing other parts of the system. Past the tombs whose owners had neglected to provide for perpetual care; they were overgrown with vines and looked singularly restful. Past the huge honeycomb mausoleum occupied by a score of artillerymen killed in the Battle of New Orleans; neat cast-iron slabs decorated with cast-iron wreaths sealed each vault and the thing had the tidy look of a freshly blackened coal range. There was a pile of used bricks waiting to be used again.

I loathe insects, but I looked, and the sight brought the place into a single frame. I still see a graying marble doghouse with a cluster of waxen spider lilies flourishing at one corner, and there on the flagstones before it an incredibly large grasshopper—4 inches over all—with a single blood red dot marking his back.

The sunlight seemed to me then to have that darkened look it had at the beginning of an eclipse that frightened me badly as a child.

The French are such realists.

Military Airplanes.

ON SEPTEMBER 21, Maj. M. K. B. Wolf, of the Army Air Corps, stationed in Los Angeles to inspect military airplanes and test them after delivery to the Army by the manufacturers, announced that the Air Corps would not test or accept any more ships from the Northrop plant of the Douglas Aircraft Corporation until the company could give assurances against sabotage

PEGLER.

In time of war, of course, it would be possible to assign Army intelligence detectives to work in all plants on Army jobs, but in peacetime, with labor troubles disturbing the airplane industry, the military must keep hands off out of consideration for the political elements.

There had been three suspicious incidents in the Douglas and Northrop plants

* * * *

FOLLOWING THE sit-down strike at the Douglas plant, last winter, an old spring and a number of metal nuts were found in a blower section of a bomber which had been built for a bidding competition. The ship was in the plant, almost complete, when the strike began and was finished a few days after the plant was cleared. Taken up by Carl Cover, a test pilot who is also vice president of the Douglas Co., it developed engine trouble. The engine was then torn down and moving parts were found to have been damaged by the spring and nuts. This ship was not made for delivery to the Army, but was a sample, so to speak, and the case, in that sense, was not the immediate business of the Air Corps. Persons in sympathy with the strike thought the spring and nuts had been introduced where they didn't belong by accident, but the Douglas Co. insists that it was a plain case of malicious sabotage.

The two other incidents concerned two attack planes built for the Army in the Northrop plant, which has had two sit-down strikes. In one of these planes two pieces of cloth were found in a gasoline feedline. It was suggested that these fragments might have stuck in the line by accident, but Army officers do not believe that this was possible. One piece matched the cloth used in cleaning the line and might conceivably have lodged by accident although it was much larger than mere lint, and there was nothing to indicate that it could have been snagged off inside the line. The other piece, however, did not match the cloth used in cleaning.

* * * *

IN THE OTHER attack plane a piece of cloth was found concealed behind a baffle plate or bulkhead in a gasoline tank, where it would have been invisible from the opening after the tank had been soldered up. Suspicion had been directed to the tank shop and special vigilance discovered the rag, about the size of a handkerchief, which in ordinary inspection might have been overlooked. The cloth was large enough to impede or block the fuel outlet if it had become matted over the hole through suction.

A labor leader active in the strikes against Douglas and Northrop took the position that sabotage was against the interests of the union and the employes and agreed with a Government inspector that the cause of labor organizations had nothing to gain from such actions.

* * * *

THE ARMY IS behaving with great tact for fear that some action intended only to prevent unnecessary risks to the lives of Army fliers would be exploited into apparent hostility to union labor, which, in the event of a later emergency, might therefore be exhorted to refuse co-operation with the War Department.

Nevertheless, it is realized that planes may be passed on inspection and test containing fatal defects subtly introduced in the course of manufacture. A small quantity of salt concealed in the metal structure of a wing might corrode a vital member and cause a wreck in the air. The Army's delicacy is indicated by the phrasing of Maj. Wolf's announcement, in which, notwithstanding the Army's definite belief that malicious damage was done, he referred to the three fuel line obstructions only as "indicated" sabotage.

Imaginary Interviews.

(Messrs. Hoover and Landon on that 1938 convention.)

Q. Now, Alf and Herb, why can't you get together on the party future?

Hoover—We can get together on it, but not together.

Q. Now about you, Alfred—don't you really think it would be a good thing for the G. O. P. to hold a convention next year to sort of plan the future?

Landon—Yes, but whose future?

Hoover—It is a question of principles and policies, not of individuals, Alfred. Aren't you as willing to submerge yourself as I am?

Landon—Just about!

* * * *

Hoover—I don't think I like the way you said that.

Landon—And I don't like to think you think I said it in any particular way.

A. Now, boys, don't get excited. You both want harmony, don't you?

Hoover—I am determined to have it if I have to fight for it all winter.

Landon—See! What did I tell you?

* * * *

Q. Just why do you feel, Herbert, that the party should hold a 1938 convention?

Hoover—There are so many grave problems confronting the Nation that we should lose no time considering them and deciding on our attitude toward them.

Landon—Why does he keep saying "our" attitude?

Q. What could the party lose, Mr. Landon, by a general get-together at which all the issues would be faced boldly?

Hoover—Why, Alfred, you're not really afraid of being lost, are you? I'm not.

Landon—That's different; you're used to it by this time.

* * * *

Hoover—As the titular head of the party, I resent that.

Landon—Whaddaya mean, you're the titular head? Why, I am the——

Q. Now, boys, keep your heads. Remember that, after all, Al Smith was the titular head of the Democrats in 1932, and look at him now. Changing the subject, why do you suppose Borah is so dead against the 1938 convention?

Hoover—The very idea of knowing how he might be expected to stand on any question two years in advance is poison to Borah.

Landon—Borah's right. Problems are piling up so fast that even if we met and agreed what to do about 'em in 1938 there'd be a whole new set by 1939.

Hoover—It is only by trying to mold public opinion that we can check the problems.

Hoover—How would you know anything about that?

* * * *

Landon—Don't get sarcastic, Herb. Everybody said my voice came over perfectly.

Hoover—That was the trouble!

Q. Please, boys, no bitterness! I take it you both are for anything that will increase Republican chances in 1940?

Both—Anything!

Q. What about the Chicago action in voting to name a committee or 100 Republican leaders to draft a new platform after a careful study of the situation?

Hoover—I see no need of the other 98.

Landon—You mean the other 99.

China At Bay

By Mark J. Ginsbourg,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

WITH HER arsenals destroyed by Japanese aerial bombardment and with her coast blockaded by Japanese men-of-war, China today is rapidly nearing a munitions famine.

For years China has been stacking up arms in preparation for a deadly conflict which she feared and was anxious to prevent, but which she knew was inevitable. Thus, at the outbreak of the "undeclared" war with Japan, China possessed vast, but poorly assorted, stores of war material.

With more than 500,000 men actively engaged in the hostilities on the North China and Shanghai fronts, these supplies have been exhausted faster than the Chinese general staff had expected.

The question of replenishing China's armaments has, thus, become the most important problem confronting the Chinese strategists. While desperate efforts are being made to equip new arsenals with British machinery, millions of dollars worth of orders for guns, ammunition and airplanes are being placed with the leading armament makers of the world.

At the very outset of the North China incident in July the Nanking Ministry of War placed large orders for munitions in the United States, Germany and Great Britain, on the assumption that the Japanese navy would hesitate to stop and search foreign vessels.

The assumption was wrong. Late last August the navy announced its firm intention to stop the inflow of arms into China irrespective of the nationality of the carrier. Immediately the navy translated its words into action by stopping the crack German liner Gneisenau, Shanghai-bound with a considerable amount of arms ordered by the Chinese government.

After a brief exchange of courtesies between the Japanese and German diplomatic representatives here, the ship, The Post learned from reliable sources, changed its course and proceeded to Kobe, where the arms were unloaded and paid for by the Japanese government.

Apparently aware of the Japanese navy's firm determination to stop foreign vessels, whatever the diplomatic consequences, President Franklin Roosevelt, anxious to avoid entanglement in the Oriental dispute, issued an order forbidding Government-owned vessels to carry arms destined to either of the warring nations.

Italy Ceases Sale Of Aircraft.

THE ORDER undoubtedly was aimed at the S. S. Wichita, which was at that time nearing Los Angeles from the Eastern coast with 19 Bellanca planes and miscellaneous cargo ordered, and paid for in advance, by the Chinese government. The dangerous cargo was unloaded in San Pedro.

Italy, which until this year was engaged in a bitter combat with the munitions and airplane makers of the world for the China market, suspended the sales of aircraft to China with the commencement of the hostilities. The explanation of this action must probably be sought in the growing understanding between Rome and Tokyo.

Great Britain thus remained the only foreign power able and willing to deliver to China arms and aircraft ordered before, and apparently after, the outbreak of the hostilities.

With the entire China coast from Tientsin to Pakhoi closely patrolled by Japanese men-of-war, Hongkong has become the only open port for the import of munitions into China. This opportunity, British, as well as some private foreign concerns, have utilized to the fullest extent.

Almost daily, British-made airplanes are being reassembled in Hongkong and flown to Canton. Vast quantities of arms and munitions are, meanwhile, being transported to Canton by the Kowloong-Canton Railway, which, thus far, has been spared by Japanese airmen because of its British ownership.

According to Japanese information, which British observers here admit to be correct, if incomplete, 27 airplanes were flown from Hongkong to Canton between September 15 and October 2.

Of this number, 16 battle planes were delivered on September 15, 2 fighting planes on September 30, 4 fighting machines on October 1, and 5 pursuit planes on October 2.

With no British pilots allowed to fly over Chinese territory, these aircraft are being flown from Hongkong to Canton by Chinese airmen trained at the semi-official Chiteh Aviation School in the crown colony. Most of the machines, according to Japanese sources, were made by the Vickers Co.

Twenty-three vessels—11 of them British-owned—passed through Port Said en route to Hongkong between July 10 and September 19 with munitions ordered by the Chinese government. Their cargo included tanks, machine-guns, field artillery, rifles, ammunition, explosives and machinery for arsenals.

Air Raids on Canton Hamper Arms Shipments.

UP TO SEPTEMBER 26, munitions were being taken by rail from Hongkong directly to Hankow, on the Yangtze River, where a part of them was shipped down the river to Nanking and Nanchang and the remainder was sent by the Peiping-Hankow Railway to the North China front.

The task of delivering arms from Hongkong to Shanghai and North China has, however, now become extremely difficult with the daily air raids on the Canton-Hankow Railway launched by Japanese aircraft on September 26.

Rumors are current in Shanghai that French-manufactured airplanes are being flown, although as yet in small numbers, from French Indo-China to China by way of the border province of Yunnan. No confirmation of these reports could be obtained, but it seems probable that French munitions makers, with or without government blessings, would take advantage of Indo-China's proximity to a vast market for munitions.

An important, but as yet uncertain, factor in the situation is Russia. While the Japanese have already circulated reports of hundreds of airplanes and thousands of tanks, armored cars and field guns being delivered to China by the Soviet government, these allegations appear to be unadulterated phantasy.

Foreign observers here, however, do not have the slightest doubt that Soviet Russia will within the next few months become China's main source of military supplies, from airplanes to barbed wire.

It was generally assumed here in this connection that Mr. Dmitri Bogomoloff, Soviet Ambassador to China, during his lightning visit to Moscow by air, discussed among other issues the problem of supplying China with munitions.

"Sewing Machine" Salesmen Make Their Appearance.

SOVIET airplanes, which have shown their excellence in Spain, can be flown to Nanking from Soviet air bases in Turkestan within 48 hours. They can immediately be put in action, or employed in the transportation of much needed war material. Other supplies, less urgently required, can be transported to China by rail, motor vehicle and camel back across Sinkiang, the Soviet-controlled Chinese Turkestan.

In addition to these two major potential sources—Great Britain and Soviet Russia—there are numerous private munitions concerns bidding for China's orders. Nanking is reported to be overflowing with "sewing machine" salesmen, whom experienced newspapermen have only recently seen in Addis Ababa and Madrid.

Included among the "sewing machine" concerns represented here is a great American steel octopus which ten years ago was credited with wrecking a naval disarmament conference in Geneva. A salesman of this enterprising firm hung his shingle in a local office building shortly after the outbreak of hostilities.

The means by which "sewing machines" can be smuggled into China are shrouded in mystery, but this country always has been a paradise of gun-runners, and undoubtedly the Japanese blockade is still full of gaps through which arms can be slipped without attracting Nipponese attention.

With China's military supplies rapidly nearing exhaustion and with the intricate machinery of delivering arms to her by friendly powers as yet unready, China is facing within the next few weeks the most critical period of her cambat with Japan.

Now that the Japanese expeditionary force has launched its "big push," China will need every machine gun and every bullet to meet this attack. Whether the Chinese troops succeed in stemming the advance or not, China's war supplies will reach a dangerously low mark.

Therefore, if China is to survive the "big drive," she must take immediate steps to replenish her armaments on a large scale.

Fascism Crosses The Ocean.

ISOLATIONIST sentiment in the United States has always been strongest regarding Europe, weakest with reference to Latin America. Indeed, the very elements which, in the past, were most vociferous in demanding that this Nation keep strictly aloof from the affairs of the Old World were usually the most clamorous in urging that we mix actively in the affair of the New.

This polarity of outlook was in part the inevitable product of geography. Europe is on the other side of a broad ocean; Latin America begins at our doorsteps. But in part, also, sentiment was a factor drawing us toward the other republics of this hemisphere while keeping us aloof from the nations across the sea.

"The political system of the Allied powers," said President Monroe in his famous message to Congress, "is essentially different . . . from that of America . . . We owe it, therefore, to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and our safety."

* * * *

MUCH WATER has passed under the bridge since then. The Holy Alliance of the Russian, Prussian and Austrian monarchies long ago passed into history. Protected by the Monroe Doctrine and the British fleet, the Latin-American republics retained their independence. And the Monroe Doctrine itself passed through a series of changes from Monroe's day to those of Theodore Roosevelt, who arrogated to the United States the right to exercise police power in this hemisphere, and from Teddy's "big stick" diplomacy to the "Good Neighbor" policy of the present Administration.

Now all the republics of this hemisphere are presumably partners in a great enterprise of peace created at Buenos Aires last December. More than ever, the popular belief is, the lines of interest run north and south rather than east and west. Yet this theory flies in the face of reality at more than one point.

* * * *

OUR TRADE with Europe, for instance, overshadows that with Latin America and has always done so. The same is true of our financial ties. Despite persistent and partially successful efforts made at successive Pan-American conferences and on other occasions, to improve cultural relations between the United States and Latin America, our cultural ties with the Old World remain greater than those with the New. And that holds true of the Latin-American nations as well.

This state of affairs may be unfortunate. But there is no blinking the fact that it is true. In other words, Pan-Americanism expresses not so much a real as only a hoped-for community of interest between the United States and the nations to our south.

In the past, however, one fundamental difference has set off the nations of this hemisphere from those of the Old World.

Here, since the successful revolt of the Spanish colonies, the dominant form of government has been republican; across the seas, the dominant form, at least until the World War, was monarchic.

* * * *

PSYCHOLOGICALLY, this contrast was of vast significance. The fact that the nations in this hemisphere were, with the exception of Canada, held to a form of government at variance with the form of government dominant in Europe tended to offset all the differences between us and the other American republics. We were, it seemed, all in the same boat.

However, it is some time since the apparent contrast between the republican and the monarchic systems of government has had any meaning. The real differences that now exist in the world with regard to governmental forms are between the democratic and the antidemocratic systems.

* * * *

THE BELIEF has, however, persisted that the nations of this hemisphere are still set apart from the rest of the world.

At Rio de Janeiro, for instance, President Roosevelt spoke of "the ideals of individual liberty and of the democratic form of representative government which is the goal of all the American republics." And at Buenos Aires he urged the need "of strengthening of the processes of constitutional democratic government." By so doing, he added:

". . . the people of our nations, unlike the people of nations who live under other forms of government, can and will insist on their intention to live in peace."

In other words, the nations of the Americas have a common stake in democracy and a common interest in its perpetuation.

* * * *

YET, EVEN at the time President Roosevelt was making these speeches, the great majority of the Latin-American nations were democratic only in theory.

Some were in the grip of military dictatorships of the peculiar Latin-American variety. One of them—Paraguay—was by that time already experimenting with the modern European variant of despotism—totalitarianism.

Now Brazil has joined the ranks of the totalitarian states. For some years democracy in Brazil has been in eclipse. But until now, at least, lip service was rendered democratic institutions and principles, while the government ostensibly frowned upon a Fascist movement whose inspiration was clearly Italian and German.

The rulers of Brazil have now gone the whole hog. The largest nation in Latin America has hoisted the Fascist flag. Thus the tides set in motion by Mussolini's march on Rome are now sweeping the shores of this hemisphere as well. It is a circumstance not pleasant to contemplate.

Our Constitution

By William Lyon Phelps

A Book On It.

Here is a little book on a big subject. It is in large type and fills only about 200 pages. It is easy reading. The title is "Through the Years With Our Constitution," and is written by Dr. Henry W. Elson, lecturer in New York University and formerly professor of history in Ohio University. The publisher is The Stratford Co., Boston.

* * * *

The author has a transparently clear style, and I think his views on the Supreme Court and the New Deal will be of interest even to those who do not agree with him. And I myself am on the other side of many positions taken in this book, especially in the later chapters. But if I read only those books and articles with which I agreed in advance, I should never learn anything; and to those who do not see how there can be any other opinion except their own, I recommend this little volume.

Although differing from the author on some details, I am altogether with him when he says (page 102):

"Freedom of speech and of the press refers chiefly, of course, to the right of the citizen to criticize and find fault with the Government and public officials. A citizen who has not this right does not live in a free country; and a government that cannot stand up under adverse criticisms will fall and ought to fall. The first move of a dictator or a tyrant is to suppress freedom of speech and press. The first amendment blocks all such practices in America."

* * * *

Personal, individual liberty, and the liberty of the press are supremely important; and it is necessary to be eternally vigilant that these supreme rights be not impaired; for they are not privileges, they are rights.

Just as out of a conglomeration of noises a composer makes a symphony (The London Symphony), so it is my hope that out of all our violent debates over the Constitution and the court, one good result may come—increased knowledge of both and intelligent interest. This little book will help.

Tom McCarthy

Is Guest Artist at a Possum Hunt.

SOMEHOW, these things are always happening to me. Maybe, it's because I've got sort of a trustful expression. I mean, maybe, it's because I'm just a natural as a "fall guy."

TOM McCARTHY.

But when they said, "Come on Mac, we're going on a possum hunt over in Virginia, I was all set for it. I didn't know whether you hunted possums with clubs, stones or guns. But I figured it was a good idea. So I put on my overcoat and went possum hunting.

There was an element of mystery to the whole thing. We drove over to Virginia and out over a lot of back roads. And the first thing I knew, we had a regular caravan. I don't know where they all came from, nor how they knew we were going to a possum hunt. But there were about four cars in front of us and three more behind.

"Well, here we are," the fellow driving our car said. And we all got out. I didn't know where we were, nor how he knew where he was, because we were just on the edge of a woods and it was pitch dark. There was one little house in the clearing, with a single light to mark it out. But if anyone turned out the light, I think it would have taken half a night's search to locate it again.

A man carrying a flashlight came around the corner of the building and, a half a minute later, another fellow showed up, with a half a dozen dogs.

"Here we go," the lead man said, and everybody followed him down a trail into the woods. I didn't have a flashlight, but everybody else seemed to have figured that a flashlight was a good thing to have along, and so I could make out that we were on a trail.

* * * *

FOR A WHILE, I thought everything was going to go pretty smoothly. It was a nice night. The trail wasn't too hard to follow and there was at least a part of a moon which reflected on the little creek.

"Yes sir," I thought, "this possum hunting is all right. There's nothing like a nice brisk walk on a fall night." And then the trail wound up a hill beside the creek, and the big guy up ahead started back down the hill in my direction—and fast. It seemed that he was pulling himself up the hill by hanging onto the underbrush, and something let go.

"Ha— Ha—," he said, as he picked himself up. "Darn thing came out by the roots."

I laughed, too, when I'd untangled myself from the bushes and examined my shins for the prints of his boots. All in good fun, I felt. Anything can happen on a possum hunt.

Well, things went along in a casual way again . . . for a while. The possum seemed to know the ropes and he stuck pretty close to the established trail. I couldn't see, for the life of me, why he didn't just head into the underbrush and hide out. But I guess maybe he was well trained.

The dogs weren't making much noise, just dancing around and letting out an occasional bark, and doing a lot of sniffing. In fact, the hunt had sort of slowed down to a walk. Pretty soon, though, we had to cross the creek.

I don't know that the dogs figured a possum had crossed the creek, or whether it was just the thing to do. But we crossed over and everyone was very careful not to get their feet wet. Of course, I wasn't satisfied to do a lot of stepping from stone to stone and then to a log, before landing on the bank. That was kid stuff.

I jumped. Everybody applauded. And I landed all right. But the bank was sort of soggy or something, and I must have lost my balance. I waded in from where I landed.

After that, I sort of lost interest in the hunt. It wasn't that I didn't like hunting, but my feet began to get heavy. They were cold, too. But, mostly, they were heavy. The water did something to my shoes and I felt that I was carrying two other people on both feet.

When the dogs dashed on ahead, though, and everybody began to quicken the pace, I was able to forget about my feet. Suddenly the lead man told everybody to stand still and, away up the hill, we could hear the dogs letting loose with everything they had. And they had plenty. For a minute, I thought the possum must have treed the dogs.

* * * *

WE ALL rushed up the hill and found the dogs hopping around the tree. For a while everybody just stood around the tree flashing their lights on the possum. That was all right with me, because it was the first chance I'd had to stand still since we started out.

Then one of the men who owned the dogs shinnyed up the tree. When he got up to where the possum was, he became a little more wary. Possums have small teeth but they are effective.

The man in the tree called for more light, and then he made a grab for the possum's tail. He made it all right and he started down, holding the possum by the tail. Every once in a while the possum would begin to curl up ready to nip the fellow's wrist. So he just shook the possum a little to straighten him out.

When he got to the ground, he tossed the possum into a flour sack. And everybody agreed that it was a mighty fine possum.

I was all for calling it a day—or maybe a night—because my overcoat was torn in a couple of places, and my feet were gaining weight by the minute.

However, that isn't what is done on a possum hunt. You just go around and around the woods until ready to drop, looking for possum after possum.

Well, I suppose I'd have held up if I hadn't got behind a "branch swinger." There are mean people and mean people, when it comes to traveling in the woods, but a "branch swinger" is the worst of the lot.

This fellow I'm telling you about had no regard for those in back of him. And I was directly behind him. Most people, traveling in the woods, will go through the underbrush, or by low-hanging trees, and release the branches gently. This fellow just carried them along with him and, after he'd gone about 6 or 8 feet, he'd let them fly.

Well, I didn't mind the first or even the third time a limb came cracking back to hit me in the face. But the time I figured things out so beautifully, and then got hit, was just too much.

I saw the limb coming. But it's hard to gauge distance at night.

"This time, I'll fool him," I thought, and I waited while he pulled the branch of a tree along with him. Then when I'd thought he'd let go, I walked up. Then he released the branch.

Even the dogs jumped when that limb hit. So I just sat down by the creek for a while, until the rest of them got through chasing around in the dark.

Gen. Craig Hails Marine 'Birthday'

Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, yesterday received a letter of congratulation upon the 162d anniversary of the Marine Corps from Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, United States Army.

In his message, Craig said:

"The officers and enlisted men of the United States Army join me in extending greetings to you and to the members of the Marine Corps on the 162d birthday of your famous organization. The birth of the Marine Corps preceded the birth of the republic. Throughout the Nation's history the marines have ever been among its most faithful and its most fearless defenders.

"The Army is proud to have been associated with the Marine Corps in the national defense for more than a century and a half. This association in peace and in war has been a comradeship welded by common traditions of courage, patriotism and devotion to duty."

Prettyman Drafts Efficiency Report

A special committee on District government efficiency, headed by E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, has started drafting its report, it was learned yesterday, and probably will submit it to the Commissioners within a week or ten days.

It is believed the report will follow in general outline the District reorganization plan proposed by Prettyman several years ago as a District official.

This plan includes general broadening of powers of the Commissioners and centralizing of authority under them, absorption of United States park police by the Metropolitan Police Department and elimination of Budget Bureau scrutiny of District estimates.

Doctors Open Syphilis Forum At G. W. Today

Ruhland and Singer Will Discuss Medical and Social Aspects.

A panel discussion on syphilis by Dr. Raymond A. Vonderlehr, Assistant United States Surgeon General; Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officerfi and nine other men prominent in medicine, will be held at 8 p. m. today in Stockton Hall, George Washington University, student leaders of the university antisyphilis campaign announced yesterday.

Discussion will center on the topic "Syphilic, Medical and Social Implications." Dr. Vonderlehr, director of the venereal disease division of the United States Public Health Service, will outline the facilities needed to control syphilic, with slide illustrations. Dr. Ruhland will describe local needs for the antisyphilis campaign.

Others who will join in the discussion are:

Dr. Melvin P. Isinger, director of public health education in the District; Dr. H. H. Hazen, professor of dermatology at Howard University; Dr. Carl Douglas Wells, assistant professor of sociology at G. W.; Dr. Charles R. L. Haley, Dr. George W. Creswell and Dr. Chester E Leese, members of the faculty at George Washington University School of Medicine; Ray Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, and Dr. Leah Huntley Cate, associate university physician.

Dr Earl Baldwin McKinley, dean of the Medical School and professor of bacteriology, will preside. He will read a message from Thomas Parran, jr., Surgeon General of the United States Army.

Police Drag River For Body of Man Who Fell Off Span

Harbor police dragged the Potomac River near Key Bridge yesterday for the body of an unidentified man who either fell or leaped from the bridge.

Witnessed by George Height, 19, colored, of Merryville, Va., the plunge occurred near the center of the bridge. The man, according to Height, was leaning over the parapet when suddenly he slid over the bridge headlong into the water.

The man disappeared immediately, Height said, and never reappeared. He was described as a medium sized man.

Nome Harbor Wrecked.

Nome, Alaska, Nov. 10 (AP).—The eastern end of the Nome waterfront, extending more than a mile, was wrecked today by pounding seas. Hardly a building in the district remained intact after a terrific storm. Business men estimated the loss at more than $125,000.

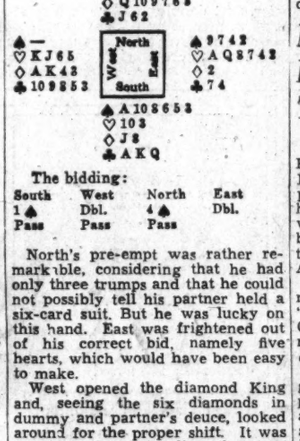
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The expert defender cannot always describe the exact target at which he is aiming. At times he is forced to proceed along general lines, choosing plays not so much for their virtue as for the reason that these plays have nothing wrong with them. Let us sit with West, in today's hand, and share his dilemma.

South, dealer.
East-West, vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl.	4 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

North's pre-empt was rather remarkable, considering that he had only three trumps and that he could not possibly tell his partner held a six-card suit. But he was lucky on this hand. East was frightened out of his correct bid, namely five hearts, which would have been easy to make.

West opened the diamond King and, seeing the six diamonds in dummy and partner's deuce, looked around for the proper shift. It was impossible to visualize the four tricks that would be necessary to defeat the contract. West did realize, however, that a diamond continuation was out of the question, which reduced the problem to hearts and clubs. The best defense might be to lead a heart, in the hope that East had the Ace and that the dummy could be ruffed down by heart continuation, thus developing trump tricks for East. There was no assurance, however, that East had the heart Ace. He might have club honors and in that case a heart lead might be fatal. The deciding factor was that a heart lead could be made at any time so long as West retained the diamond control; the club investigation, however, required immediacy.

On this correct analysis, West shifted to the ten of clubs. East played the seven as the beginning of an echo, and declarer won. Declarer led one trump but, when he saw the break, realized that to continue would be merely to concede two heart tricks and two diamonds. He attempted to save himself by leading the diamond Jack, West went up with the Ace, and on this trick East dropped his four of clubs, thus completing the echo. The defense was now clear. West led a club and East ruffed, then led a heart and ruffed another club for the second setting trick.

Obviously, a heart shift by West would be fatal. East would win but, even though he would return a club, declarer would ruff his remaining heart, cash the King and Queen of spades and then return to his own hand with a club, to draw East's trumps, thus conceding only two diamonds and one heart.

Mrs. Raffray, Free, Reported Speeding To Simpson's Side

Reno, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mary Kirk Raffray, girlhood friend of the Duchess of Windsor, eluded newspapermen at her "dude ranch" home here tonight and reportedly was racing across the country—a bachelor girl once more—to marry the duchess' former husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson.

Mrs. Raffray slipped away, after receiving congratulations at a gala "divorce party," at which Mrs. Connie de Bower, who plans to marry Raffray in this strange shuffle of hearts, was present.

It was believed Mrs. Raffray had gone to a small town east of here, probably Fernley, Nev., and boarded a train for the East to join the man she introduced to the present Duchess of Windsor 12 years ago. In New York Simpson said he expected her there.

Collins to Seek Funds for D. C. Public Counsel

Will Ask $7,500 in Supply Bill for Representative Before P. U. C.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, yesterday stated he would try to include $7,500 in the 1939 District supply bill to provide for a people's counsel before the Public Utilities Commission should the office be filled by Presidential appointment.

Collins, who clashed with members of the commission at last year's hearing, was critical of the recent street car fare order, although he admitted that a public utility should be allowed to "earn a reasonable profit on its investment."

Meanwhile, the commission reiterated its willingness to examine any data the Federation of Citizens Associations may submit in support of its resolution demanding a rehearing of the fare case.

Although the federation took its action Saturday night, the commission has not yet received its petition.

It is believed the Commission may, after receipt of the petition, reconsider the provision limiting sales of tokens in groups of 6 for 50 cents rather than 3 for 25 cents. There are no indications, however, that it will change its stand on the raise in the token rate from 7½ to 8 1-3 cents.

The move to fill again the office of people's counsel, vacant since William A. Roberts resigned a year ago, is expected to stir up a municipal controversy in which President Roosevelt will be the final judge.

Largely on the informal advice of the Commissioners, the President has refrained from making a nomination, but it is recalled that he blocked creation of a similar office in the New York State Public Service Commission when he was Governor.

District officials are unanimous in the belief that the office is unnecessary, that it creates interoffice friction, and that the $7,500 a year should be saved taxpayers.

No provision for the office is carried in the $50,000,000 estimates submitted by the Commissioners to the Budget Bureau.

Farmers Warned To Keep Freedom

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—Louis J. Taber, Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, urged American farmers today to "preserve their independence" in a keynote address opening the organization's seventy-first convention.

Referring to regimentation as a "sinister influence," Taber said, "agriculture must be the last of all institutions in our land to surrender to the philosophy that individual initiative, ability and freedom of choice are things of the past."

Announcement was made Tuesday by Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, that the hitherto unseen virus causing measles has a visible stage in the throat. Prof. Jean Broadhurst (above) was credited with the discovery, expected to enable doctors to detect and quarantine measles two or three days earlier than at present.

Britain Invokes Death Penalty To Quiet Arabs

Action Called First Step to Martial Law; Jewish Quotas Cut.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Nov. 10.—Great Britain today empowered military courts to exact the death penalty from gunmen and bombers in the Holy Land in what was considered the first step toward martial law.

The action was taken under a Palestine defense order-in-conucil to deal with a long reign of terror brought to a climax yesterday by the murder of five Jews.

Three new shootings followed upon the court announcement.

Sheikh Ansari, an active opponent of the exiled grand mufti of Jerusalem, was seriously injured by an assailant who fled into the Mosque of Omar.

An Arab was shot dead and a Jewish porter seriously injured in incidents in other parts of the city.

Sixteen Arabs were arrested today by British troops in a search for an Arab gang believed responsible for yesterday's slaying of five Jews from ambush.

At the same time, an ordinance was issued to give effect to the Government's declaration of July 7 limiting Jewish immigration in all categories to 8,000 persons from August, 1937, to March, 1936. The ordinance was described as an interim measure pending development of the plan to partition Palestine. No new immigration applications will be accepted until January.

The military courts will begin functioning November 18. It was indicated authorities would not hesitate to proclaim full martial law if terrorism was not checked.

D. C. Surgeons Start Drive on Appendicitis

Speakers Will Campaign Here Against High Mortality Rate.

The Washington Academy of Surgery last night announced an intensive educational drive designed to bring the District's mortality rate from appendicitis from 20 deaths per 100,000 population recorded last year to the "1.1 that can be justified."

Unnecessary deaths from appendicitis in Washington in 1936 totaled 104, which was 5 more deaths than resulted from traffic accidents during the same period, academy statistics show.

Speeches in schools and before any association which desires to become acquainted with the problem will form a major part of the drive, Dr. W. Warren Sager, president, said. Cards announcing the lecture service are being distributed throughout the city.

The lectures will be from 10 to 15 minutes in length and can be illustrated with slides, if desired. Academy members will be the lecturers.

A careful check of appendicitis deaths in all nongovernment hospitals of the District, Dr. Sager said, showed them attributable to three things—"waiting too long to call a docor, taking a big dose of salts after the attack, and rupture, which usually results from a combination of the first two."

Dr. C. B. Campbell, who will distribute drive cards through the Federation of Citizens Associations, pointed out that the mortality rate from appendicitis in the District increased from 14.6 in 1929 to 16 in 1935 and to 20 in 1936.

Thieves Get $1,500 In 3 Burglaries

Cash and property worth $1,500 was the loot colected by burglars yesterday.

Mrs. Claire W. Kite, 1642 Twenty-first street northwest, reported jewelry and a mink coat valued at $1,062, stolen from her home.

Salami Used as Weapon In Chicago Taxi Brawl

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—After the brawl was over today, detectives collected these weapons:

Several baseball bats, a length of rubber hose—and a long, hard, bludgeon-worthy salami sausage.

The ruction, involving "rebel members of a taxi drivers' union and opponents of their plan to hold a protest meeting, broke out in a hall. Nine men were held.

Strangers Invited For Thanksgiving

Newcomers to Washington who crave companionship at holiday time are invited to the Strangers Thanksgiving dinner. The party, which will be strictly "Dutch treat," is to be held at the Shoreham Hotel Thanksgiving Day.

Dr. Grace A. Thompson, who sponsored the first dinner in 1934, again will be chairman of the committee. Among sponsors is Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Others o. the committee include Dr. and Mrs. Hubert N. Roberts, Mrs. James M. Winston, Mr.. Caroline Daue, Miss Mae Murray and Miss Mary Mellinger.

Dr. Thompson arranged the first dinner as an experiment. The previous Christmas she, herself, had been alone in the city and she suspected that every holiday there are many people, new to Washington, who would like company. She expected only half a dozen responses to her open invitation; instead more than 100 persons joined her.

Spending Slash Pledged in Talk By Morgenthau

700 Millions May Be Saved on Works, Job and Farm Relief.

and at the same time to increase the number of income tax payers." He pointed out in this connection that fewer than three million people pay individual income taxes.

Defends Unbalanced Budget.

Morgenthau said flatly:

"We deliberately used an unbalanced Federal budget during the past four years to meet a great emergency. That policy has succeeded. The emerency that we faced in 1933 no longer exists."

As unsolved problems remaining for the New Deal, he listed unemployment, the recent "severe pressure" on the "speculative markets," the "declining tendency" of "our business indexes." And he added that he is "aware that some persons contend that another great spending program is desirable" to forestall another depression.

With these factors carefully weighed, he said, he reached "the firm conviction that the domestic problems which face us today are essentially different from those which faced us four years ago." Because of that conviction, he stated last night that one of the many measures essential to a solution of the present situation is a "determined movement toward a balanced budget."

Says Situation Has Changed.

The Secretary traced the differences in the 1933 and 1937 situations, remarking especially that in the crisis of 1933 the Federal Government was the only available agency with vast resources, while today the country is "nearing the end of one of the most active years in business history," with conditions "favorable for a continued increase in the level of business activity."

The secretary emphasized particularly in his speech that deficit spending at the present time would absorb capital funds which otherwise would be available to private business for financing purposes. In plain words he said:

"The basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital. We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry. We want to see private business expand."

Reassurances Repeated.

As proof that his pledges to business were not mere lip-service, the Secretary threaded his speech with his desire to see a balanced budget, with direct indications of the manner in which the Federal expenses can be slashed, with promises of no increase in taxes, and with a remark that was taken in some quarters as further indication the Administration plans to revise drastically the capital gains and losses tax and the undistributed corporate surplus profits tax—both long-standing targets of business criticism.

He said: "We do not wish to impose levies which tend to dry up the sources of tax revenue. The laws should be so written and administered that the taxpayer can continue to make a reasonable profit with a minimum of interference from his own Federal Government."

Industry has repeatedly charged, with increasing bitterness, that these two types of taxation have tended to dry up the very source of taxes—business income.

The estimated deficit for the 1937-1938 fiscal year, he pointed out, is $695,000,000, plus the $200,000,000 statutory debt requirement. The job, therefore, is to bring next year's expenditures within this year's income, he declared.

Large savings cannot be expected within the regular departments of the Government, he asserted, but declared annual expenditures for highways could be cut down from the appropriation program of $400,000,000 in the next two years toward the pre-depression total of $100,000,000 annually.

CCC May Cost Less.

Likewise the public works program, other than highways, can be slashed deeply, he indicated, from the appropriations and allocations already made of more than $600,000,000 for next year.

He expressed the further hope that employment conditions would make possible "a further substantial reduction" in outlays for unemployment relief and the Civilian Conservation Corps camps, and then argued at length for an agricultural program which does not "make excessive demands upon the Federal Treasury."

Speculation immediately ensued here on the extent of the damper which may be cast on farm legislation by Morgenthau's insistence that farm program costs be reduced. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's ever-normal granary program, it has been estimated, may cost $700,000,000 in its first year, if enacted. Morgenthau stated firmly:

"The farmer himself does not want subsidies, but rather such fair prices and such balanced production of crops as will make subsidies unnecessary for his decent economic status."

"No One Shall Starve."

In conclusion, he restated the President's position that "no one shall starve," and made a plea for cooperation of private enterprise.

Senator Byrd declared that "it is inevitable that the national credit will be impaired unless we retrench." He continued:

"I do not believe in destructive economy . . . But I do say that a mandate to progress and welfare without a mandate for solvency is a mandate impossible of fulfillment and most likely a mandate for disaster.

"For six years consecutively our expenditures by the Federal Government alone have greatly exceeded each year the combined gross value of all agricultural products and all the products of mines, even after inflating the farm income by Government payments."

Asserting the direct gross debt of Government has reached "the stupendous total of $37,019,677,682," he said the Government has guaranteed or partially guaranteed some $5,000,000,000 more in obligations of Federal or semi-Federal corporations.

Text of Morgenthau Speech on U. S. Spending

Secretary of Treasury Promises Budget Will Be Balanced.

Text of Secretary Morgenthau's speech before the Academy of Political Science in New York last night, given out here by the Treasury Department:

I welcome the opportunity to discuss before the members and guests of the Academy of Political Science the subject of Federal spending and its relation to the balancing of the Federal budget.

Nineteen years ago tomorrow, we signed the armistice ending the World War. That war was enormously costly in human values, and it was enormously costly in material values. In the two years between the middle of 1917 and the middle of 1919, the Federal Government sustained a net deficit of $22,000,000,000.

During the past four years, this country has been engaged in another war. This time our enemy was a great economic disaster. In this war, we fought with jobs and with dollars to save farmers from losing their farms; to save home owners from losing their homes; to give not only bread but work to the unemployed; to increase the security of jobs, property values, and business profits; and to bring order out of chaos in our economic system.

This war, like that other war, required a many-sided campaign under intelligent and courageous leadership—a leadership that was magnificently supplied by President Roosevelt.

Vast Spending Required.

Finally, this war, like that other war, required a large spending program. This program, plus the special needs arising out of the great drought and the prepayment of the soldiers' bonus, necessitated net outlays during the four years ended June 30, 1937, of some $14,000,000,000 in excess of our receipts.

Of course, it is easily possible to criticize some of the detailed uses of the relief funds. Let us concede that there was some waste. In any expenditure program of such magnitude this is inevitable. But, contrasted with the human and material values at stake, such wastes as may have occurred shrink into insignificance.

We deliberately used an unbalanced Federal budget during the past four years to meet a great emergency. That policy has succeeded. The emergency that we faced in 1933 no longer exists.

I am fully aware that many of our problems remain unsolved. I am aware that there still remains a considerable volume of unemployment; that the speculative markets have recently been under severe pressure; and that our business indexes have recently shown a declining tendency. I am further aware that some persons contend that another great spending program is desirable to ward off the risk of another business depression.

Picture Has Changed.

I claim no prophetic insight into the future. But, after giving serious and careful consideration to all of these and other factors, I have reached the firm conviction that the domestic problems which face us today are essentially different from those which faced us four years ago. Many measures are required for their solution. One of these measures, but only one, in the present juncture is a determined movement toward a balanced budget.

Early in 1933, after three years of progressive deterioration, our whole economic mechanism was demoralized. Under these conditions, there was no agency outside of the Federal Government with the resources and the courage to bring about a business revival.

Today the situation is greatly changed. We are now nearing the end of one of the most active years in the business history of this country. On the whole, this high level of activity has been of a healthy character—not of the character that usually marks an unhealthy boom and precedes a serious depression. The present situation is not characterized by the existence of huge inventories, high interest rates, over-extended credit positions, or great surpluses of housing and capital equipment. We have not reached the stage of full employment of our productive resources. On the contrary, from all these standpoints, conditions are favorable for a continued increase in the level of business activity.

This stands in contrast to the unhealthy excesses of 1929. It stands in even sharper contrast to the banking collapse, the bread lines, the bankruptcies, and the general demoralization of 1933.

Credit Remains Sound.

Despite the substantial increase in the public debt during the past four years, the credit of the Federal Government has remained absolutely unimpaired. Not once during even the darkest days of the depression did the Treasury experience the slightest difficulty in borrowing all the funds that were required. Moreover, the rates of interest on our borrowings have been lower, for comparable securities, than at any other time in the history of the country.

But the underlying conditions that made deliberate deficit spending the wisest kind of policy during the depression have been altered during the progres of recovery. Thus, when we borrowed during the depression to finance our deficit spending, a large part of the funds was obtained through an expansion of bank credit. To this extent, our spending did not absorb capital funds that might otherwise have gone into private industry, nor did it absorb by taxation funds that might otherwise have gone into private consumption. Even to the extent that our bonds and notes were purchased by nonbanking investors, the effect was largely to put to work capital funds that would otherwise have remained idle.

Our industrial recovery of the last year, however, has created large new demands for private capital. Our commercial banks have been again utilizing their credit resources for the financing of private industry. During the present calendar year, the insured commercial banks of the country have substantially reduced their holdings of Government securities in order to meet actual and prospective demands for commercial credit. The obligations that they sold, plus an amount equal to the securities newly marketed by the Treasury, were purchased by investors. Any deficit spending under conditions of active demand for private capital would have to be financed in large part by capital funds that would otherwise be available for business purposes.

Balanced Budget Is Aim.

The basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital. We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry. We want to see private business expand. We believe that much of the remaining unemployment will disappear as private capital funds are increasingly employed in productive enterprise. We believe that one of the most important ways of achieving these ends at this time is to continue progress toward a balance of the Federal budget.

* * * *

I turn now to the immediate practical aspects of budget balancing for the coming fiscal year. What are the controlling figures?

Our total receipts for this year were estimated in the President's budget summation of October 19 at about six billion six hundred and fifty millions, and our total net expenditures at about seven billion three hundred and forty-five millions.

To attain an ordinary balancing of the budget next year—that is, a balance after full provision for accruing liabilities for old-age benefit payments, but exclusive of debt retirement—it would be necessary to accomplish a net improvement of about seven hundred million dollars in our budgetary position, as last estimated. To be prudent, we should not count on an increase in revenues next year from the existing tax structure. Nor should we impose additional taxation. Instead, we should plan to bring next year's expenditures within this year's income.

But where can cuts totaling seven hundred millions be made? After a careful study of the whole problem, I have come to the following conclusions: On the one hand, while everything possible is being and will be done to keep a tight rein on the regular operating expenses of the Federal Government, including the national defense and interest on the public debt, I do not believe that we can find large savings in this field. Further, our expenditures under the social security act will increase next year.

Savings Can Be Made.

On the other hand, by focusing attention on the several classes of expenditures that have been mainly responsible for our past deficits—namely, public highways, public works, unemployment relief and agriculture—it is apparent that great savings can be made.

Let me give you an idea of the possibilities for savings in these fields.

First, take the item of highway expenditures. Prior to the depression, the Federal grants to the States for public highway construction generally ran under one hundred million dollars annually. This year the total Federal outlays for highways, inclusive of emergency expenditures, are estimated at two hundred and fifty-three millions; and, in addition, the existing highway programs call for new appropriations totaling more than four hundred million dollars for the next two years. I believe it is now time to return to the average annual level of highway expenditures that existed prior to the depression, especially because during the past few years many other millions of dollars have been spent for highways out of relief appropriations.

Second, there is the field of public works, other than highways, on which we are spending five hundred and seventy-three millions this year. This is a greater sum than the total that was spent for this purpose during the entire five-year period between 1926 and 1930, inclusive. Next year, despite the fact that there will be available from appropriations and allocations already made for this purpose more than six hundred millions, I believe that we can and should move definitely toward a lower level of public works outlays.

CCC Spending Reduced.

Third, I sincerely hope that employment conditions will make possible further substantial reduction in our outlays for unemployment relief and the CCC camps. During the present fiscal year, by reason of more active private business, these expenditures are already being reduced by more than seven hundred and fifty millions below last year's.

I turn next to our expenditures on behalf of agriculture. The total of this year's expenditures, exclusive of public highways, for the regular activities of the department, the soil-conservation program, rural electrification, resettlement, commodity loans and lower interest rates for Federal land bank borrowers exceeds $900,000,000. Despite the magnitude of this sum, you are all aware that possible further measures involving large additional expenditures are now being discussed.

I am strongly in favor of a long-range program to maintain the independence and the purchasing power of the farmer. Such a program must take into consideration the farmer's opportunities in the foreign markets as well as in those at home; and no agricultural program can long endure which makes excessive demands upon the Federal Treasury or is unfair to consumers.

The farmer himself does not want subsidies, but rather such fair prices and such balanced production of crops as will make subsidies unnecessary for his decent economic status.

Balancing the budget is as much in the interest of farmers as in the interest of other parts of our population; and it requires the cooperation of the farmer as well as of other sections of the public.

Only with the solid backing of the public can we hope to achieve economies totaling $700,000,000 in the four fields that I have cited.

* * * *

There may be some persons who would counsel a more drastic reduction of expenditures or a program of far heavier taxation in order to make certain a more substantial reduction in the public debt in the next fiscal year. There are serious objections to either of these courses.

I have already indicated that I believe it undesirable to increase taxation. There are equally compelling reasons why we should not reduce expenditures too suddenly and too drastically. I strongly favor a vigorous program for the progressive reduction of Federal expenditures to the minimum demanded by the Government's responsibilities.

In Transition Period.

Obviously, however, one reaches a point in reducing Government expenditures at which no further reductions can be made, unless it is decided to cripple many essential governmental activities—in other words, unless it is decided to make drastic changes in national policy. For example, it would mean consideration of such things as weakening our national defense, and slowing up or abandoning flood control, soil erosion prevention, and relief for the aged and the unemployed. Such a course, I believe, would not have the approval of either the American people or their elected representatives in Congress.

Moreover, it would clearly be disastrous to many of the needy unemployed, and disruptive to many sections of private industry, if we were to cut Government expenditures in the coming fiscal year by much more than the amount I have indicated.

We are definitely in a transition period between unbalanced and balanced Federal budgets, but I firmly believe that there is just as much danger to our economy as a whole in moving too rapidly in this direction as there would be in not moving at all.

Relatively few persons realize the striking fact that the net improvement this year in the budgetary position of the Federal Government as estimated will amount to more than $2,000,000,000. In other words, the net deficit this year is estimated at less than $700,000,000, as compared with more than $2,700,000,000 last year.

This net improvement of more than $2,000,000,000 in a single year provides the best answer to those who, in most cases ignorant of the true facts, have publicly despaired of our ability to balance the Federal budget.

Revenue Increased.

True, much of this year's anticipated budgetary improvement comes from increased revenues, but we are supplementing this by also seeking reductions in expenditures.

In addition to these considerations, I should like to point out that, as a result of the social security act and related State laws, it is estimated that the Federal Government next year will receive more than $1,000,000,000 net for investment in Government securities for the unemployment trust fund and the old-age reserve account. Although this investment will not change the total amount of the public debt, it will with a balanced budget result in the transfer to these reserves accounts of more than a billion dollars of Government obligations now held by private investors.

Even during the decade of the twenties, when the Treasury was receiving large payments of interest and principal on war debts, and from the sale of surplus war materials, the maximum reduction made in any single year in the public debt held by private investors was about $1,300,000,000. The rate at which it is safe to reduce the public debt in private hands depends upon the rate at which private funds flow into investment channels. It is unsafe to go too fast.

* * * *

Although we are not contemplating any increase in the total tax burden, the character of our tax structure is being given earnest consideration.

The Federal tax system affects everyone in the country. We in the Treasury in studying tax problems have two objectives always before us: First, that the tax burden shall be distributed as fairly as possible, and second, that the collection of taxes shall be as little burdensome to the taxpayer as possible.

Inequalities Studied.

It is with these aims that, by direction of the President, we have been reviewing the whole tax structure in the last few months and are just now in the process of presenting to a committee of Congress the information we have collected. The study has not been directed toward raising additional revenue. Instead, we have sought to determine whether there are inequalities and injustices in the distribution of the tax burden and whether there are some taxes whose cost of collection and whose burdensome effect outweigh the revenue gain. In addition, we want to simplify collection and make the taxpayer's record-keeping less difficult.

We realize that our tax laws are too complicated; we want to make them less so. We realize that there are inequities; we want to eliminate as many of them as we can.

In making this study we have invited the assistance and the advice of groups of taxpayers and of individuals. We want to hear the taxpayer's side of the story. We want all the facts we can get and we have obtained both facts and opinions.

Our tax revenues come largely from individual earnings and business profits. We do not wish to impose levies which tend to dry up the sources of tax revenue. The laws should be so written and administered that the taxpayer can continue to make a reasonable profit with a minimum of interference from his own Federal Government; provided that the taxpayer co-operates with his Government in carrying out the purpose and the spirit of the tax laws. Of course, tax policy cannot properly be determined from exceptional cases. We must look at the whole picture. We base our decisions on extensive information and upon analysis of actual tax records.

Income Tax Is Only Half.

The amount of our income tax revenue is only about half our total internal revenue. Less than 3,000,000 people out of our total population pay individual Federal income taxes. We would be applying the principle of capacity to pay more justly if we were to reduce the number of consumer taxes and at the same time to increase the number of income tax payers. Taxpayers who are squarely confronted with their own tax burdens are bound to be keenly alive to the way the money is being spent by their Government.

The budget now nearing completion is predicated on a definite estimate of receipts, based on the existing tax structure. It is a cardinal point of our policy that the tax system, as revised, must not yield a smaller return for 1939 than the present system would yield.

Let me repeat: We want to adjust inequalities and remedy defects in the tax laws. In doing this, we have sought the help of the taxpayer and have given him a sympathetic hearing. If we find that the operation of any particular tax is unfair, we stand ready to say so publicly.

* * * *

My object this evening has been to present, as clearly and as frankly as I know how, a comprehensive picture of the Federal expenditures and the budgetary outlook. I have tried to make plain the underlying economic reasons, as well as the humanitarian ones, for the past deficits; and I have tried ot bring out clearly the considerations that now demand further definite steps toward a balanced Federal budget. I have shown why, in my opinion, this balance should be sought by a reduction in expenditures without an increase in the total of the tax burden. But I have also shown that there is a limit to reductions; and that balancing of the budget needs the help of industry to keep up total tax receipts unless we are again to resort to deficit financing.

Chief Aims Cited.

The principal aims of our budgetary policy have been, and I hope will continue to be, to promote a high level and healthy character of business activity, a maximum volume of employment at good wages in private industry, a reasonable return to capital and enterprise, fair treatment for our agricultural population, and adequate revenues to meet the services now demanded of the Federal Government.

The attainment of these ends rests very greatly on private initiative and on the co-operation of private enterprise. This is a necessary supplement to any efforts which the Government can put forth. This Administration is going to do everything possible to promote a continuation of recovery and to balance the budget through cutting expenditures. But I wish to emphasize that in no event will this Administration allow anyone to starve, nor will it abandon its broad purpose to protect the weak, to give human security and to seek a wider distribution of our national income. We are confident that, with the full co-operation of the business world, our present difficulties will be overcome; and that the aims that I have set forth above, which are properly those of private business as well as those of the National Government, will be achieved.

Spain Ambassador Denies Reds Rule

Communist domination of the loyalist government exists no more than Communist domination of New York City, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, Spanish ambassador, indicated at a monthly luncheon of the Princeton Club yesterday.

He pointed out that the loyalist cabinet includes representatives of the moderate Republican and Basque Catholic parties as well as two Communists.

Professor of political science at the University of Granada and Madrid for over 25 years, Dr. de los Rios insisted that the loyalist government was constitutionally elected. He said that under the republic religious liberty was guaranteed in Spain.

Roosevelt Urges Nation to Boost Red Cross Drive

Citizens of the Nation were urged yesterday by President Roosevelt, who is also chief executive of the American Red Cross, to respond generously and promptly to the Red Cross membership roll which begins Armistice Day and ends Thanksgiving. The President's statement said:

"It is with a feeling of deep pride and gratitude that we look back upon the accomplishments of the Red Cross during the year, when the country was faced with the gravest disaster in its peace-time history. Acting as our national relief agency, the Red Cross gave practical assistance to more than 1,000,000 people driven from their homes by the floods which swept through the Ohio and Mississippi River valleys. During the same 12 months, the organization brought speedy and efficient relief to the victims of more than 100 other disasters which visited our people.

"In order that the ever-increasing calls for Red Cross service may be met promptly wherever and whenever they are sounded, it is of the utmost importance that we further increase the popular support always given to this great organization. Therefore urge our people everywhere to respond generously and promptly to the Red Cross membership Roll Call."

HARLAN MILLER Over the Coffee

He lies on a hillside southwest of the Potomac . . . Below him airplanes rise from the drome in the lowlands and fly above the small boats in the river—a thrilling sight against the Washington backdrop, if he could but see. . . .

On the left, beyond the formal terrace, beyond the river, the gray stone buildings of the Government march from the Lincoln Memorial past the White House and the Washington Monument to the voluptuous dome of the Capitol.

• • • •

There the messages were written, the speeches uttered, the laws voted with ayes and noes and signed; there the military commands went forth which sent him across the sea to die in a foreign war, the Unknown Soldier, this most singular enigmatic hero of our century, under the marble slab in Arlington.

"——a wreath from the Duke."

Hundreds have stood here whose son he may have been, whose lover or husband or father perhaps he was . . . Did he leave a son behind? An eager, militant, warlike son? A son with a bitter hatred for war? His son is trench size now.

• • • •

What manner of a man was he? Probably he was in his middle twenties, 24 or 26 . . . Was he a volunteer? Was he drafted? Did his heart leap or sink as he put on his uniform the first time? Was his blood racing with high adventure as he climbed the gangplank?

• • • •

Was he a tall, slim, silent, drawling son of the West? Was he short, husky, garrulous, passionate? Was he of revolutionary stock or the son of an immigrant? . . . Was he blond, dark-haired, red-haired with blue eyes? Was he shy and withdrawn, or was he the life of the party, always kidding? Was he an aristocrat like Quentin Roosevelt, or was he the obscure son of an obscure family, as unknown in life as in death? Was he a lieutenant or a non-com or a private?

• • • •

What was the way of his death? Did it stalk him and find him in his trench? Did he go forth to meet it crawling in the wet murky dawn through the stubble of some inauspicious yellow field? Did he go toward it with a rush, invincible, invulnerable, immortal?

• • • •

By what sudden quirk did his death overtake him? Did he swerve to left or right to tighten a gap in the line? Did he avoid one bursting shell and praise his lucky star, only to run into another? Did death come to him with merciful swiftness? Did it torture him for agonized hours seeming like eons? Did he lie for weeks in some thicket or shell-hole, half-buried?

Had he ever seen this Washington, his Capital, which now lies spread out below him? Had he wandered through its avenues as a tourist with a camera? Had he once looked down from the Monument toward this Virginia hillside where he would one day lie in enviable but anonymous glory?

• • • •

Had he ever strolled among these graves in Arlington, a little awed and depressed by the reminders of the illustrious dead, faintly troubled by the uneventful happiness of his own obscure, peaceful life, who is now honored for a multitude, beyond them all?

• • • •

Would he smile if he stood now on these broad stone steps, watching one of his 4,000,000 buddies pose uncomfortably but stubbornly against this marble slab while a plump fortyish wife snaps a camera and the sentry marches past eyes front toward the canvas sentry box and the green houses of the experimental farm in the valley below glisten in the westerly sun?

• • • •

His last hour . . . The top sergeant says we've got 'em on the run . . . Next week the war will be over . . . Anyhow, we're due to move out tomorrow . . . Damn this mud! . . . Maybe two weeks' leave in some dry, sunny place in the south of France . . . Haven't been dry for three days . . . Maybe a bottle of wine with a pretty French girl . . . Home before Christmas and a parade down Main street . . . The job and the girl . . . The hero's homecoming . . . So much to tell . . .

Baltimore Group Fights Receipts Tax

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Baltimore Association of Commerce wrote all members of the Maryland delegation in Congress, asking them to vote for repeal of the gross receipts tax in the District of Columbia.

Henry M. Warfield, president of the association, said the tax is collected from Maryland firms doing business in Washington, but that no similar tax is collected by Maryland from Washington concerns operating in Maryland.

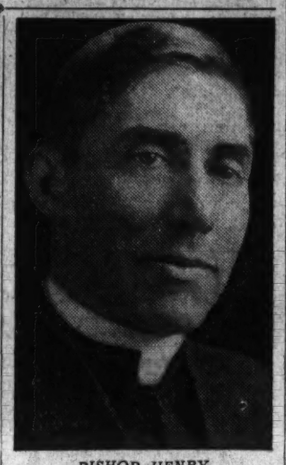
Vocationless Church May Die, Says Bishop

Bishop H. St. G. Tucker Stresses Mission to 600 at Celebration.



BISHOP HENRY ST. GEORGE TUCKER.

A church which loses sight of its vocation may forfeit its right to existence, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia and Presiding-Bishop-elect of the Protestant Episcopal Church, warned about 600 Sunday School teachers, clergy and laity in an address here last night.

Bishop Tucker, a collateral descendant of George Washington, spoke before a meeting in St. Mark's Church, Third and A streets northeast, on the fortieth anniversary of the Sunday School Institute of the diocese. It was his first address in Washington since his election last summer by the general convention at Cincinnati.

"As I look back on Christian history," said Bishop Tucker, "it seems to me that the church has no automatic guarantee of perpetuity. I think, for instance, of the church of Northern Africa, once the great glory of Christendom, which gave us many of the great fathers and much of the foundation of our theology. But it became absorbed in its own affairs, preoccupied with questions of doctrine and discipline and lost its missionary spirit. Then came the Mohammedans sweeping everything before them.

"I do not believe that God will ever permit the teaching of His truth to cease, but I do believe that God takes the privilege of leadership, and even of existence, away from one portion of the church when that portion fails of its vocation, and hands it over to another."

He defined the vocation of the church as the extension to others of the "good news given by Our Lord to His disciples." In this sense he emphasized the need of "vocational education" in the Sunday schools, which he declared to be "the most important sphere of service in the church today." He continued, "We have not only got to train children to be members of the church; we must also train them to take their places in the missionary organization of the church.

"The whole world has now become one community. When part of the world is affected by a moral plague the whole world is threatened. What is happening now in Asia is an illustration. The world cannot much longer exist half Christian and half pagan."

The Rev. W. R. Moody, rector of St. Mark's and chairman of the Institute, presided at the services last night. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, spoke at a dinner earlier in the evening in the parish hall.

Reorganization Pushed as First Bill for Action As 'Slummers' Lynching Bloc Plans Fight for Place.

Proposals to move Government reorganization bills to the top of the special session calendar gained backing yesterday as returning House leaders surveyed an uncertain legislative outlook.

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, House majority leader, saw "no barrier" to considering the reorganization bill first, if the farm bill and other preferred measures are not ready for action.

A proposal by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to make Government reorganization the first order of Senate business last week drew sharp protests from mebers of the Senate's anti-lynching bill bloc.

Both houses have agreed by resolution to make farm legislation the No. 1 bill, but neither House nor Senate Agriculture committees will be ready with a final draft of the farm measure when the opening gavel sounds.

The Senate by resolution agreed to make the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill the second order of business. His group plans to oppose in the Senate any effort to give reorganization right of way over the antilynching measure, Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, said.

The House already has passed two separate reorganization measures and two more are awaiting consideration. The Senate will consider them all in an omnibus bill, already placed on the calendar by Byrnes. Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, will lead the opposition fight on the Administration's reorganization plan. His minority report on the bill has not yet been filed.

Citizens Criticize 3-Token Sale Ban

Disapproval of the rule forbidding sale of three street car tokens for 25 cents was expressed last night at a meeting of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, while consideration of the recent increase in price was referred to the public utilities committee.

Fred M. Grant, chairman of the fire and police committee, reported he has requested the Budget Bureau for a hearing on intallation of a traffic light at the corner of Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Replying to a request for markers to indicate traffic lights at the corner of South Dakota and Rhode Island avenues, the District traffic bureau has promised a study of the condition at that intersection, considered one of the more dangerous crossings in the area.

The question of denying free use of District public schools to nonresidents, except those in the armed forces of the United States, was referred to the school committee for further study.

Names American Liberals as Unwitting Enemies of the Church.

American leaders who "enjoy intellectual slumming" are aligning themselves with organizations that today threaten both Christianity and civilzation, the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, associate professor of Catholic University, charged last night in a lecture at the Willard Hotel under auspices of the Convert League of the Catholic Daughters of America.

The American League Against War and Fascism was named by Dr. Sheen as such an organization, and the following persons denounced by him as being "betrayers who have signed documents saying they favor its principles:"

"Intellectual Slumming."

"These are but a few of the intellectuals among the 150 whose names have been signed. I wager not 60 per cent of the 150 knew what they were indorsing. They were enjoying intellectual slumming, I think, more than they were intending to line up against the church, against morality, against all things you and I hold most dear," he declared.

Because of this "betrayal by the intellectuals," Catholics need to strengthen bonds of sympathy among themselves today as never before in history, he said, asserting that sufferings of ancient Roman martyrs "were as nothing compared to what the clergy has suffered in Spain."

He charged that France has betrayed the Catholic Church by its attitude during the Spanish crisis, and declared that "every French nun has purchased her lay clothes, as a means of escape when the revolution comes."

25,000 Churches Wrecked.

In Spain he said 5,000 churches and chapels have been destroyed, 14,000 of the clergy and 300,000 noncombatant Catholics killed.

"If this situation should be reversed and in America we had 14,000 members of Protestant churches killed, selected from all denominations, and 21,000 of the Baptist ministers killed—which would be a third of them all, as was true in Spain—and in New York they were killing 225 Episcopalians a day . . .

"And suppose these churches called on us for aid. If we did not help them we would be either knaves or fools, and it would be for God to decide which," he declared.

He commended the Crusade of Prayer started in New York last week and urged all church persons to join, "if they are to organize a popular front against the enemies of religion."

U.S. Workers' Gifts Swell Chest Funds

Many Government Units Exceed Quotas in First Report.

Officials of the Community Chest drive for funds to aid Washington unfortunates took heart in prospects for the drive's success last night as Governmental departments reported as much as 434 per cent of their quotas and a number of group solicitation firms scored 100 per cent with increases in the amounts subscribed.

At the drive's first report meeting in the Willard Hotel yesterday, a total of $239,507.11 or 11.63 per cent of the quota was tallied for the opening day. Chest heads reported themselves as being particularly pleased with the showing of the Government departments, holding it a portent of the campaign's success.

The general spirit of optimism apparent among the 1,000 campaign workers attending the meeting was echoed by Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, U. S. A. retired, now governor of the U. S. Soldiers Home, who was chairman for the day.

"The 'general staff' is well organized," he said, and the 'army' has been faithfully drilled. You, who seek the gifts of other Washingtonians in this cause, are the leaders of this campaign. Upon the way you present your message depends the success or failure of the campaign."

Gen. Coleman, a former chairman of the Governmental Unit, said he experienced a "feeling of homesickness at not being in the fight this year," but predicted a "splendid showing" for the unit, now under the chairmanship of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wayne Chatfield Taylor.

From her first-hand knowledge of the work of Washington's 64 Community Chest agencies, Miss Gertrude Bowling, executive director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, made an appeal for more generous contributions to the chest in a talk over Station WOL last night.

Chairman Richard W. Hynson, of the Special Assignments Unit, reported 27 pledges for a total of $110,950; Chauncey G. Parker, chairman of the Metropolitan Unit, reported 1,050 pledges for a total of $18,914.60; John L. Vandegrift, chairman of the Group Solicitation Unit, reported 1,793 pledges for a total of $42,966.39; Chairman Wayne Chatfield Taylor, of the Governmental Unit, reported 6,798 pledges for a total of $65,808.21; Chairman Randolph Leigh, of the Suburban Unit, reported 152 pledges for a total of $867.91.

Governmental departments reporting more than 100 per cent of quota were:

Dairy Industry, Agriculture; Alley Dwelling Authority of D. C.; Regional Agricultural Credit, Farm Credit Administration; Revolving Fund, Farm Credit Administration; Review Committee, Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Division of Examinations, Federal Reserve System; Division of Security Loans, Federal Reserve System; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Also the Accounts and Deposits, Treasury Department; Technical Staff, Internal Revenue; Space Control, Procurement Division, Treasury Department; Commissioner of Public Debt, Treasury; Register of the Treasury, Public Debt Service; Secretary's Division, Treasury Department; Administrative Division, U. S. Tariff Commission; Executive Division, U. S. Tariff Commission; Classification Committee, Administrator's Office, Veterans Administration, and Home Economics 1-9, Public Schools.

Group solicitation firms reporting 100 per cent or more were: Ellett and Short Inc., Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Second National Bank, Episcopal Home for Children, Washington Heart Association, Julius Lansburgh Furniture Co., Grosner's and McLachlen Banking Corporation.

Gifts of $100 and more reported yesterday were $15,000, Potomac Electric Power Co.; $10,000, Woodward & Lothrop and Mrs. Chauncey Mitchell Depew; $8,000, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss; $6,000, American Security & Trust Co.; Frank R. Jovial Artist of Justice Building Here to 'Hang' 16 Law-Givers

He arrived in town yesterday, accompanied by a bevy of barristers of such renown that the great Blackstone, patron saint of every budding law student, is just another member of the troupe.

Now he is busy hanging them, from Moses and Justinian right down the line to Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Boardman Robinson, hale and jovial and reddish-bearded, is the painter whom the Treasury Department commissioned to do a series of 18 murals for the Department of Justice Building. The job will gross him $20,000, which seems like quite a bit until one considers that the Coloradan worked for 31 months.

The actual painting was relatively simple. But it was in digging up likenesses of the ancients, and poring over law books for character data and in studying the subjects' philosophies that the real work came in.

Members of this particular "hall of fame," which will be on full view in about two weeks, are Moses, Menes, Hammurabi, Solon, Justinian, Papinian, Sir Edward Coke, Blackstone, John Marshall, Chancellor Kent, Thomas Aquinas, Justice Holmes, Grotius, Vitoria, Jesus and Socrates.

That makes 16 paintings. The other two murals are groups, one depicting a version of the signing of the Constitution and the other the signing of the Magna Charta.

Robinson has graced none of the pictures with controversial inscriptions, but he said he wouldn't be surprised if a lawyer of two crabs at the omission of this legal giant or another.

He is satisfied that he did his best to include the most important ones—Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone was among the many who counseled him.

Though he was born on September 6, 1876 (in Nova Scotia), Robinson is no more than 25 years old, as far as freshness of outlook is concerned. Accordingly, he chafed a bit at his chores, knowing that he would have to be conventional, orthodox and dignified, in portraying the great of jurisprudence.

He got in some individual touches here and there, however. For example, the portrait of a meaty, austere Blackstone has a male bust setting on a table in the background. The figure has a very sour face, mouth drooping at the corners and a pair of eyes radiating acid.

In his Constitution-signing mural, Robinson has a little colored boy, well caparisoned, liftin a cloak from a chair. This picture, incidentally, may stir up a little row of its own, based upon the artist's selection of the eight signers to be depicted. They are Washington, Franklin, Madison, James Wilson, John Rutledge, Charles Pinckney, Rufus King and Gouverneur Morris.

In the Magna Charta group, which shows a highly disgruntled King John about to sign on the dotted line, you will see a self-portrait. A hind, or farm servant, shown in attendance upon the epochal scene is none than Robinson himself.

He was especially hard pressed to find a likeness of Vitoria, the Dominican monk, who pioneered in international law. In fact, he didn't. But you will find Vitoria in the gallery. Robinson made a five-minute pencil sketch of Dr. James Scott Brown, translator of the Spaniard's works, and from that developed a portrait which will have to serve. Dr. Scott, who is secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, has not yet seen what he—pardon—Vitoria looks like.

Capitol Painters' Strike Is Halted

Striking painters, called out in protest against the hiring of nonunion men to work alongside them, returned to their jobs at the Capitol and House Office Buildings yesterday after 24 hours' idleness.

A truce between David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol, and Painters Local No. 368 was arranged by the Labor Department's conciliation service. Both sides look to Congress for permanent settlement of the condition which precipitated the walkout of 48 union painters on Tuesday.

The workers were engaged in painting corridors and doing general maintenance work in preparation for the convening of Congress next Monday.

Bandit Gets $40.

A big revlover carried beneath the man's coat coupled with his demand, "give me all your money and I mean business," cost Albert Lawrence, 1925 N street northwest, $40 in a holdup of his liquor store at 2005 M street northwest. Lawrence said the robber was a brown-skinned colored man.

Citizen Group Acts To Define Its Area

Instructed to "negotiate an amicable agreement, if possible," a special committee was appointed last night by members of the American University Park Citizens Association, to settle differences of territorial jurisdiction with the Friendship Citizens Association.

Other action taken by the association last night included a resolution approving the order of the Public Utilities Commission increasing car-token fares in the District. The order, in effect, members agreed, decreased bus fares on the Massachusetts avenue line for residents in American University Park.

E. J. Lockwood, director of night and summer schools of the District, addressed members on the night-school system in Washington.

6 Groups Join United Front On D.C. Taxes

17 Civic Organizations Are Represented at First Session.

The District Council on Municipal Administration, organized to fight the business privilege levy and to advise on other taxation matters affecting the District, became an active body last night with the definite adherence of six professional and businessmen's associations.

The newly formed "united front" consists of the Federation of Businessmen's Association, Carload Shippers Association, Motion Picture Theater Owners Association, Washington Liquor Dealers Association, New Center Market Food Dealers Association and the Portia Club, a group of women lawyers.

Other organizations expected to join within two weeks include the Graphic Arts Association and the District Medical and Dental societies.

At last night's meeting at the Hotel Hamilton, under chairmanship of A. Julian Brylawski, of the Motion Picture Theater Owners, immediate incorporation of the council was decided upon. Jacques Downs was named temporary treasurer and a committee to draft by-laws was formed, consisting of Hason Welch, of the Bar Association; Philip Ershler and Brylawski, of the M. P. T. O. A., and Theodore S. Grape, of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

Brylawski announced he had already obtained permission from the Budget Bureau to present views of the council at a hearing on the proposed District budget. "The secrecy of the Commissioners, requests increases the difficulty of a fight for a lower budget," Brylawski said. The sum of $40,700,000 was mentioned as probable size of the official 1939 proposals.

Last night's meeting, attended by 17 District organizations, was adjourned to next Wednesday.

Miss Dewson Is Feted at Essary Party

Honoree, Political Leader, Now Member of Social Security Board.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

As everyone who knows her doubtless will agree, anything connected with Miss Mary W. Dewson is sure to be a success.

The former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee who recently was appointed to the Social Security Board has won renown on any number of accounts since her boarding school days when she had her first taste of politics in organizing a "Cleveland for President" boom.

Winning national acclaim in recent years as the organizer of women voters for the Democratic Party, Miss Dewson—affectionately called "Molly" by her many friends—has come to be recognized as one of the more able and admired women around Washington.

"There's nobody who can get things done—like Molly Dewson," said one of the guests at Mrs. J. Fred Essary's luncheon for her yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club.

Honor Guest Highly Admired

There was much talk of this type at the long table in the club's spacious dining room. In fact, if all the compliments quietly expressed about the honor guest had been spoken outright, the luncheon would have turned into a testimonial meeting.

The success of the party was assured from the time guests began to arrive at the club and collected around the hostess and honoree for a pleasant prelude over the cocktails and tomato juice.

From the time she entered the drawing room, on through the luncheon when she sat directly opposite the hostess, Miss Dewson was the center of attention. Wearing a black frock trimmed with a wide collar and deep cuffs of handmade lace, she had chosen a black hat circled with a gold band to complete her ensemble.

Mrs. Essary wore an especially becoming dark red dress, cut on simple lines and set off with a hat to match.

Two Cabinet Hostesses There

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who was among the early arrivals, had a bunch of rose-color d flowers at her throat to relieve her black ensemble; and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, one of the most attractive women in any gathering, looked especially lovely in her trim black suit with a white accent furnished by a four-strand string of pearls.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, in blue, and Mrs. Blair Bannister in a green frock and black hat topped by a green feather, were among the few whose costumes were worthy of note in a gathering made up mostly of black-garbed guests.

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, who recently returned from St. Louis, was there, and also Mrs. Max Truitt, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, who said she was substituting for her mother. She revealed, incidentally, that Mrs. Barkley will not be in Washington during the special session of Congress as she is still occupied with supervising renovations on her home in Kentucky.

Mrs. Pat McCarran and Mrs. Pat Harrison were there, each reporting she was "all ready for the special session." Among the other guests were Mrs. Stanley Reed, who had to slip away a few minutes early to catch a train at 3 o'clock; Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Charles E. Pynchon, Mrs. John Herrick, Mrs. Clara Beyer, Miss Ruth Jones, Mrs. Thomas McAllister, Miss Virginia Rishell, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, Mrs. Samuel T. Ansell, jr., daughter of the hostess and the latter's sister, Mrs. Isabel K. Croswell.

Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Paul M. Stewart, Mrs. Timothy Campbell, Maj. and Mrs. W. B. Sousa and Mrs. C. M. Granger.

The Salzburg Guild is being presented in Washington by Mrs. Dorothy H. Dorsey.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. JOHN R. WILLIAMS, the town's most indefatigable charitarian and business woman, is busy these days whipping into shape another enterprise. She will stage the second Thrift Shop Frolics the first week in December at the Sulgrave Club, the date to be announced later.

The last frolic, a year and a half ago, was a great success, with many of the guests in barnyard costumes and a corps of young people doing country dances for the benefit of the others present. (What is it about a pair of overalls and a peasant apron that makes even the most sedate relax?) Trinkets were sold at the last ball for 10 cents and a quarter, and in one of them was a $10 bill. Imagine everybody's chagrin when the ten spot was won by Tommy Leiter, of all people.

Last year, instead of giving a ball, Mrs. Williams organized the Thrift Shop Frolics magazine, on which Nancy Leiter, Margot Garrett and a number of other young people collaborated. This publication died quietly with the last issue published in the spring.

ONE OF THE LEITER titled relatives, the Countess of Suffolk and Berkshire, arrived in New York the other day aboard the Aquitania. She is a daughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter and aunt of Miss Nancy. She is a frequent visitor to these shores and perhaps will come to see her Washington relatives.

Speaking of titles, Elsa Maxwell continues to rope them in, even after publishing the first installments of a remarkably frank autobiography. She gave a dinner in New York the other evening for the Marquis and Marquise de Polignac, who virtually stepped off the boat and into the Waldorf for Miss Maxwell's dinner.

A marquise is nothing in Elsa's glittering life, however. At her party this pair of French titles was flanked by a Duchess (of Westminster), a Viscount (de la Rochefoucauld) and another Marquis (of Queensberry).

"EVERYBODY'S HEARD of Sol Bloom, but who is this man George Washington?" quipped a famous magazine once in referring to the New York Representative's activities on behalf of the memory of the Father of Our Country. Well, Mr. Bloom is still hard at work on his latest patriotic project, the Sesquicentennial celebration of the signing of the Constitution. He is staging an exhibition of early American art, which will open at the Corcoran Gallery November 27 for an invitation preview.

Works of John Singleton Copley, Gilbert Stuart and Benjamin West are among the 180 portraits to be shown, all of which were done in the eighteenth and early nineteenth century. There will also be a diplay of old silver drinking cups, snuff boxes, and other bric-a-brac of the period. Members of the diplomatic corps, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, and the governors and mayors of the country will be invited to see the showing.

Mrs. McCook Knox, chairman of the committee which arranged this exhibition, has been working long and hard to make it a success. She has done important work over a period of years in research of early American art, and contributed a great deal of valuable material to the Frick Art Reference Gallery in New York.

MRS. CLAUDE A. SWANSON, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, will entertain at two teas next week, one for members of the Diplomatic Corps and the second for ladies of the press . . . Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Himes have closed "Prospect Hall," their home near Frederick, Md., and are at 2101 Connecticut avenue for the winter . . . "Jock" Merriam, son of Mrs. Wallach Merriam, and nephew of Mrs. James F. Curtis, is working at the counter of a local newspaper taking ads . . . Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry, will return next week to Washington from Providence . . . Senorita Laura de los Rios will entertain at a small cocktail party on Saturday. She is the daughter of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios.

During his absence, Mrs. Walters visited their daughter, Mrs. Robert R. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C. Mr. and Mrs. Walters reside at the Roosevelt.

Brilliant Audience Hails First Midweek Symphony of Season

Mrs. Hans Kindler Sits With Minister From Switzerland and Wife; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend Also Has Diplomatic Guests.

Society turned out last night for the opening concert of the National Symphony Orchestra's mid-week series. With Lucrezia Bori as soloist and with the symphony orchestra in fine form under the baton of Dr. Hans Kindler, it was an event both music lovers and social notables will remember as one of the high lights of the season thus far.

Miss Bori, who is the guest of Mrs. Tracy Dows, is a favorite with Washington's musical public, having appeared here frequently. She is equally popular in social circles, having been honor guest at numerous parties on previous visits to the Capital.

Among those on hand last night to enjoy her performance with the symphony were Mrs. Hans Kindler, wife of the conductor, who had as guests in her box the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter and Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom—all three women in the party having chosen black evening dress.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, one of the season box-holders, also had with her a number of guests, including the Ambassador of Italy and Donna de Suvich, Ulysses Grant Smith, former United States Minister to Hungary, and Mme. vin Kasthoven.

The German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff were there, the latter wearing a becoming black evening gown topped with an ermine cape. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins had on a sweeping black velvet frock trimmed in beige lace. Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong were glimpsed in the crowd; also Mrs. Pierpont Moffatt, Mrs. Ingalls Sard and Mrs. Maurice Morris, who came with her mother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard.

Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, wearing a sable cape over black, was there, and Dr. and Mrs. John Burke, Mrs. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. don Umberto Cugi..

Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was in the audience; also Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, she in black lace; Mrs. Anne Archbold; Mrs. Emory Sands, who came with Mrs. Gordon Suydam; the Rev. and Mrs. ZeBarney Phillips; Mrs. Tracy Dows in black with a silver fox cape; Baron and Baroness Serge Korff.

In the box reserved by the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky were the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Oumansky. The Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard were with Miss Diana Roland.

Others at the concert were Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mrs. William T. Mann, in a frock of black net trimmed with fringe; Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, C. C. Cappel, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Lewis and Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, who entertained several friends in their box.

Laurie Harris Is Married to Dr. V. J. Dorset

Miss Laurie Harris, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles McIlvaine Harris, of Warrenton, Va., became the bride of Dr. Virgil Jackson Dorset in a quiet ceremony yesterday afternoon at the home of her uncle, Dr. H. H. Kerr, and Mrs. Kerr on Tilden street.

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart officiated before an altar improvised of fern and gold and russet chrysanthemums.

The bride, who wore an ivory satin gown fashioned on simple lines and a long lace veil, was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Harris, jr. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Aileen Harris, whose frock of rose taffeta had a bouffant skirt and full elbow-length sleeves. Dr. John Jackson, of Front Royal, Va., was best man.

Following the wedding there was a reception before the couple slipped away for a Southern wedding trip. Mrs. Dorset's traveling costume was a tailored gray dress with black accessories and a black coat.

The couple will make their home in Washington. Dr. Dorset, who is the son of Mrs. Marion Dorset and the late Dr. Dorset, was educated here and is now connected with the Public Health Service.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding and reception included Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Maury Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris, all of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Hall Harris, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Kerr, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Groom, of Warrenton.

Others there were the Surgeon General and Mrs. Thomas Parran, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Voegtlin, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Leake, Mrs. James Kerr, Mrs. Joseph Leiter and her daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter; Mr. and Mrs. Harris Peters, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Bradley and Mrs. Douglas G. Laing.

J. Bruce Kremers To Fete Mrs. Weeks At Dinner Nov. 19

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer have issued invitations to a dinner November 19, honoring Mrs. Barstow Sumter Weeks, of New York.

The Kremers were guests of Mrs. Weeks this summer at her summer home in the Thousand Islands. Later they went to Montana to spend the remainder of the season.

Dr. Castro Host For Mr. Frazer

The Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower in honor of the newly appointed United States Minister to El Salvador, Robert Frazer. Mr. Frazer is visiting his sister, Miss Margaret Frazer, of Georgetown.

Guests at the luncheon included the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister of Costa Rica, Ricardo Castro Beeche; the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla; Boaz Long, United States Minister to Nicaragua; Dr. Julian R. Caceres, Charge d'Affaires of the Honduran Legation; Dorsey G. Fisher former United States Secretary of Legation in El Salvador; Dr. Carlos Adalberto Alfaro, First Secretary of the Legation of El Salvador in Washington; Dr. George B. Trible and Dr. Thomas Cajigas.

Mrs. W. Harry Brown Is Visiting in Capital

Mrs. W. Harry Brown has arrived in Washington and will be at the Mayflower for her stay of several weeks. She is a friend of Mrs. George Barnett, of the Capital, who visited her last summer at Newport, where Mrs. Brown occupied Mrs. Hope Slater's cottage.

Mrs. Brown has as her guest here Mrs. Leonard Gillispie Woods, of Pittsburgh.

Candle Concerts Begin Nov. 22

The unique candlelight concerts, which are held during the winter at dusk in the Phillips Memorial Gallery, in a setting of fine paintings, are about to begin for the 1937-38 season. The first one will be Monday afternoon, November 22, and the others are scheduled for January 24, February 7 and February 28.

The committee is made up entirely of active members and includes Mrs. Minna Adams, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, Mrs. Higgins Chapin, Mrs. Morris Clark, Mrs. Charles F. Darlington, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Mrs. Walter Loucheim, Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Mrs. Walter Nash, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, the Misses Marion and Elizabeth Shouse, Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, Mrs. Elliott Thurston and Mrs. Frances S. Whitten.

All four movements of the Haydn Quartet in D and the complete Dvorak quartet will be presented by the Pro-Musica quartet of this society. The first violinist this year is Frederick Dvonch, new concert master of the National Symphony Orchestra, who takes the place of Bernard Robbins, now a member of the famous Stradivarious quartet of New York.

Economic Training Held Big Factor in Marriage

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Most of the junior and senior high school students might better spend time considering the economic factors entering into successful home life than in pursuing many of the intricacies of higher mathematics, members of the Parent-Teacher Institute were told last night by Willard W. Beatty who addressed their closing dinner in the Y. W. C. A.

Mr Beatty, who is now director of education in the office of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior, came here from Bronxville, N Y, where he gained a reputation for his progressive work in education He chose his own subject for last night's discussion, "Preparing High School Students for Home and Marriage."

"The old assumption that any man or woman by marrying could make a success of a home and family has been shown to be a fallacy by the increasing divorce rate in this country," said Mr. Beatty, "and concern for marriage and the home has been increasing among social workers and religious and educational groups. In many cities these groups have been experimenting with marriage councils and have accumulated evidence to indicate that many of the difficulties encountered might have been obviated if young people had been given adequate information and a better attitude toward marriage and the home.

"Many of these problems," declared Mr. Beatty, "are such as might have been faced in the school through the development of courses frankly discussing various relationships in which boys and girls may find themselves and building up a psychological preparation for home life.

"Many of the problems are economic. Here and there colleges and secondary schools in various parts of the country are grappling with them and their combined experience indicates the attention devoted to them is justified.

"There appear three major areas in which the young people need some understanding of living standards; they must see where money is coming from, how it is obtained and how much may be wisely spent for rent, clothing, food and entertainment.

"The second involves a psychological understanding of the way human beings behave and why," he said. "Despite the fact that we have associated with other people most of our lives, it is really surprising that we fail to analyze their responses any better than we do. Much unhappiness could be avoided, and real happiness achieved if people were more quick to recognize the reasons back of human behavior.

"The last, which is of great importance, deals with the physiological experiences which are an inevitable part of the marital relationship, and which bear on the intelligent spacing of children. Experience proves that our young people are tremendously concerned with all of these problems and are exceedingly responsive to wise guidance.

"The Progressive Education Association has, during the last two years, had a commission at work preparing new materials of instruction in this field of human relationships bearing on marriage and the home. It may, therefore, be predicted," he added, "that in the near future no school need dodge the issue for lack of material. These publications should be commercially available by the fall of 1938. This interest is leading to further emphasis on the problem by other agencies, and additional material will doubtless be prepared."

William Carl Ruediger, provost of George Washington University, which has co-operated with the Parent-Teacher Congress in sponsoring the institute, presided at last night's dinner and there was music by Mrs. T. David Gates. Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, president of the Maryland Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, was among the guests.

Minnesota Dance Set for Saturday

The Minnesota State Society and University of Minnesota Alumni Association will hold their annual homecoming dance at the Broadmoor on Saturday, from 9:30 to 1 o'clock, in celebration of the homecoming game between Minnesota and Northwestern.

The Minnesota football cocktail hour will be held in the afternoon at 2:30, at the Lafayette Hotel, when the game will be heard over a national hookup. The dance at night will feature the popular dancing-singing number, led by the orchestra and the society's song leader.

Donald W. Larson, president of the society, and Dr. Arthur G. Peterson, president of the alumni association, have extended an invitation to all Minnesotans in Washington and their friends to attend both the football party and the dance. A special invitation also has been extended to Northwesterners.

The reception committee for the dance includes Donald H. DeVol, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Sarff, George Selvig, Dick Jones, Mrs. Olive Ericksen, Miss Grace Wisnom, Mrs. Grace Merriam, Miss Henrietta Dols, Miss Florence Wilson, V. W. Lovejoy, Willis J. Lindquist, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Morell, Miss Adeline Kelly, Miss Norma Hanson, John Croke and Miss Helene Reibestein.

D. C. 8 and 40 Gives Dinner For Mrs. Haws

Mrs. Mary Haws, of Johnstown, Pa., chapeau national of the Eight and Forty, who arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon to participate in Armistice Day ceremonies, was guest of honor last night at a friendship dinner given by the D. C. Salon at the Washington Hotel. Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, who also arrived yesterday, is being honored tonight preceding the American Legion's Armistice Day Ball at the Mayflower.

Membership in the Eight and Forty is earned by services as an officer or committee chairman in the auxiliary. Four major projects are being carried on this year by the organization, according to Mrs. Haws. The first is work in juvenile tuberculosis prevention, which has been assigned the Eight and Forty by the child welfare committee of the legion; second, assistance to the auxiliary in its membership campaign; third giving support to the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society home in Denver, where already it has indorsed seven beds, and fourth, continuance of the child welfare work in which all of the salons are now actively engaged.

The District salon with Mrs. John McCabe as chapeau departmental, ha organized a "big sister" movement for children in Glendale Hospital. It has taken ten for which clothing as well as gifts will be provided. The salon also has "adopted" the family of a disabled veteran, a mother and four children who were in disress and to whom clothing and other necessities are now being given.

Among those at the dinner last night in addition to the national chapeau and the chapeau departmental, were Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, past national chapeau and now president of the D. C. Department of the auxiliary; Mrs. Louise Warren, national chairman of public relations; Mrs. Milton Landvoigt, and Mrs. Thomas Quinn, demi-chapeaux of the D. C. Salon; Mrs. Martin Dyer, distinguished guest chairman, who is in charge of arrangements for tonight's auxiliary dinner; Miss Emily Carey, past commander of Belleau Wood Post of the American Legion.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

TOMORROW night at the Kenwood Country Club there will be a dance—a merry party for a worthy cause—given by the Montgomery County Public Health Lay Council.

The council was formed six years ago and began in a simple way by helping out in the schools and elsewhere in public-health work. The lay committees help the public-health nurses in the county, supplementing the work of the limited number of members on the professional staff.

The council is composed of two representatives from each of the five committees in different sections of the county. All are busy women with children of their own, but they find time to devote a portion of nearly every day in the week to the public-health work. Every cent contributed for it goes directly into it. Even postage and stationery are purchased from a separate fund collected at meetings, in the "cash box," where members drop any change they may have in their purses.

Last year, the Silver Spring committee purchased dental equipment for a clinic there and another was opened by the council at Rockville. The next ones to be started will be prenatal and well-baby clinics, as soon as there are sufficient funds for them.

Sponsors of the dance, whose contributions will cover the actual expenses, leaving all the proceeds for the work of the council, include, in Bethesda, Judge W. E. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Warner, Dr. and Mrs. B. L. Ellicott, Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Preston King, jr.; from Sandy Spring, Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Bird, C. C. Tumbleson; Rockville, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Casey, Dr. and Mrs. Dexter Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis; Silver Spring, Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Howlett, Dr. and Mrs. Claude Mitchell.

SENATOR BIBB GRAVES is scheduled to address the Democratic Women's National Council at its meeting Monday night in the Raleigh.

RIGHT on the heels of all the Armistice Day celebration the ways and means committee of the United States Department of Agriculture unit of the American Legion Auxiliary announced a party for Saturday night at the home of Mrs. Anna Anderson, 2959 Upton street. The fact it is sponsored by the ways and means committee gives away the little secret that it's a benefit party.

The unit's new committee chairmen are Mrs. Elizabeth E. Grant, Americanism; Mrs. Elizabeth T. Fields, constitution and bylaws (not the sesquicentennial); Mrs. Mary C. Reimer, community service; Mrs. Lena R. Andrews, education of war orphans; Mrs. Cecile Berger, membership; Mrs. Victorine Brownold, National News; Mrs. Margaret Montgomery, rehabilitation; Mrs. Agnes E. Hazard, ways and means; Mrs. Lyola B. Kabat, finance; Lisetta Rogers, birthday box, and Mrs. Albert A. Lacey, publicity.

EVEN RUMMAGE is doing its bit for the cause of peace. In the basement of the building which serves as headquarters for the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, at 1734 F street, there is a going concern called the Pax Rummage Shop. Mrs. Robert Sher, of the International League, is chairman; Mrs. Harry Friedman, vice chairman, and a whole committee of helpers takes turns selling things every day from 9 to 5.

Tuesday Mrs. Harold N. Marsh is giving a Rummage Shop tea at her home, 3515 Lowell street, with a bundle of rummage the price of admission. Clothing, pictures, books, bric-a-brac, furniture—any useful article is welcomed for the shop.

Mrs. David R. Williams, president of the D. C. branch of the league, will pour, as will Mrs. Josephine January, Mrs. Charles W. Eliot and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong.

* * * *

THE WOMAN'S CLUB of Haymarket, Va., is giving its first party of the season tomorrow night—a dance from 10 to 2 in the auditorium of the Haymarket school.

* * * *

Mrs. Joseph Fletcher has extended a general invitation to all those interested to attend the meeting of St. Monica's league at which the Rev. Noble Powell, of Washington Cathedral, will speak tomorrow morning at 11, in the Cathedral Library.

Dames of Loyal Legion Hold Benefit Card Party

The D. C. Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion, of which Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker is president, entertained at a benefit card party yesterday afternoon in the Pan American room of the Mayflower. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund with which the group supports a student at Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogott, Tenn.

Mrs. W. F. Mutchler was chairman of the affair, assisted by Mrs. Warren J. Haines, Mrs. Isabella Morrow Boniface, Mrs. Merrick Williams, Mrs. Hugh Carnes Smith, Mrs. E. S. Alvord. Mrs. Alvord's two little daughters, Clarissa and Marian, the one in pink and the other in blue, both with golden curls, also assisted in serving.

Mme. Cantacuzene is president of the national society, Dames of the Loyal Legion.

Mrs. Culbertson Tea Hostess for Women of G.O.P.

Mrs. William S. Culbertson was hostess yesterday afternoon at the second of the Wednesday silver teas at the clubhouse of the new League of Republican Women. She was assisted by Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the league; Mrs. E. L. Corbett and Mrs. William H. Scott, executive secretary. Mrs. Edward A. Harriman and Mrs. Warren J. Haines, who will be hostess at next week's tea, poured.

Among the guests were Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Harry Covington, a member of the National Democratic Women's Club; Miss Marie Obenhauer, Mrs. James J. Wentz, who has returned to the Capital after a summer in Europe; Mrs. Howard LeRoy, Mrs. Frank Mondell, who had as her guest Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly, and Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, accompanied by Mrs. Frank Horner, of Clarksburg, W. Va., who is spending a few days with her.

D. A. R. Affair Launches Mrs. Haig as Candidate

District Regent, Aspirant for Vice Presidency General, Is Honored at Reception by Her Own Chapter, the Judge Lynn.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig's own chapter, the Judge Lynn, entertained at a luncheon in her honor last night at the home of Mrs. J. Wesley Buchannan in Bethesda, formally launching her candidacy for vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is now State regent of the District.

In the receiving line with the guest of honor were Mrs. Enoch J. Vann, the regennt who made the presentations, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Mrs. Henry Harper, District director of the Children of the American Revolution; and the State officers, Miss Lillian Chenoweth, vice regent; Mrs. T. Temple Hill, Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, Mrs. Earl B. Fuller, Miss Linda Nance, Miss Mary E. Black, Mrs. Elmer Curry, Mrs. Lee R. Pennington and Mrs. Samuel B. Woodridge.

As the guests arrived they were greeted in the reception hall by Mrs. Buchannan and Miss Rebecca Riley, who is Mrs. Haig's personal page.

In the dining room pink roses and tapers, in all the pastel shades, desorated the table. Serving there were the past regents of the chapter, Mrs. Donald M. Earll, Mrs. Harry Fulton, Mrs. J. Milton Jester and Mrs. Harry Gauss Also assisting were past presidents of the Lieut. John Shaw Society of the C. A. R., Mrs. Elwood Cobey and Mrs. Eldridge Myers, and the present head of the society, Mrs. Hunton Leigh.

Elsewhere in the house palms and chrysanthemums were used in profusion for decoration. In the library those assisting were Mrs. William E. Forbes, Mrs. R. J. Swingle and Mrs. J. F. Barkley. In the reception hall, which is a colonial kitchen with a large open fireplace and Dutch oven, red chrysanthemums were used to match the red dotted curtains at the windows. Serving there were Louis Dent and Mrs. Stanley M. Titus.

Mrs. Carleton C. Hoffner was chairman of general arrangements for the affair.

Mrs. Haig, before becoming regent of the District, served as regent of two chapters, the Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter of which she was first a member and later of the Judge Lynn Chapter. She was State chairman of the Correct Use of the Flag Committee, of Junior American Citizens and Radio. She also has been secretary and treasurer of the State Officers Club and delegate to the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, and held the national appointment as vice chairman of the house committee on information for the Continental Congress and the office of State recording secretary. Her career as a Daughter of the American Revolution began with her membership in the Children of the American Revolution in which she was recording secretary in Charletson, S. C.

Jewish Home Auxiliary Adds New Members

Twenty-five new members were added to the District of Columbia Branch of the Auxiliary for the National Home for Jewish Children in Denver yesterday at the "member - bring - a - member" tea given in Variety Club of the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Albert W. Jacobson is president of the branch which already has 300 members.

The next affair to be given by the organization will be a "pajama party," admission to which will be a pair of pajamas, sweater or underwear for a child from 5 years up to 20—all to be given to the children at Glen Dale Hospital. This party will be November 24 at the Jewish Community Center, and attendance is not limited to members of the organization. Any who desire to help have been invited to come with their donations. There will also be a dance at the Willard on December 8, proceeds of which will be used to aid tubercular children in the District. Mrs. David Favan is chairman.

Yesterday's party was in charge of Mrs. Hyman Berman, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Joseph Zupnik, cochairman; Mrs. Sam Becker, Mrs. Sara Blum, Mrs. Hilda Schneider, Mrs. Corbett Gladstone, Mrs. Ethel Segal and Mrs. Albert Blitz.

The guests were served at small tables as they arrived for the tea, and the program of the afternoon was a group of songs by Mrs. Benjamin Ratner, soprano, accompanied by Elena Crivella.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Unsure of Herself, Not Wishing to Hurt Married Man Who Loves Her, Girl of 20 Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20 and a married man of 32 is in love with me. I don't know whether I love him or not. We work together and I've seen him all day every day for nearly a year. He is very congenial, I enjoy talking with him more than any man I've ever known, and naturally we became friendly but I never dreamed anythink like this would happen.

He used to bring me home from work but when I learned how he felt I stopped that. He has never made any improper proposals to me, except the last time I saw him he said: "If I could only have you once I'd be happy the rest of my life; at any rate, I'd have some happiness to look back on." I told him it was impossible and he said: "I know that, but it just doesn't seem right that you don't belong to me." He said: "I lie awake thinking about you and I go to sleep and dream about you . . . You're never out of my mind for a minute."

* * * *

He was married at 20. His marriage was one of those biological-urge things and he is mentally far ahead of his wife. He doesn't love her today but he has never said a disparaging thing about her. He says she is the best possible wife, except that they just aren't suited. He says that I mean more to him than anything else in the world; that being with me is his only happiness.

* * * *

I know thoroughly well what I ought to do, but I just can't bring myself to do it—even though I'm not definitely in love with him. I like him better than anybody else and have ever since I've known him, long before any mention of love came up . . . I think your advice is always good, but I think also that you, like my mother, are too prone to discount entirely the effect of loving and wanting somebody and not being able to have them. I reckon all older people are that way—they forget what it's like to be young and eaten up with wanting somebody . . . I've always though people ought to be happy while they can and to hell with what people say. Take the cash and let the credit go. Tomorrow we may be with yesterday's 10,000 years. But now I can't be instrumental in messing up a perfectly innocent person's life, and yet, whatever I decide, that seems to be what I am doing.

* * * *

I have the kind of conscience that lets me go just so far and then turns and rends me for doing it. Every time he asks if he may see me and I say "No," I try to think it's the best thing for him, and then I think: "How can it be best to send him off utterly miserable and wanting just to hold me in his arms for a little—," which I must admit I enjoy. The last time I refused him he said: "You know you're the only person in the world who means anything to me. I might as well be slapped in the face as have you treat me so."

* * * *

Please tell me how to do the wisest thing while inflicting the least hurt. He is capable of much more than he is doing now. I have been urging him for a long time to get into some work that would give him more scope. If he could get into something that made it necessary for him to use every iota of his mind as hard as possible he would soon forget about me; or at least, it wouldn't prey on his mind the way it does now.

* * * *

He has a chance at a better job but he won't take it. He said: "I'd rather be dead than where I couldn't see you. Being with you even the few minutes that I am is the only happiness I've had in a long time and I can't give it up." He said: "I'll go if you'll go with me. There's no point in working unless you have something to work for."

* * * *

I've thought other things that had happened to me before were hard, but I never imagined anything like this. It's the first grown-up thing that has ever happened to me and I don't know how to handle it. I would have been quite satisfied if thing had only stayed the way they were when we were good friends. We talked about everything under the sun and it was such fun. I am in the most complete state of bewilderment. He lost a child some years ago. He said: "I loved her better than anything in the world and for days I watched her waste away . . ." It isn't right for such things to happen to people—and now for me to turn and hurt him again. I just can't bear the idea of it. I like him so much and he's such a nice person. Please tell me what to do.

BEWILDERED.

Sentimental Quicksands.

DEAR BEWILDERED: You are a romantic, gullible, relatively untried young idealist, spiritually generous almost to a fault; whereas your would-be lover is something of a weakling and an opportunist with a flair for dramatizing himself. In attempting to bring this situation into perspective in your mind, your principal oversight has been your failure (a natural enough failure, considering this is the "first grown-up thing that has happened" to you) to recognize this man's passionate fixation upon you as a commonplace result of propinquity between an attractive girl and a restless married man. It is my conviction that he would have developed an identical fixation on almost any personable, congenial girl with whom he had been thrown in similar constant association over the same period at this time in his life.

* * * *

I cannot share your overweening solicitude lest his feelings be hurt, for the simple reason that he shows no reciprocal concern for you. Instead, he is ready to use you as a borrowed poultice for his old wounds. No person has the moral right to make the slightest gesture toward invading another's emotional reserve unless he is prepared to assume full responsibility for what may be the far-flung, perhaps life lasting consequences of that invasion. This man has shown no such willingness.

* * * *

Apparently he wants you today with no thought for the morrow, and while such blindly urgent desire may strike an untried adolescent like yourself as being poignantly poetic and beautifully self-justifying, nevertheless a married man of his age is sufficiently experienced in the ways of the world to know it is not so. If he were the right sort of man and found himself truly in love with you, he would—in very deference to your youth, idealism, naively sincere trust, sympathy and face-value acceptance of him and his words—exert himself to protect you from premature and potentially destructive emotionalism, rather than do everything in his power to incite it.

* * * *

Beware of the man who solicits love as a beggar solicits alms; who pities himself to the extent of telling a touching, fragmentary story of his secret sorrows; who leans on a given woman as a cripple leans on a crutch. Such a man is a weakling, lacking in pride and principle. Don't think, either, that a man is being magnanimous, necessarily, in never saying a disparaging thing about his wife, when he is being spiritually unfaithful to her. Until you have proof positive to the contrary, it is wisest to assume his silence on that subject is precautionary and self-protective; a tacit refusal to burn his bridges behind him and give the other woman a positive implication of serious intent on which to build.

* * * *

If it should be that your estimate of this man's intelligence and ability is justified; if he is capable of making professional progress in a challenging environment; if he has an offer of such a job; if he and his wife have grown so far apart that they are spiritual strangers, and if he really does find himself so overwhelmingly dependent upon you for inspiration and life-purpose as he proclaims, then it is all the more inexcusable that he should remain where he is, dogging your footsteps asking for crumbs of illicit love. He should turn aside from you altogether for the time being, forge ahead in his vocational work, set the house of his life in order and return to you only when he is free to ask you to marry him.

* * * *

Under existing circumstances he is filling you with an entirely unwarranted sense of responsibility for a state of personal frustration—both emotional and professional—that is entirely his own fault. He is doing nothing to better the situation. What is worse, he is reaching out to drag you down with him into a quicksand of muddy thinking, messy emoting and furtive acting.

* * * *

The best advice I can give you is to remember that you are primarily responsible for your own conduct and destiny, so don't be sentimental yearning over this man's plight (torn between passion and duty so that he knows not which direction to take) pull you off the straightaway course your conscience dictates. Hew to that line and let the chips fall where they may. If he is hurt, he asked for it; and if he whines, he's less than a man. Your life—believe it or not—is scarcely begun. I should say you are a girl of extraordinary promise; you are sensitive, intelligent, sympathetic, imaginative, unusually honest and forthright; and it behooves you to contain yourself with patience until you find the adequate and honorable outlet for the expression of these great gifts of personality. In a word, I advise you to terminate, definitely and at once, your romantic association with this married man.

M. H.

Napoleonic Styles in Modernized Versions

Napoleonic Influence Reigns In Women's Winter Fashions

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

EACH FALL and winter sees a period influence of some kind as the reigning fashion of the season. It may be inspired by some exhibition by popularity of a great artist, or by an outstanding headline in the news. This winter, period styles are rampant and there never was such a variety of stylings from which to make a choice. It is all due to the trend toward elegance, luxury and femininity plus the unusual number of costume pictures from Hollywood.

One of the most popular and, according to the predictions of stylists, one of the most enduring of the lot, is the Napoleonic influence, inspired by the goreous costumes designed by Adrian for Greta Garbo in "Conquest." Realizing that period clothes, although picturesque in a screen play, are not wearable as they are for 1937-38, University of California students used the Adrian designs as inspiration for a number of chic daytime and evening outfits, Napoleonic in theme and yet as modern as tomorrow in styling.

Another vogue that stylists predict will be popular as the formal evening season advances is the use of luxurious-looking jewelry, reminiscent of the collection given by Napoleon to the Empress Marie Louise. Also the introduction of jewels in the designing scheme for evening clothes; clusters of simulated jewels at the waistline or throat, long earrings, tiaras, elaborate necklaces and wide bracelets, brooches with dangling pendants, Napoleonic coiffures—that is, adaptations of them—already are appearing, hair piled high on top in curled arrangements, with flowers and feathers as the decorative medium.

Outstanding colors which have been influenced by the Napoleonic era, as portrayed by Adrian in his designs for Garbo, are soft grays, blues and white satins with cloth-of-silver decoration. Gray particularly is exploited in a number of interesting tones, which are "alive" rather than dull in character. And gray, by the way, is one of the leading colors this winter, for both day and evening, in heavy and sheer materials; it vies with black for popularity.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 10.

THIS WAS to have been the day of the great arrival—with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor stepping off the good ship Bremen into the bared fangs of thousands of admirers, nervous reporters and excited cameramen. Now it is November 11. Oh yes, and Armistice Day—the date when that war ended. The one we were in — remember?

ALICE HUGHES.

The defection of the royal love birds leave us in peace, here, to remember that breathless hour 19 years ago when the shooting stopped and the world went mad with joyous relief—a shuddering reaction after years of awful agony.

We Gothamites take our Armistice Day in stride, so long after the event. Flags fly, there are speeches at our Eternal Light in old Madison Square, and most of us try to stop whatever we're doing for two minutes at the mystic hour of 11 a. m. Even we ladies pause at the stocking counter and stand still. Only the elders among us really feel solemn, for we really remember. My brother was with the Sixth Marines in the Second Division, and the elderly spouse was in a shell-shocked cottage overlooking the Scheldt in Belgium.

But the kids, bless them, know nothing of all this, thank goodness! And may it be long before the boys and girls of today feel as we felt in 1917-18. But the world has the jitters, and who can tell. We can only wait, hope and pray.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Let's come to an understanding. Our boasted freedom is an actual fact. Where else on earth could a musical comedy make fun of the head of a great nation without its authors being locked up in a stockade or peppered with rifle fire? And it is equally wonderful that we can meet visitors to our beloved country honestly, realistically and with clear minds and eyes! I am deeply serious about this.

* * * *

I jingle like a circus horse these days when I've got it all on, for two of my most interesting birthday presents Monday were a necklace of gilded 25-centime pieces, and a bracelet strung with tiny gilt shoes, the remembrance of one of our most famous cobblers. I make such an awful racket that I don't dare wear both at once for fear of frightening the hosses.

The latest titled lady to carry her dinner pail to work here is the lovely Lady Rose Warwick, whose handsome former husband failed recently to get started in Hollywood. Lady Warwick toils in a very smart dressery on East Fifty-sixth street.

* * * *

The two big shows of last week, Georgie Cohan's "I'd Rather Be Right" and the Lunts' "Amphitryon 38," were greeted by the professional critics with several reservations, but seem certain to be mighty successes because of frantic public interest.

* * * *

I forgot to mention that the two foreign belles, Greta Garbo and Marlene Dietrich, are fighting it out bitterly a few blocks apart on Broadway. Might say that the Slumbrous Scandinavian's new film seems to have a definite edge here.

* * * *

Have you seen pictures of our new Congressman, the 51-year-old Bruce Barton, writer and ad man? This son of a Tennessee circuit rider is my candidate for "Mr. Congress of 1938," so handsome is he in a strong-jawed way. He's beautiful, and he represents our silk-stocking district—Park Avenyuh and such.

* * * *

Another well-known gent steps in to take the cuss off household drudgery. He is Mr. Vincent Bendix, who has just put a new home laundry on the market.

* * * *

I've often complained about the plague of cocktail orgies at which new products are introduced or dates celebrated. Here are three in one day to which I got invites. Gertrude Lawrence helping launch a new scent called "Infanta." Louis Parme, noted hair fixer, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of his local business. P. Richard, also hair expert, describing and demonstrating new European trends in thatchdo's. All in one afternoon, mind, and my roller skates in the shop!

Velvet For Royalty.

London (AP).—The Duchess of Kent, the British royal family's fashion plate, is wearing black velvet this winter. She has a Molyneux evening gown of it, designed with a bodice strapped crosswise above a very full skirt stiffened with crinoline. Black velvet also makes one of her afternoon ensembles which combines a slim skirt with a short fitted jacket trimmed in silver fox.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

A SKIMPY breakfast is one of the world's worst detractors from efficiency. That 11 o'clock slump which slows you down is due mainly to insufficient breakfast, and can be avoided. Research on efficiency shows that this hour of the morning should be one of the high energy levels.

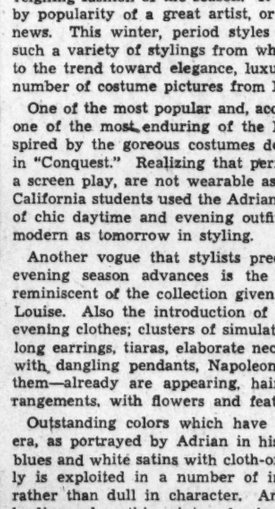
In spite of its importance as the meal which follows the longest period without food, breakfast usually is slighted. When the business woman makes up her mind to reduce, she will, likely as not, swallow a glass of hot water or cup of clear coffee and expect to go along as usual. It just is not possible to feel your best or to do your best work under such adverse physiological conditions.

You can lose weight, normalize your figure without penalizing health or efficiency—but not by going without meals or limiting yourself to birdlike portions of foods. Be careful in your choice of a way to reduce.

Cites Reducing Strain.

As a matter of fact, I am not in favor of a rigid reducing diet for the business woman. Under the most favorable conditions there is a definite physiological strain attached to loss of considerable weight.

Start your working day with a wholesome breakfast. Take fruit, two slices of whole-grain bread, one-half pat of butter and coffee with cream and sugar. This meal will provide 300 to 350 calories and not interfere with weight loss.



Better than a rigid diet for the business woman.

Luncheon should be satisfying but not heavy and should include one hot dish or hot beverage. For example—soup, a sandwich and buttermilk; or, lean meat, a vegetable, salad and milk or buttermilk.

For dinner on this program of efficient weight loss you may have as many as 700 calories, but this makes no allowance for such dietary luxuries as pie a la mode. If you have been in the habit of taking two rich desserts a day, their omission may be a real loss for a time.

Intelligent Choice Urged.

But while you business women have to eat to keep up your strength, you don't have to overeat. Perhaps more than anyone else you should adhere to an intelligent selection of food.

Business Woman Able to Preserve Figure by Proper Eating.

Normally the average office worker can use from 1,900 to 2,200 calories daily without taking on weight. This provides plenty of food, with calories apportioned as follows: 400 for breakfast; 650 for luncheon; 850 for dinner.

Every business woman needs exercise and in some cases exercise is all that is needed to make the figure lovely. It is not normal weight alone, nor correct distribution of subcutaneous fat, but healthy muscle tone in conjunction with these two factors which makes the figure beautiful.

Actors' Clothes May Save Taxes

New York (AP).—Movie actors' clothes are bothering the Government's tax experts, and there may be something in the dispute for Wilbur Y. Citizen.

The stars are claiming tax deductions for clothes expenditures, on the ground that clothes are part of their jobs.

Adolph Menjou's lawyers told the Federal men that he'd landed more than half his multifarious movie parts because his wardrobe was so complete, and so he ought to be allowed to deduct from his tax return $1,119 spent for cleaning.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., suggested a $379 deduction for his clothes expenses and $350.12 for his valet. Bing Crosby figured a $707.02 deduction. The cases are pending on appeal.

A Guild Drama And 'Conquest' Lead New Week

Bills of Unique Merit Are Promised on the Local Screens and Stages.

The fourth play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season at the National Theater will be presented on next Monday night and throughout the week, when the Guild's production of Sidney Howard's new play, "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle" will be the bill. In this grim drama, set at a period 18 months after the beginning of the next World War, the principal roles are played by Ethel Barrymore and Dudley Digges. In the supporting cast, Frank Conray, Eliot Cabot, Russell Hardie, Kathleen Comegys, Elizabeth Young, George Nash and Ethel Intropodi are importantly assigned. There will be the customary matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

"Conquest," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's superb picturization of the one great love episode in the life of Napoleon Bonaparte, will be the attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning today. In this superlatively staged subject Greta Garbo assumes the role of the Countess Marie Walewska, with Charles Boyer as Napoleon. They are supported by an extraordinary cast, led by Henry Stephenson, Reginald Owen, Alan Marshal, Leif Erikson, Dame May Whitty, Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, Claude Gillingwater and scores of others of equal note. The production is one of magnitude and magnificence. The picture was directed with fine skill by Clarence Brown. It will be supplemented by specially selected short subjects, including Robert Benchley in "A Night at the Movies."

Brian Aherne and Olivia de Havilland are pictured co-stars of "The Great Garrick," announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The story is a romantic comedy based on incidents in the life of the famous English actor. Edward Everett Horton, Melville Cooper, Lionell Atwill, Luis Alberni, Lana Turner, Marie Wilson and Fritz Leiber are among the foremost members of the supporting company in this amusing screen feature. On the stage, the entertainment will be provided by Ted Lewis and his orchestra, together with the considerable list of specialty artists always carried by the Lewis organization. Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestra will augment the bill.

Four stellar comedians will appear in the leading roles of "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," announced as chief feature of the bill at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning today. They are Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Mischa Auer and Billy House, experts in musical endeavor, whether on stage or screen. In this new Universal filmusical they are supported by such favorite artists as Alice Brady and Louise Fazenda, further augmented by the presence in the cast of Dave Apollon and his orchestra and specialty performers. The romantic leads are played by John King and Joy Hodges. The bill will be completed by short-reel subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

In "Stand-In," latest of Walter Wanger's screen productions for release through United Artists, to be seen as major feature of the bill for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater, the co-stellar roles are played by Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell. The supporting cast also is a notable one, headed by Alan Mowbray, C. Henry Gordon, Tully Marshall, Jack Carson and Marla Shelton. The comedy is based on rich satire aimed at Hollywood and Wall street. On the stage, Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron will headline the bill in a new edition of their hilarious tomfoolery that combines rich comedy and distinctive musicianship. Little Jackie Heller is held over for a second week to continue as singing master of ceremonies of the vaudeville revue.

Irene Dunne and Cary Grant pursue their triumphant way through a third week of the repeat engagement of "The Awful Truth," on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. Hailed as the most amusing comedy of recent release, "The Awful Truth" also enlists the services of Ralph Bellamy, Cecil Cunningham, Alexander D'Arcy, Joyce Compton and a good many others who add generously to the fun, not forgetting "Mr. Smith," the king of canine comedians. The short subjects also are being retained.

Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Mary Nash and Mady Christians, with Helen Westley, Pauline Moore, Thomas Beck and others, will take possession of the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater today for a repeat F street engagement of "Heidi." In this subject the diminutive star has one of the most fortunate vehicles of her youthful career. Short subjects and "Events of the Day" will supplement the program.

The "March of Time" again will supply the chief short-reel attraction of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. It will, as usual, devote itself to topics of timely interest to American audiences. "Glimpses of Peru," a FitzPatrick travelogue in color, also will be on the bill, as will a new Disney cartoon, "Little Hiawatha," together with complete world newsreel coverage.

"Little Man, What Now?" with Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery in the leading roles, will be revived on the screen of the Little Theater as chief feature of the bill for the week beginning Sunday. At the time of its original release the picturization of the Hans Fallada novel aroused the same spirited controversy as the book. Alan Hale, Muriel Kirkland, T. DeWitt Jennings and Catherine Coucet head the supporting cast.

"Casta Diva," adapted to the screen from the opera "Norma," will be presented twice on the screen at the Rialto Theater on Sunday afternoon. The showings will be at 2 and 4:30 p. m.

A new musical extravaganza will be presented at the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the regular matinee performance of Sunday. The chief comedian will be Mike "Mugging" Sacks, and the feminine contingent will be headed by Joy St. Claire and the Egyptian sensation, Jai-Leta. A beauty chorus will supply background for the company of singers, dancers and comedians.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Comedy Premiere Supplants Season's First Musical As Thanksgiving Week's Attraction at the National

Luella Gear in "To Be Continued" Booked to Replace "Between the Devil;" Joan Bennett Packs House; Boyer Brings Fine Napoleon to Screen Today; Maurice Evans Coming in "Richard II;" Notes.

THE artistic and cryptic gentlemen who occupy those large mahogany desks that give Broadway its ruddy glow again have been wielding their savage blue pencils on the Washington booking sheets. Some of the legitimate attractions we thought we were going to get on E street, we are not; others of which no mention previously has been made are on their way.

BELL.

This is to say that "Between the Devil," originally booked for the National the week of Monday, November 22, is definitely out and a new piece by the name of "To Be Continued" is to be given its premiere here, instead, at that time.

Regardless of the merits of "To Be Continued," this sudden change in plans will come as a disappointment to many who had looked forward to "Between the Devil," not only because it would have been the first musical of the season, but also because it would have brought back to the Capital that charming actress and singer, Evelyn Laye, so pleasantly remembered as a gracious visitor when she was here in Jay Mallory's play of "Sweet Aloes." Miss Laye was a hit with the drama desks of the Capital—a friendly, quick-witted and talented young woman who was as companionable as she was amusing in her crisp and ready repartee. It is too bad not to see her again, especially in company with Jack Buchanan, foremost of the English singing and dancing comedians. Some other time, maybe.

The substitute offering is announced as a gay new comedy by Charles George, in which the principal role will be played by Luella Gear, a star whose brittle personality needs no introduction to Washington's tried and true theatergoers. It is a Morris Green-James J. Fero production, this "To Be Continued," staged under the direction of Melville Burke. Further than this, deponent sayeth not, so these remarks, like the play itself, will have "to be continued" some other time. It is worth noting in passing, however, that November 22 is by way of being Thanksgiving Week, one of the theater's most fruitful periods of box-office prosperity.

In the wake of "To Be Continued," the Capital will be privileged to enjoy one of the treats of the season. On November 29, Maurice Evans will bring his production of Shakespeare's "King Richard II" to the National for a single week's stay. This is one of the substantial works of the contemporary theater that has enjoyed enormous success in New York and on the road since its transcontinental tour recently was launched.

Mr. Evans, like Miss Gear, also is known to resident playgoers. His first appearance here was as Romeo to Katharine Cornell's Juliet in Shakespeare's immortal love tragedy; his next in the role of Napoleon in "St. Helena," an episodic dramatic treatment of the Little Corsican's last days of exile, following the defeat at Waterloo. He is reputed to have no peer in his present part.

* * * *

While we are on the topic of the National and its current attractions—or nearly so—it ought to be mentioned that Joan Bennett will take her place among the most popular visiting stars on the basis of her week's receipts in "Stage Door," the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber comedy hit now playing. Yesterday's matinee performance at the National was completely sold out several hours before time for the curtain to rise and the remainder of the engagement promises comparable bulging of the till. It is conservatively estimated that the gross for the eight performances will exceed $20,000, which places Miss Bennett in the same class with the Lunts and others of the stage's most eminent box-office magnets. Nice going is what is usually said on such occasions.

* * * *

The suggested train of thought—one car on a single track makes a train in this column—might be carried on by remarking that Charles Boyer, cast opposite Greta Garbo as costar of "Conquest," opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, will offer the first dramatic portrait of Napoleon in a major work seen here since Mr. Evans' "St. Helena."

Boyer approaches his task with the initial advantage of a remarkable physical resemblance to the Little Emperor which creates a well-nigh perfect illusion of reality with only slight aids from the makeup experts on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. There is also a necessary touch of authority in his portrayal that enhances the amazingly effective quality of his work in the most distinguished and most exacting role he ever has essayed on the American screen. Beyond any other male player who ever has appeared with her, he matches Garbo's skill in the embodiment of those elements of greatness that have set her apart from other motion picture actresses.

Charles Boyer is under personal contract to Walter Wanger, a recent Washington visitor. His eminence in "Conquest" will do much to increase his value in future Wanger productions. Mr. Wanger, incidentally, is by no means the loser by his star's instant assignment—he received in the neighborhood of $300,000 from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "loaning" Mr Boyer for the Garbo film. The prolonged period of the picture's production accounted for a considerable portion of this tidy sum, penalties being entailed for detaining the actor beyond a certain fixed time limit. That "by personal arrangement with Walter Wanger" note on the "Stage Door" programs, in connection with the appearance of Joan Bennett, probably is not occasioning the urbane Mr. Wanger any sleepless nights, either. Miss Bennett also is under personal contract to him.

* * * *

The first phase of the Washington Civic Theater's campaign for subscriptions was officially closed last Saturday. Even with 40 per cent increase in membership over last year, the drive still is short of its goal of 2,000 members. The team captained by Dorothea Lewis was announced the winner, nosing out Ione Jordan's group by the narrow margin of 5 points. Dr. Frederick Rand won first honors with the highest individual score. The second phase of the campaign now is under way with all members of the Civic's producing group driving again toward the goal that seems in a fair way of being reached. Subscriptions are $6 and $8 and may be purchased at the office of the theater in the Raleigh Hotel. Those who bought tickets for "Excursion," the first play of the season, may apply the purchase price on a season subscription.

* * * *

Ten programs of motion pictures now available through regular commercial channels will be presented by the Film Society of Washington, in co-operation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, in the Rialto Theater between the dates of November 17 and April 13.

Inspired by the success of similar organizations in London, Geneva, Rome, Paris and other European centers, and of countless groups formed in the United States since the launching of the museum's film library in 1935, the Washington society was organized last year. Decision to expand its activities into a "Town Hall of the Motion Picture," with a full 1937-38 season was made following an experimental program last spring at the Sulgrave Club.

The establishment and aims of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library have been the subject of protracted comment in this space from time to time, most recently on the occasion of Paul Rotha's visit to the Capital in the interests of the documentary activities of the library. Remember?

* * * *

Speaking of the Rialto—here comes that train again—the engagement of "Damaged Lives" at the Ninth street house has been extended throughout the remainder of the current week. Although previous commitments of the management made the theater unavailable today, "Damaged Lives" will be screened again both tomorrow and Saturday. Showings of this informative subject are continuous on a regular daily schedule to be found elsewhere on this or adjoining pages.

* * * *

Some nice stage attractions are looming into view at the Capitol and Earle Theaters. Next week at the Capitol, Fred Waring will present his famous Pennsylvanians in a typical orchestral program, augmented by a long list of specialists and group combinations recruited from the band. The same week, the Earle will present Harriet Hoctor as headliner of the vaudeville bill.

Waring's Pennsylvanians easily hold the record of having played a greater number of total weeks in the National Capital than any other comparable organization. Miss Hoctor shares with Patricia Bowman the distinction of being the foremost ballerina appearing on the contemporary American stage.

Light-Hidden-Under-a-Bushel-of-Blurbs Note.

I suggest that it would be just dandy if the papers could find a line or two in which to say something about Walter Wanger!

Costars in Romantic Film Comedy

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 10.—Settin' Around (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): The old bromide about the irresistible force and the immovable object has nothing on the problems of Hollywood's studios. Metro, in particular, with the heaviest production schedule of any studio in town, finds the situation exasperating. Here is the difficulty as outlined to me today by one of the executive producers of this studio:

WALLACE BEERY.

The legitimate stage, forced into second place by the ever-growing popularity of the screen, has curtailed production — consequently there is a dearth of good plays which can be adapted, to pictures. Not more than 10 books, suitable for screening, can be expected in any given year. Another 10 or 15 movie plots may be concocted from short stories printed in magazines. And Hollywood, with eight major production companies and an army of minor studios, needs not less than a thousand good stories every year.

By every rule of logic, original scenarios, written directly for the screen, should be the answer to the problem. But not one studio in the business dares to consider, let alone solicit, originals from the rank and file of free lance authors. The producers know, from sad experience, that every original produced is the signal for a lawsuit, filed by some other scribe who sees in the picture a faint similarity to one of his own plots. The result is a story famine where there should be plenty.

Wallace Beery was more seriously hurt by the discharge of that "blank" cartridge than anyone but his doctors realized. Today, on the "Bad Man From Brimstone" set, I found him still hobbling about on crutches, with a nurse in constant attendance. For his closeups he sits in a specially constructed wheel chair which sways and jiggles as it is trucked about, to give the impression that he is walking. His brother Noah is doubling for him in the long shots—very successfully, for viewed from the rear exposure the Beery boys are identical twins. Wally insisted on removing the bandages to show me his wound, a festering hole the size of a silver dollar. "I'd rather turn the stomachs of you columnists than to have you go away and write that I'm just a big sissy," he roared.

*On the "Rosalie" set, I found a very disconsolate Ray Bolger. For years all of his dancing shoes have been hand-tailored by a super-cobbler in New York. A few months ago the shoemaker developed lung trouble, closed up shop and left for Arizona. Ray has gone through his last pair of shoes with about 60 hours of dancing still ahead of him on this picture. After combing the Los Angeles shoe stores without finding a pair of brogans to suit, he tracked down the New York cobbler in a Tucson sanitarium. With borrowed tools, the specialist is making five new pairs of shoes—at $100 a pair. And Ray, meanwhile, is dancing on a pair of soles reinforced with newspaper.

To every actress comes one great triumph, and today I saw some unsung extra girl attain hers. She was walking down the studio street toward the stage where "Mannequin" is in production and her evening gown was a masterpiece, designed to display the charms of the feminine figure. She passed a group of carpenters and they snapped to attention like soldiers on parade. A studio truck swung around a corner and, while its driver craned his neck to stare, almost crashed into a sound stage. And little Miss Extra, her blonde head held high, swept on with an air of pride that defies description. No great star ever made a more triumphant exit than hers, as she stepped from the studio street into the oblivion of the stage.

First Book Penned By Janet Beecher

Following in the footsteps of Harriet Beecher Stowe, her cousin Janet Beecher, noted character actress, has turned authoress.

Miss Beecher's first book, tentatively titled, "They Are Broadway," after two years of preparation, will soon be ready for publication.

The book will consist of personality sketches of famous Broadway personalities, which Miss Beecher knew personally.

Chapters have been devoted to such famed Broadwayites as Harry Richman, Sam Harris, Al Wood, Flo Ziegfeld, Guthrie McClintic, Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontanne, Alice and William Brady, and the Barrymores.

Work in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Rosalie" has Miss Beecher doing her writing by night. She looks to finish the book within the month. She has but three chapters to finish.

Pauline Frederick In 'Mr. Moto' Film

Pauline Frederick has been engaged by Twentieth Century-Fox for the all-important role of Mme. Chung in "Thank You, Mr. Moto," the third of the series starring Peter Lorre.

Other additions to the cast include Ned a Harrigan, Sidney Blackmer, John Bleifer and William von Brincken. Jayne Regan, the newest graduate from the Twentieth Century-Fox stock school, has the leading feminine role, with Joan Carradine in a featured part.

Wears 'Gaiters.'

Ted Healy, comedian of "Hollywood Hotel," wears old-fashioned "Congress gaiters" both on and off the sets. They are soft shoes with rubber insets over the ankles and are especially made for him by a New York bootmaker.

Stars Shrink, Too; Hot Lights, Cause

After six weeks of work in "The Four Marys" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Myrna Loy, Rosalind Russell and Walter Pidgeon stepped upon a weight scale.

As explained by Miss Russell.

"I lost weight during every picture. The only explanation I can offer is that the hot lights dehydrate our bodies and this results in weight losing."

Ice Gift to Star Is Big 'Fish Cake'

Douglas McPhail presented a 50-pound cake of ice to Betty Jaynes with instrutcions to let it melt. When she had followed instructions the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer songstress had a dozen bass, caught by McPhail.

Truman Boosts Proposed Rail Reorganization

Says Missouri Pacific Revamping Plan Would Unite Factions.

By the Associated Press.

Acting Chairman Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, of the Senate Railway Finance Committee said yesterday that a "friendly interest" would exist between creditors and owners of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, should a proposed plan to reorganize the road be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

He made this statement after a committee investigator submitted evidence purporting to show that some insurance company and bank officials involved in the reorganization proceedings had been privileged to buy securities of Alleghany Corporation at $15 a share below the market price. Max Lowenthal, the investigator, said the purchasers were on the so-called "preferred list" of J. P. Morgan & Co.

(The Morgan preferred list has figured extensively in testimony before the Rails Committee and in the Senate Banking Investigation of 1933.)

Alleghany Corporation is the holding company which controls Missouri Pacific, and is part of the Van Sweringen Financial Network. Committee Investigations have contended that under the pending reorganization plan, control of the railroad would remain in the hands of the Van Sweringen interests. Creditors' representatives have disagreed, asserting they would control the road's financial affairs through a finance committee of the new board of directors.

Lowenthal submitted an exhibit listing officers and directors of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the New York Life Insurance Company, the Prudential Insurance Company and the John Hancock Mutual Insurance Company as among those allotted shares of Alleghany stock by J. P. Morgan and Company before it was sold to the public.

Frederick W. Ecker, vice president of Metropolitan Life, and Alfred H. Meyers, treasurer of New York Life, were on the stand. Both denied that their actions as members of the Stedman bondholders' committee had any connection with the presence of the names of other officials of their companies on the Morgan list.

Interrupting the reading of the list, Meyers said heatedly:

"The only purpose of introducing this testimony is to insinuate that because directors of the New York Life were on the so-called preferred list this would have some influence on the actions of the New York Life with respect to the Missouri Pacific. I want it abundantly clear that the affairs of the Missouri Pacific in connection with New York Life are in my hands and that I have never had any instructions from any director as to where I should buy bonds."

U. S. Consulate Robbed.

The Aristocrats of Poland Await the Emperor in 'Conquest'

The scene at the grand ball, given in honor of Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte, where the conqueror of Europe fell in love with the chill and unreceptive young patriot, Countess Marie Walewska, on a visit to her country in time of its greatest need. This is only one of the far-flung and magnificent bits of spectacle and pageantry in which the picture opening today at Loew's Capitol Theater abounds. In the insets are shown Greta Garbo, in the role of the Countess Walewska, and Charles Boyer, in his amazingly convincing impersonation of the Little Corsican. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle marks the supreme screen achievement of them both.

Sonja Has Bundle Of Fancy Scarves

V. M. I. Steward Suspended on Fraud Charges

"Irregularities" Reported in Commissary Head's Food Payments.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10.—Gov. George C. Peery disclosed today the board of Virginia Military Institute had reported its suspension of William J. Ashburne, steward in charge of the institute's commissary department.

Gov. Peery said the board had made a report to him of charges of irregularities in the operation of the commissary department.

The report of the board said Ashburne was suspended without pay but would be allowed to occupy his present quarters pending a complete investigation of the charges.

Irregularities reported by the institution included the charge that vouchers have been paid by check for dressed chickens and eggs to a man who does not sell chickens or eggs; and that other amounts charged against the kitchen, mess hall, bakery, etc., by the commissary are in excess of the real cost.

Security Act Held Nation's Salvation

If the United States is to continue to exist as a Nation, the principles on which the Social Security Act is based must be respected as sacred, Gen. James A. Drain, former commander of the American Legion last night told an Armistice Day gathering of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States at the Jewish Community Center.

Other speakers included Ben W. Barnett, chairman of the arrangements committee of Washington Post, No. 58, which sponsored the services; Rabbi Henry Silverstone, Mrs. Hilda Barr, president of the Washington Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States; Mrs. Malvina V. Freeman, national president of the Ladies Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans; Capt. Watson B. Miller, Rabbi Julius T. Loeb, Rabbi Henry Segal and Joseph Danzansky.

Music was furnished by Miss Mary Frances Glenn, Cantor Louis Novick, and the United States Navy Band.

The 'Four Horsemen of Hilarity'

This quartet of agile funsters comprise the stellar comedy cast of "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," the new Universal filmusical, opening on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater today. In the usual direction they are Bert Lahr, Billy House, Mischa Auer and Jimmy Savo, riding the title of their picture. Others in the cast include Alice Brady, Louise Fazenda, Joy Hodges and John King.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall Wednesday night, with Lucrezia Bori as soloist. Program: Toccata (Frescobaldi), Chorale-Prelude (Bach-Reger), Two Arias from "Le Nozze di Figaro" (Mozart), Symphony No. 97 in C major (Haydn), "En Saga" (Sibelius), Aria from "Louise" (Charpentier), Excerpts from "Petrushka" (Stravinski).

That festive air which was observable at the opening of the National Symphony Orchestra's seventh season continued to permeate Constitution Hall last evening at the first midweek concert. The large audience was in the mood for enjoyment and made its attitude unmistakably evident in enthusiastic applause whenever the opportunity came. Not the least factor in the excitement was the presence of Lucrezia Bori, who, aside from her artistic allure, is held in special esteem by the orchestra's patrons as the first soloist with the organization six years ago.

Radiating her wonted charm of personality, Miss Bori was in excellent voice and captivated her auditors with ease. From "Le Nozze di Fiargo," she sang the second-act aria, Porgi amor," and the third-act recitative, "E Susanna non vien" and the ensuing aria, "Dove son." The clarity of her tone, the crispness of her diction, and the grace of her phrasing combined in effective readings. At her second appearance, she embued the familiar "Depuis le jour" with so moving a sentiment that the audience insisted upon an extra number. This Miss Bori turned into a compliment to Washington by electing to sing a cradle song by Mary Howe.

Dr. Kindler opened the program with the hale and vigorous toccata by Frescobaldi which went so well at the initial concert that many requests had been made for its repetition. In contrast to its sturdy secularity was the arrangement by Max Reger of Bach's chorale-prelude, "O Mensch, Bewein Dein' Suende Gross," which is penitential music of the utmost sincerity.

The symphony of the evening was the eupeptic and cheerful C major with which Franz Joseph Haydn made his London debut at the age of 59. This work, the first of the 12 symphonies that he wrote on commission from his friendly impersario, Johann Peter Salomon, has not been worn so threadbare in our concert halls as some of the others, and it has the freshness of a novelty. In its continuous geniality, its unremitting good humor, and its unflagging energy it reflects the characteristics of its composer.

That the idiom of the mature Sibelius was implicit in his music from the beginning of his career is apparent in "En Saga," a work of his twenty-seventh year. As a tone-painting of Viking exploits in the misty northern seas it is unsurpassed both in narrative movement and in coloration. Last night's performance by Dr. Kindler and his men was stirring and impressive.

The program closed with three excerpts from Stravinski's ballet, "Petrushka, the quintessence of his ingenious invention in tonal combinations. The brilliance of the colors is barbaric, and the incessant play of instrumental lights is dazzling.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Gordon String Quartet (Jacques Gordon, David Sackson, William Lincer and Naoum Benditzki) in the chamber music auditorium Wednesday afternoon. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 18, No. 6; Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2; Quartet in B flat major, Op. 130 (Beethoven).

Donor of five Stradivari instruments to the Library of Congress and founder of a fund for their preservation and occasional use in public, Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall presented yesterday afternoon, through the library's division of music, the first of nine concerts constituting the Stradivari Bicentennial Festival in commemoration of the great violin maker of Cremona who laid down his tools for the last time two centuries ago. Appropriately enough, the composer chosen for the opening program was Ludwig van Beethoven, whose genius gave the string quartet its superlative power of expression.

Not that one of his best quartets led the list on this occasion. The third and the sixth quartets of Opus 18 are the weakest, for like Hydn before him, Beethoven arranged this set for publication in such a way that the finest works had the key positions. The B flat major quartet is really Beethovenish only in the adagio of the fourth movement, "La Malinconia," that graphic description of a depressed mood which rebounds into gayety in the cheerful finale.

In the E minor quartet, the second of the "Rasumovski" set, we are on entirely different ground. The shadows of mystery lurk in the first and second movements, and the whole tone of the work, despite its moments of happiness, is contemplative. Beethoven once told Holz that he conceived the slow movement as he gazed at the stars and thought of man and eternity. The following allegretto, replacing the scherzo then in voge, is so nostalgic that when a Russian tune is brought in for the trio, the effect is somewhat incongruous. This is the same tune used later by Musorgski in the first act of "Boris Godunov."

The great B flat major quartet, massive with its six movements, is a work which never yields its full meaning no matter how many times it is heard, so rich is its content. The opening adagio-allegro is packed with ideas, and the dark, muted presto that follows scintillates with sparks of thought. The wonderfully wrought andante reminds one of the measured pacing of Palestrina. Of the cavatina, that marvelously poetic inspiration Beethoven said: "Never did music of mine make so deep an impression on me, even the remembrance of the motions is aroused always cost me a tear."

Jacques Gordon and his associates played the program conscientiously and with sympathy for the music. The Stradivari instruments, in their first warming-up, uttered now and then those lisps and growls which musicians know as "wolfs."

Britain Purchases $5,000,000 in Gold

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that $5,000,000 worth of gold will be shipped to England today, bringing to $15,250,000 the known exports of the metal.

A $10,250,000 shipment which left for France today was the first physical outflow of gold from this country in nearly two years.

Armistice Day Finds Many War Heroes Confined to Hospitals

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

The order "cease firing!" whose ninteenth anniversary is being observed today did not mean the end of battle to the war veterans shown on this page nor to their more than 50,000 hospitalized or institutionalized comrades who are being cared for by Uncle Sam. Racked by coughing, bodies maimed, senses impaired or minds affected, they are hoping to regain their health so that they may return once more to society to live like others. Some will win, some won't. The day when the doctor will say "Physically sound, discharged," is the big Armistice Day they are waiting for now.

This Morning

By Shirley Povich.

Things I knew all the time:

That coal was discovered when a careless early settler in America forgot to put out his campfire and then awoke in the morning to realize that strange black stones just below the ground's surface had actually taken fire and gave off better and steadier heat than wood.

POVICH.

—That copper was discovered when an errant pig fell into a hole in Montana and a rescue party came upon the gleaming red-yellow metal for the first time.

That coffee was discovered when a Brazilian sheep herder noticed that the part of his flock which had been munching curious black means growing high on the hillside was more lively, more stimulated than the sheep who fed in the lowlands.

That Benny Leonard first made his entrance into the prize ring when a skylight gave way and he lost his perch on the roof, landing in the ring. They made him fight to earn his way in.

Another Coincidence

But did you know that the long arm of coincidence was in equal measure responsible for Slingin' Sammy Baugh's matriculation at Texas Christian University, where for three years he fired the football world with the greatest display of forward passes ever attempted by any college player?

Well, it was. Sammy Baugh, who almost never talks about himself, turned back the clock the other night and was saying that back in '32 one of the things he wasn't figuring on was a college education. Papa Baugh, down in Sweetwater, Tex., had young Sammy all lined up for a job on the railroad and, come June, Sammy was going to work.

But that was before Sweetwater High played the last game of the season for the high school championship of Texas. Baugh was on that Sweetwater team and thanks to a big kid named "Red" Sheridan who could tear up a line and made most of the tackles, Sweetwater was in the finals.

Pre-Game Pep Talk

"Our coach had us all in a huddle in the dressing room before that championship game," relates Baugh, and he really gave us a talk. By the time we trotted out on the field, we wanted to eat the goal posts. He had us all hepped up.

"Here's what he told us: 'You fellows are going out there and win this ball game today, but you're gonna do more than that. You've got a debt to pay—a big debt—and you're gonna pay it this afternoon. Now listen:

"'Out there on the sidelines today will be Francis Schmidt, coach of Texas Christian U. He's come all the way down from Fort Worth to see Red Sheridan in action. He's heard about Red and he's gonna give Red a scholarship if he looks good today.

"'Well, you guys owe Red Sheridan plenty. You wouldn't be up here in the finals for the State championship if it wasn't for Red. He's been carrying this team for three years. You all owe Red plenty. Now's your chance to repay him. I want you to go out there and win that game, but I also want you to make Sheridan look good. You've got to do it. It's a college education for him if you do.

"'I want you to go out there and block for Red today. I want you to give him plenty of help out there. I ain't worried about Red; I know he'll do his part. But if you give him a little co-operation, he'll go over big. That's the way we want to impress Schmidt. We want to be proud of Red today.'"

Sheridan Miles Away

"Well," continued Baugh, "we'd have given our right arms to put Red over with Schmidt. And we tried. But somehow, nothing clicked right. We won the ball game, but Red was an awful flop. He fumbled punts, he couldn't pick his holes and he was missing all kinds of tackles. We knew he looked bad, too, and it was a sick bunch of kids who came off the field at the finish.

"That night at the high school

New York, Nov. 10.—Climaxing the most successful invasion of the National Horse Show, the Canadian army officers tonight won the coveted international military team jumping championship before a crowd of more than 15,000 in Madison Square Garden.

Paced by the fine performance of Lieut Marshall Cleland, on Roxana, the Canadians compiled the low aggregate of 12 faults to turn back the officers and picked mounts of the United States, Irish Free State, Belgium and The Netherlands.

The victory, coming ater 12 years of failure, gave the Canadians, led by 43-year-old Capt. Stuart Bate, two of the major military trophies of the show, which closed tonight with one of the largest crowds in its history packing the big Eighth avenue arena. Previously, the Dominion officers had won the three-night competition for the Low Score Challenge Trophy.

Second place went to the Belgians, returning to the national after an absence of eight years, with 15 faults. The Uniter States, beaten every year since 1933, an dthe Irish, victor two years ago, tied for third with 20 errors each, but the Emerald Isle officers won the toss for third place ribbons. The Dutch brought up the rear with 28 errors. Each nation was permitted to jump four horses with the score of the best three counting.

Horse Champions

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Champions, crowned at the National Horse Show:

Military (team)—Canada.

Roxana, big Irish bred mare, was the only horse that gave a clean performance. She was the first to appear in the ring and under 25-year-old Cleland's guidance skimmed over the high barriers without a bobble. Lady Jane, ridden by Col. Timmis, knocked over two obstacles for a total of eight faults, and Squire, 23-year-old veteran of the show ring handled by Capt Bate, hit only one for four errors to compile the Canadians' final score.

The showing of the United States horses, especially the usually reliable Ugly, was a disappointment. Ugly, first of the American jumpers to appear, knocked over the first two jumps before hitting his stride with Capt. Matteson in the saddle.

Dakota, ridden by Lieut. Franklin S. Wing and winner of the $1,000 jumper stake earlier in the evening, knocked over only one fence, but the best that either King-Hi or Masquerader could do was 8 faults each. Capt. Royce Drake rode King-Hi, while Lieut. Scott M. Sanford piloted Masquerader.

Highland Cora, an equine midget owned by A. B. Dick's Dicksfield Farm, of Gurnee, Ill., won the harness pony title as expected, succeeding her famous sire, King of the Plain. The reserve ribbon went to J. Macey Willets' Eastertide, of New Marlboro, Mass.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Grey Knight was crowned hunter champion at the matinee session and then at night the Virginia and New York sportswoman was awarded the H. E. Manville Amateur Victory Challenge Trophy for being the leading amateur exhibitor.

Mrs. Whitney won seven first places with her hunters, the majority of which she rode herself, but yielded blue ribbon honors to Mrs. Loula Long Combs, of Kansas City, who accounted for 11 classes, including the championship of the harness horses, with Captivation.

Amateur Tournament Reaches Semi-Finals

Sweet Revenge For Joe Cronin And C. Griffith

Baseball's manager and magnate duo, Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, and Clark Griffith, of the Nats, gained sweet revenge on Marion Brown and Helen Dettweiler for a previous links licking by trouncing the girls, 3 and 2, yesterday at Indian Spring.

Babe Didrikson made it a five-some and carded a 77, while Bucky Harris, manager of the Nats, served as an added attraction by gallerying the final nine holes.

The blonde linkswomen had trimmed the diamond duo by a 1-up margin last week, but Cronin, after giving full notice, brought out his best game of the season, an 82, and was aided three strokes by his partner.

The Babe added to the show by a continuance of her clouting, playing the long eleventh and twelfth holes with drives and eight and nine irons, respectively. She was out in 38 and back in 39, 3 over par on each nine.

Displaying his best "George Diffenbaugh" hook, Cronin was 39 on the first nine holes. A back nine 43 totaled his score at 82, with Miss Dettweiler a stroke higher, Miss Brown 84 and Griff several strokes off his game at 91.

A return match for the best two out of three will be played in the near future. M. W. W.

Fifth Term To Jacobus

Illinois Delegation Lone Objector.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—George R. Jacobus of Ridgewood, N. J., won his battle for a fifth term as president of the Professional Golfers' Association of America today over loud but futile opposition by the Illinois section.

Irked over several happenings in Jacobus' administration, the Illinois group had campaigned since early last summer to oust Jacobus, but when the roll was called 57 delegates voted to retain the Eastern pro, two, the Illinois delegation, voted for Alex Cunningham, the opposition candidate, and two other delegates passed their votes.

Along with Jacobus, all of last year's officers, with the exception of R. W. Treacy of Grand Rapids, Mich., were re-electd. Frank Sprogll, of Detroit, was elected to fill the Midwestern vice presidency left vacant by the resignation of Treacy. Tom Walsh, of Chicago, and Jack Mackie, of New York, continue as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Vice presidents re-elected were Dudley, Philadelphia, Willie Maguire, Dallas, Tex.; Dewey Longworth, Oakland, Calif.; Tom Boyd, New York; Grange Alves, Cleveland; Al Collins, Kansas City, and Ray Hall, Pullman, Wash. President Charles W. Hall, Birmingham, Ala., and Vice Presidents Walter Hagen and Robert Tyre Jones were re-elected to honorary offices. Arthur H. Hilly, of New York, attorney for the P. G. A., was elected to honorary membership.

Marlboro Hotel Boosts Win Streak

The league leading Marlboro Hotel stretched their winning streak to 11 straight games, aided by Earl Duncan's 383, and Brad Mandley's 379, by sweeping their set from Cooke Press, formerly Brodts, Inc., in the strong Recreation Bowling League last night at Recreation Alleys.

Terry's Home Appliance Co., led by Jack Mooney's 367, moved into second place, three games back of the leaders, when they whitewashed Bregman's Wildcats, despite Sam Simon's 370 and Beaver's 364.

University Shop held third place by taking a 2-1 decision from Allied Roofing, despite Perce Wolfe's 363 and Ed Edinger's 361.

By Jack Munhall.

The card moved swiftly with knockouts and technical knockouts in rapid succession. There were 15 novice and open bouts. Four other scheduled bouts were forfeited. The pace was as fast and furious as it was in the two previous weeks.

Several veterans made impressive debuts without being seriously extended. Bob Mathias, National Guard welterweight, established himself as a threat to the 147-pounders by his single-punch, first-round knockout of Frank Burke, unattached entry.

Gene (Spud) Murphy, Quantico Marine welterweight, showed up well in this class. Murphy won a 3-round decision from Eli Becker, National Guard. Though Murphy received an uninamous verdict, the fight was closely contested and one of the best "old-fashioned" brawls the tournament has seen. Murphy, not in the best of condition after a long layoff from the ring, planned a smart, cagey fight and followed it to advantage.

In the first two rounds he was content to box and sometimes exchange long lefts with his hard-hitting foe. It was obvious he was saving for the finish. In the last heat, Murphy staged his finish. Rushing across the ring with the opening bell, he tore into Becker and continued punching until the final bell. He had the Guardsman in bad shape at the end.

Jim Brady, a Georgetown University heavyweight, created favorable comment as he essayed the role of "Jack the Giant Killer" to perfection in outpointing Tom Feddom, A. B. & W. Terminal colorbearer. Brady, weighing 180, spotted Feddom 17 pounds, several inches in height and reach and in fact every physical advantage.

In one of the best fights of the evening, Julius Stommell, Young's A. C., stopped William Boley, Northeast B. C. 135-pounder, in one minute and 30 seconds of the second round. He had been floored three times in the opening stanza. Stommell, a lanky boy with a wild left hook, and Boley slammed into each other from the opening bell and received the loudest ovation of the evening.

OPEN CLASSES

126-Pound Class.

135-Pound Class.

WILLIAM BOLEY FALLS UNDER JULIUS STOMMELL'S ASSAULT

Ten Goals to Smith, Hitchcock, Iglehart

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 10.—Thomas Hitchcock, jr., Stewart Iglehart and Cecil Smith, the robust former cowboy from Llano, Tex., share the distinction of being the world's three "perfect" polo players, each handicapped at the ultimate 10 goals, in the new listings announced today by the United States Polo Association.

For Hitchcock it means the retention of an honor the "Old Master" of Long Island's playing fields has held in 16 or 17 consecutive years. For Smith it is a return to glory, as he reached the pinnacle once before, in 1934. Iglehart, teammate of Smith on the all-conquering old Westbury team, retains the peak rating given him a year ago.

The revised list boosted the total handicap of Old Westbury to 34 and graphically explained that team's brilliant victories in the Open Championship and the Monty Waterbury Cup tournament. Michael Phipps, who rode at No. 1 for the champions, has been hiked from eight to nine goals, sandwiched between his two ten-goal teammates. C. V. (Sunny) Whitney, the team's back and captain, rose from four to five goals.

Greentree Drops.

On the other hand, Greentree, which met Old Westbury in the final of both big events, dropped a goal from its aggregate handicap when J. H. (Jock) Whitney was reduced from six to five. Hitchcock at ten, Gerald Balding at eight and Pete Bostwick, seven, remained put.

In all, there were 152 handicap changes in the big shuffle, which goes into effect November 15. The boosting of Phipps from eight goals to 9, and the reduction of Eric Pedley from nine to eight, at the request of the California committee, left Phipps the only American one notch from the top, though Capt. C. T. I. Roark, of England, also is listed at nine.

The four eight-goalers are Gerald Balding, Pedley, William Post 2d and E. H. Tyrrell-Martin. At seven are Ivor Balding, Elmer J. Boeseke, jr., Pete Bostwick, E. T. Gerry, Raymond Guest, Winston Guest, Cyril Harrison, E. A. S. Hopping, J. P. Mills and Aidan Roark. Ivor Balding and Harrison were raised from six to seven, and Winston Guest lowered from eight.

This was the first year the committee employed its new system of rating, in which each of the country's six circuits offers recommendations for its own players. The California section requested, and received, reductions for three of its stars, Pedley, Boeseke and Aidan Roark.

Other changes included: Seven goals to six, Terence Preece, R. L. Gerry, jr., J. C. Rathborne, R. E. Strawbridge, jr.; four goals to five, J. P. Grace, jr., Robert Nichoalds, Lieut. A. H. Wilson, jr. (Army); three goals to four, Lewis Brown 3d (Kansas City), William Britt (Houston), Fink Merrill, Wynn Humberson (Houston), Capt. H. W. Kiefer (Army), Lieut. W. A. Sackman (Army), Jay K. Secor, Lewis Smith, L. E. Weeks, W. R. Zimmerman; five goals to four, Maj. C. A. Wilkinson (Army); two goals to four, Lieut. J. K. Waters.

Dupre Challenges Winner of Bout Monday Night

Tony Dupre, New England champion, last night challenged the winner of the Lou Gevinson-Cristobal Jaramillo fight Monday night. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced the challenge and said that Dupre probably will be given a crack at the victor.

The laddie known as Lou is rated the underdog in Monday night's fistic enterprise. The Puerto Rican recently scored a victory over Tony Dupre. Dupre won the New England title from Joey Archibald and forced the suspension of the Providence puncher from Rhode Island.

New Policy Takes Effect December 1

Bars Transfer Players, Controls 'Aid' and Hits Proselyting.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Cornell University today made public its adoption of a code of athletic eligibility designed to maintain long-standing barriers against football subsidizing and recruiting without, at the same time, imposing arbitrary restrictions upon scholarship and financial aid to undergraduates.

Adopted with "a view to keeping the spirit and association of professionalism out of college sports without the unreasonable hampering of them by the mere letter of rules," the code provides for unqualified university control of all student aids direct or indirect; bars so-called "transfer students" from all intercollegiate competition, and frowns upon prep school proselyting.

Under the code, as announced by Athletic Director James Lynah, a new board of athletic policy will not only supervise all matters of financial aid to athletes but have final authority over eligibility, apart from that involving academic standing. The faculty, as formerly, will determine all questions of scholastic eligibility.

Effective December 1.

The code, already approved by President Ezra Day and effective December 1, 1937, substantially duplicates the so-called "triple agreement" under which Harvard, Yale and Princeton operate in conduct of athletics.

Its adoption by Cornell is interpreted as another step in the objective of Eastern "Ivy League" universities to standardize principles as well as practices.

Thus the code specifically limits the football schedule to eight games, bars post-season contests "for the purpose of settling sectional or other championships or involving long and expensive trips," and sets forth that athletic schedules shall be made so far as possible, "only with teams representing institutions employing similar standards of eligibility and similar training methods."

Lynah, prefacing his announcement with specific reference to the "Big Three" and their code, said: "Regardless of gossip, insinuation, and innuendo, I know that these colleges are making an honest and sincere effort to control properly the matter of financial aid to students participating in athletics . . . By requiring all candidates for competition in any sport to disclose full information as to the amount and sources of financial aid, the whole matter is brought fully into the open, most certainly removes the motives for concealment of such aid on the part of the students; and dignifies the position of one receiving such aid instead of demanding it."

Bans Paid Athletes.

The code (1) disbars any athlete who has received any pecuniary reward or its equivalent by reason of any connection with athletics, as player, coach or teacher; (2) bans financial aid from sources other than those on which a student "is naturally dependent," unless the board of athletic policy approves otherwise; and (3) limits participation in summer baseball or summer camp work to cases approved in advance by the board.

These regulations, Lynah pointed out, are "intended to prevent discrimination either in favor of, or against, a student because he is an athlete."

Larry Kelley Picks All-Star Team of Opponents

By Larry Kelley.

I suppose that all former football players (gosh, it hurts to say that) have some pretty fine memories of the men we played against. I know I have.

During the three years I carried a blue jersey up and down the field, I ran into a lot of fine players, a good percentage of whom did a bit of running into me—with varying results.

A football player often gets a different view of an opponent than the spectator in the stands. Some boys are flashy and have the knack of making the headlines (I suppose I shouldn't complain about that while others, who may be better players, remain comparatively unsung and unhonored except by their appreciative teammates and coach.

So when I select a team composed of 11 men, who were tops in their positions when I played against them, I would like to add that this is entirely personal. If I am slighting some who should be mentioned, please remember that I am selecting these men solely on their performances against the Yale teams on which I played.

Center	Al Ciampa, Columbia.
Right guard	Rivers Morrell, Navy.
Right tackle	George Stoess, Princeton.
Right end	Shaun Kelly, Harvard.
Quarterback	Ken Sandbach, Princeton.
Right halfback	Franny Murray, Penn.
Fullback	Bill Kurlish, Penn.

Let's start with the end. That might sound like a contradiction but is a position with which I claim some familiarity. For left end, I name Princeton's Gil Lea, worthy son of an all-American father.

Lea was a sound end in every respect and had few equals in defensive play. The amount of ground gained around his wing was so small that most smart quarterbacks chose to run elsewhere. A fast man downfield under punts, he was also a better-than-average pass snagger.

For the other wing, I nominate Shaun Kelly, of the "single-e" Kellys. Shaun garnered comparatively few headlines during his career but he had the full respect of his teammates and opposing players. His quick instinct at diagnosing plays was uncanny and he was seldom sucked-in, a habit that he and I did not have in common. Elected Harvard captain in his senior year, he proved an inspiring leader.

Dave Camerer, in three years of service, was one of the finest tackles in the East. I know, because end plays against tackle and thus I came into very intimate contact with Dave on more than one occasion. He did everything that a good tackle should do and often beat his ends downfield under kicks. Besides, Dave is now a football reporter and we gentlemen of the press must stick together.

For Camerer's running mate, I give you George Stoess. Everything said of Dave can be repeated for George. He was one of the most important performers on a Princeton forward wall that was the best in the Ivy League for two years.

My guards are Rivers Morrell, Navy captain, and Tom Montgomery, Princeton leader. I can see little argument with these choices because both men were outstanding. I unhesitatingly name Montgomery over Princeton's All-American John Weller, because when I played against them, Montgomery was far the more effective performer.

One of the hardest positions to pick is center because there have been so many good ones, but I have a very vivid recollection of Al Ciampa, Columbia's mighty mite in 1934. The Columbia game that year was my first on the varsity and what Ciampa didn't do to our ball carriers shouldn't be done to a dog. I have never forgotten his exhibition and don't now.

And so we come to the backfield, which has Ken Sandbach to do the passing, blocking and conversion of points after touchdown; Monk Meyer for running, passing and kicking; Fran Murray for kicking and blocking; and Bill Kurlish for plunging and backing up the line.

This is a well-balanced set of backs. Three of them were great defensive players and terrors at blocking: Kurlish, in my book, had no equal in backing up a line. He was the hardest, most vicious tackler I have ever seen—or felt. Murray's long, angled kicks played hob with more than one harried safety man, while Sandbach was a fine all-around player and a quarterback who made few mistakes. Meyer, of course, was a one-man offense, as anyone who played against him can testify. He was almost impossible to bring down in an open field and could thread a needle with his passes.

Next Wednesday I hope to offer an alternate backfield, celebrated for something other than mere football ability.

Divvy Dan Picks His Gridiron Winners.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 10.—The fugitive football prognosticator:

I was sitting at my desk lamenting the duplicity of women when suddenly my attention was yanked to the doorway. There stood a bewhiskered, bedraggled old bozo waving a white flag. He croaked, "Armistice! Armistice!"

* * *

It was Divvy Dan, the divinating man—out of hiding at last. It was our first meeting since the football season opened—since he escaped from the sanitarium and fled to some secret sanctuary.

* * *

He advanced stealthily to my desk, still waving the flag, which was merely a grimy shirt nailed to a stick. I knew where the shirt came from when his tattered and smeared gray top coat opened a bit at the chest.

* * *

"I took a chance and came out tonight because it's Armistice Eve," Divvy Dan said. "No true patriot—not even a cop or a keeper—will violate this flag of truce on Armistice Eve. After I give you my football winners for this week I'm going up to see my sweetie. Then I'll go back into hiding."

* * *

I told Divvy I knew his sweetie and that she was a foul ball. Divvy was angered at this and raised his flagstaff to swat me. Before he could strike I said: "Your sweetie, Miss Susie Q. Shag, made the football picks last week when your selections failed to show up. She said she could out-divinate you. So I let her try."

* * *

Divvy lowered the flag and roared with laughter. "She couldn't even pick her teeth!" he declared. "And she said she could out-divinate me. That dame is nuts. How'd she do?"

* * *

I explained that she had picked 37 games right, 16 wrong and suffered three ties. Her right and wrong average was .698. This pared down Divvy's average for the season to .722. Divvy was indignant momentarily. Then he smiled and said, "Well—I'll boost that average sky high this time. I've got 'em here on this paper—and all of 'em right. Here they are!"

15,000 See Joyner Filly Outrun Field

Luck Plays Big Part in Victory; Winner Is Given Fine Ride.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 10.—A. J. Joyner's High Fleet, running her final race before being sent to the breeding farm, scored a smashing victory in the $5,000 Ritchie Handicap as a crowd of 15,000 watched today. Coming from behind a fast pace, High Fleet answered the urging of Jockey Wayne Wright to hold a neck decision over Wise Prince. Deliberator was third in the field of seven competing at six furlongs.

Winner of 14 of her 27 races during her three years of campaigning High Fleet added $4,820 to her earnings for this year and stepped the sprint route in 1:12 with 120 pounds up. Her farewell appearance, however, found her on her racing luck for Wise Prince undoubtedly would have won but for being badly blocked in the stretch run.

The field fairly boiled over with early speed, but Wright wisely did not make High Fleet a party. Speed to Spare, Rough Time and Deliberator burned the oil in a battle for the pace, and each of the trio showed the effects of driving when the final dash to the wire came. Speed to Spare and Rough Time dropped entirely out of the running and Deliberator tired.

At about midstretch, Wright made his bid with High Fleet and went to the top. However, Wise Prince, taken back in the early running, came through on the rail but found a wall of horses in front of him. He swung to the outside and then barely missed being up in time.

Trojan Racket, in the colors of Mrs. S. Bryce Wing, won in the thrilling steeplechase that marked the opening of the program. At least 6 of the 11 contestants were in front at some stage, with Trojan Racket there at pay-off time. His backers collected at the rate of $28 for each $2 investment. Long Shot was second, beaten a length and two and a half lengths in front of a photo decision for third money, which went to Dundrillin. Jockey J. Dawson was tossed by Donee after the eighth jump, and appeared to have been injured.

Grand Marie, owned by Donald Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., overcame poor racing luck and won the second race by a half-length from Ann McGinty. The Grand Time filly was leading by two lengths in the stretch, but she saw a cameraman perched on the rail and bolted out suddenly, barely escaping falling. Ann McGinty, behind her, also shied. However, Jockey Joe O'Marrely straightened Grand Marie and she went on to win and pay a $10.30 mutuel.

The Millsdale Stables' Isaroma added another purse to his growing string in the third race, but did not win as easily as heretofore. The young gelding failed to get to the front early, and then swerved in the stretch run. However, Jockey Westrope had him a length in advance of Lawrin at the finish. Early Delivery was third. The winner was heavily played at a $2.70 mutuel.

G. L. Stryker's Dunnamany came through on the inside entering the stretch while the leaders went wide and went on to win the fourth race by a neck from Ruffy. Joan Asbestos was third to the $12.30 shot. Charlie Kurtsinger gave the winner a good ride.

The Millsdale Stable's Bottle Cap made good as a $4.20 favorite in the Marble Hill Purse. The son of Bostonian took command when asked and defeated Prairie Dog by three lengths. Yellow Tulip was third in the field of nine.

Anne G., a $47.60 shot, defeated the favored Miney Myerson by a head margin in the seventh race, a 6-furlong sprint. Broadstep was third in the limit field of 12. The first and second horses battled it out from the start. The victory was Jockey Westrope's third of the day.

Post time for the first race tomorrow will be 1:15 p. m.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TROJAN RACKET, $28.00, $10.60, $7.00; LONG SHOT (Bostwick-Bosley entry), $4.90, $4.30; DUNDRILLEN, $7.10.

TROJAN RACKET, forward factor from start, moved up gamely after being given breathing spell and disposed of LONG SHOT on final flat. LONG SHOT worked his way up after a mile and made bad landing at twelfth fence, which probably cost him race. DUNDRILLEN weakened after going in prominent position. FLYING FEATHERS moved up boldly to get to front, but weakened. CLAQUE tired. DONEE lost rider after eighth fence.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Promotion. For maiden 2-year-olds, foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 1:48. Off 1:51. Winner, D. Christmas' b. f. (2), by Grand Time—Marie Rose. Trained by E. A. Christmas. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND MARIE, $10.30, $6.60, $4.10; ANN McGINTY, $7.20, $4.80; ANNINO, $3.80.

GRAND MARIE, rushed to front in opening furlong and steadied along, bolted out suddenly but was straightened in time to hold ANN McGINTY safe. The latter was following the pacemaker and shied when leader bolted. ANNINO raced greenly. RIOTOUS closed full of run.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Point Lookout. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:15. Off 2:20½. Winner, Millsdale Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISAROMA, $2.70, $2.60, $2.30; LEWRIN, $7.50, $4.20; EARLY DELIVERY, $3.10.

ISAROMA, crowded back at start, came around horses to gain contention and swerved repeatedly through stretch, but was up in time to dispose of LAWRIN. The latter raced EARLY DELIVERY into defeat and continued gamely, but could not resist winner. EARLY DELIVERY set pace under hustling tactics and tired. GALAPAS stopped after pressing pace.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Union Bridge. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:43½. Off 2:45. Winner, G. L. Stryker's br. c. (3), by Trojan—Gallia. Trained by H. Hausner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANNE G., $47.60, $10.80, $7.80; MINEY MYERSON, $3.00, $2.90; BROADSTEP, $29.10.

ANNE G. pressed the pace of MINEY MYERSON from start and rallied to punishment, to be up in concluding strides. MINEY MYERSON broke alertly, set pace under hustling tactics and fought it out with good courage. BROADSTEP raced wide throughout and showed good effort.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Union Bridge (second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:50. Off 4:51. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. g. (5), by Bostonian—King's Fancy. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE SPLENDOR, $10.50, $6.70, $4.50; BRILLIANT LIGHT, $18.40, $10.00; TENACE, $4.10.

PRINCE SPLENDOR, rated when outrun by MAEBOB, took command when called on and drew out without effort. BRILLIANT LIGHT closed with belated rush. TENACE made up some ground in late stages. MAEBOB tired from setting pace. FLYING BANNER raced on inside. COUNT TETRARCH had no excuses.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

Pimlico's stake-a-day meeting ends with the running of the Bowie Handicap and the racing writers haven't had a steak in a week. Making his last appearance of the Maryland season before shipping West for another crack at the Santa Anita Handicap, Seabiscuit will attempt to carry 130 pounds over a course of a mile and five-eighths. The son of Hard Tack will give away weight to ten others, the majority of which he has defeated this year at shorter routes. Among those getting a nice block of weight from the handicap star will be Caballero II and Burning Star and this pair will be well backed to defeat the Howard ace. The Bowie, for a $10,000 added purse, tops another fine program and with good weather the track expects to be host to 20,000 customers. Jockey W. C. (Boots) Huff, of Washington, arrived today from Rockingham. He is the son of Nick Huff, popular jockey in Maryland a decade ago. J. A. Manfuso's Aneroid will be shipped to California on Monday, accompanied by True Tune, his stablemate. Aneroid will be pointed for the Santa Anita Handicap and travels West in the same car with Pompoon. The Medway and Cosgrave Stables of Canada will race at Bowie. Mrs. Anna Kopel, mother of the jockey who was injured here yesterday, visited her son at the South Baltimore General Hospital today. Kopel's condition is critical. Eddie Burton, racing secretary, distributed condition books for the Charles Town meeting today. Upwards of 300 horses will ship from Bowie to the West Virginia track. BILL.

First race—Swimalong was over his head last out, but ran a good race, setting the pace before tiring. Blackcock is a fair jumper and likes this course. Wambaw is improving and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Sir Golden sprinted excellently last out and may find this is the right spot for a winning effort. Short Distance likes this route and is fit and ready. Versailles closed with a rush recently and could be a stretch threat.

Third race—Army and Navy should go well at this mile and a half. Recent outing indicated that the route should be the right one. Sicklebill closes like the wind and looms as the one to beat. Peedeeque changed hands last out, but is dangerous.

Fourth race—Polyata appeared to be poorly handled last out from where I sat. I expect more alert handling this time. Airegla and Court Dance for the place and show.

Fifth race—The Bradley entry of Bow and Arrow and Baby Talk holds a strong hand in this good field. Bow and Arrow is the chief reliance of the stable. Conquer turned in a nice winning effort at this course and is dangerous; Fair Stein to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Caballero II and Burning Star have an excellent chance of downing Seabiscuit in this marathon event. Seabiscuit was as straight as a string in that finish at Laurel and his two rivals were closing on him. The weights favor the top pair.

Seventh race—Buck Langhorn may show to advantage in this field. He gets in nicely with 110 pounds and will have My Count and Stocks to beat.

Eighth race—Seo Gull and Jolyon, the MacVean-Zakoor entry, is probably best in this field. Both are formidable and I'm going to string along if one is scatched. Bab Witt has been waiting for the right spot and is dangerous. Sou'wester for the show.

Best bet—Army and Navy.

N. Y. U. Ace Out of Georgetown Game With Injury

G.W.U. Foes Use Passes In Workout

Georgetown University's hopes of upsetting the Violets of New York University Saturday when the two teams meet at the Polo Grounds were raised sky-high today.

It all happened when word was received here that Harry Shorten, ace pass receiver and kicker, will be unable to play due to an injury received in the Lehigh game last Saturday.

One of the best pass receivers in the East, Shorten thus far this season has nabbed 21 passes to run off a total of 323 yards. He was also the New Yorkers' number one punter.

The Violets however, report they have capable men ready to take over the position. One is Harold Dunney, big hard charging bruiser.

The battle at the Polo Grounds will mark the return to old haunts for the three Hilltop mentors. Coaches Jack Hagerty, George Murtagh and Mush Dubofsky, former Blue and Gray gridders, and later professionals with the New York Giants, will be tramping old soil, the Polo Grounds being the home field for the Giants during their time. Murtagh played with the pros for seven years, Hagerty six and Dubofsky one.

Preparing to make it a successful return, the Blue and Gray coaching staff continued drilling yesterday, concentrating mostly on passing and various aerial attacks. Joe Mellendick, recently uncovered as a star passer and Tommy Keating were being drilled in the throwing spot.

More than 30 players have been listed to make the trip.

Catholic U. Team Off for Florida.

Tomorrow night, under the arc lights, University of Miami's Hurricane is to be opposed in an intersectional game.

Unles badly needed Shine, who has been resting a chipped bone in his vertebra will not be used, having been counted out for the season prior to the current emergency.

North Dakota Tries A Pass Offensive.

North Dakota State's gridmen worked on pass offense yesterday in Griffith Stadium as Coach Casey Finnegan expects to reach the Colonials' goal line by the same method used by Alabama, Tulsa and Old Miss, previous conquerors of G. W.

The North Central Conference representatives, George Washington's home-coming foe in Griffith Stadium on Saturday, had Ernie Wheeler throwing and Forrest Stevens catching in the morning workout.

Jim Pixlee was said to be dissatisfied with the showing of the Colonials and threatens a shake-up in the starting line-up. After a good performance against Tulsa Pixlee's charges slumped against Mississippi.

Izzy Weinberg, the junior flash who broke his nose in the season's inaugural, will be back in the line-up.

Maryland Ready For Penn State.

Its 60-minute squad in tiptop shape, Maryland University's gridders will perform in light two-hour sessions the remainder of the week in preparation for its fourth major opponent of the season, Penn State, at State College.

The squad escaped injury in the V. M. I. encounter. Ralph Albarano played his sixth consecutive full game, Bob Brown has played all but five minutes, and Bill Wolfe and Mike Surgent spent only six minutes of inactivity.

The Penn State eleven, fresh from a highly priced victory over its State rival, Penn, has regained its full team also, and although naturally expected to suffer a let-down, will nevertheless be able to give Maryland its busiest afternoon of they season. And they have had plenty.

Navy in Scrimmage.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Scrimmage and more scrimmage was the order at Navy today, as Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick, head coach, took advantage of an open Saturday to improve the general play of the football team.

McAuliffe Battles Tough Hombre 74 Rounds to Draw

By Harry Ferguson.
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 10.—On July 9, 1887, the New York Clipper, a sporting paper, recorded the signing of this agreement:

"Articles of agreement entered into this Thirtieth day of June, 1887, between James Carney, of England, and Jack McAuliffe, of Brooklyn, to fight to a finish with skin-tight gloves, according to Marquis of Queensberry rules, for $2,500 a side, open to $5,000 a side, (meaning the bet could be increased), the fight to take place within 300 miles of Boston. Each man shall be allowed 10 men on a side and each man shall be allowed two seconds.

"James Carney.
"Jack McAuliffe."

McAuliffe used to tell how he was 17 pounds overweight when he started training, and the only way he could take it off was to spend long hours in steam baths. The fight occurred in a barn near Revere Beach, Mass., before a small group of wealthy men who paid $250 each for their admission.

"I guess I was a sick man that night," McAuliffe said. "It was a funny set-up. Chickens would walk across the ring, horses neighed and there was a smell of hay in the air. The owner of the barn was scared to death because he thought somebody had tipped off the police.

"It was 1 o'clock in the morning when Frank Stevenson, the referee, handed each of us a pair of kid gloves with the fingers cut out of them. I went out after Carney fast and caught him with a straight left. He seemed confused by this newfangled boxing and for the first three rounds I did all right.

But there must not have been much steam in my punches although I did knock Carney down once. He was bleeding badly in the tenth round and one of his backers tried to break up the fight by jumping into the ring and yelling 'police.' Charlie Johnson, one of my backers, went through the ropes, put his hand on his pistol and said he would shoot any man who didn't get out of the ring immediately. The fight went on.

"Things began to go against me. Carney butted me with his head and the next 26 rounds were sort of blurred for me. I do remember in the thirtieth round that I looked up in a hay loft and saw a Negro, mouth wide open and eyes popping out of his head, hanging over the edge. I laughed and sort of came back to my senses.

"Between the 41st and 42d rounds Jack Dempsey, my second, whispered: 'Get into a clinch with him, pull his head down over your shoulder and then yell that he's biting you.' We were trying to win the fight on a foul. I did as Dempsey told me to do. The referee stopped the fight and was about to give it to me on a foul when Carney opened his mouth. He had no front teeth. They had been knocked out in a fight in England.

"I took a bad beating between the 50th and 65th rounds, but I knocked Carney down again. Dempsey would lift me to my feet and give me a shove at the start of each round. Finally it got so I hardly felt the blows, and I think Carney was the same way. We fought on and on.

"The end came when the owner of the barn yelled that it was daylight and everybody would have to leave immediately. I remember the referee standing in the middle of the ring, one arm in the air, and saying: 'Gentlemen, in this, the 74th, round of the bout for the world lightweight championship, I declare a postponement. I also declare all bets are to be paid as though the bout ended in a draw. Please leave quietly!'"

McAuliffe always believed he should have knocked Carney out in the first ten rounds, and the more he thought about it the more he worried about his own courage.

Two Knew No Fear.

"I was in St. Louis," he said, "and a man was to be executed for murder. I went to his cell. He was to die in two days and he and I talked about fear and cowards. He said he thought there was fear in every person, but that brave men were able to suppress it. I thought he was wrong because I knew two men—Jack Dempsey and John L. Sullivan—who never had a moment of fear in their lives.

"That man in the cell, I thought, was afraid, but he was trying to conceal it. But I couldn't be sure of that either, and I walked out of the jail with the riddle still unsolved. Even now I don't know the answer."

Dempsey and Sullivan may not have known the feeling of fear, but both were getting near the end of the trail and McAuliffe was destined to play a part in the downfall of both of them.

Thunderbird-Olsen To Grapple Tonight

CHIEF THUNDERBIRD.

British Columbia Indian Will Settle Grudge With Minnesota Swede in Feature of Grunt and Groan Show at Turner's Arena.

As far as Chief Thunderbird is concerned there won't be any Armistice tonight at Turner's Arena, where the big, bad Indian from British Columbia will go into his war dance against Cliff Olsen, the Minnesota Swede, in their feature wrestling match.

Thunderbird, enraged at Olsen's protest against his (the Chief's) use of a stooge, has promised to tear the Swede apart and see just what makes him tick.

Thunderbird, by the way, will have his stooge second, Swift Eagle, along. Swift Eagle almost caused a near riot when Thunderbird whipped Olsen two weeks ago, and Olsen has begged Promoter Turner to keep him out of the arena. Turner definitely has turned "thumbs down" on Cliffie.

Thus Swift Eagle, the diminutive redskin from New Mexico, will enter the ring with the Chief, both dressed in their native Indian regalia—only the Chief will have feathers and Swift Eagle a bandeau. Swift Eagle will take up his place in Thunderbird's corner and hammer away on his antiquated tom-tom. Whenever it is necessary during the course of the match he will go to town, so to speak, on the tom-tom and release Indian chants tantamount to a war whoop-de-doo. This, no doubt, will get on Olsen's nerves, just as it did two weeks ago, but Swift Eagle will have police protection, the promoter says.

Hans Steinke, the fearless German, will return for a semiwindup brawl with Wally Dusek, a Bohemian cousin of Rudy from Nebraska. Theirs will be one fall to a finish.

Nick Campofreda, former Western Maryland athlete, meets Rudy Dusek; Jack Hader, Kansas hate man, faces Bob Roberts, and Mayes McLain, the half Cherokee, opposes Wee Willie Davis, the giant from Virginia. Action begins at 8:30.

Tarheels Are Strong.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 10.—North Carolina's 189-pound line, considered better than last year's, meets another of Dixie's mighty stonewalls at Durham Saturday when it locks horns with the powerful 193-pound line of Duke's undefeated Blue Devils.

It was just eight years ago this month that JOE MEDWICK was selected on the New Jersey All-High football team . . . JOE, the greatest schoolboy athlete in Carteret (his home town) history started as a catcher, in turn shifted to the infield, pitching position, and then the outfield, where he finally reached fame as the slugging "DUCKY-WUCKY," the most-feared batter in the National League . . . 237 base hits, that won the National League batting championship for him and earned him the writers' vote as the "most valuable player" of 1937; also elevated him into "The Thousand Hitters," swatters who have produced that many safe hits in their career . . . the Cardinal star accomplished the feat in the short space of 5 years as a regular and now possesses a life-time average of .341 . . . what's more the National League's monthly bulletin, honors the Hungarian Clouter by sub-titling this month's sheet "MEDWICK Edition" . . .

Best crack of the week goes to TOM MEANY, New York scribe, via DICK O'CONNELL, publicity agent of the Redskins, who pointed out recently that if he had his way as to who would play in the Rose Bowl game this year he'd put Pitt and Fordham on the field and make them play until one or the other scored . . . Speaking of the New Year's Day classic, WIFFY COX, Kenwood professional, had witnessed seven consecutive battles up until this year, when illness forced his absence . . . out Brookland way the boys are wondering just what is the destination of TOMMY WHELAN, former Catholic University backfield star, who has sold his restaurant . . . one-time freshman coach at C. Eastern High seems to be formulating a habit of winning the interhigh football championships . . . 40 years ago, in 1897, the Lincoln Parkers won it, and their victory over Tech Tuesday practically is tantamount to the winning of the crown again this year . . . the last time that Eastern did not lose to the Trainers, several years ago gaining a tie, it was occasion to declare half-holiday in celebration . . . on that basis, it would not have surprised if Principal CHARLIE HART, the grand leader of schoolboy athletes, had declared Christmas holiday in effect yesterday.

BOB GARRISON.

Post Notes On Fishing

By Bill Ackerman.

The Potomac above Washington is clear; even the Monocacy is fishable and the Little Monocacy has been clear as gin for the past ten days, so that it looks as though bass fishermen are getting the break they have been waiting for so long.

ACKERMAN.

Sunday was perfect in the section around Seneca, above Pennyfields, but few anglers availed themselves of the chance, for there were only several boats out.

George Llewellyn, Jim Allie and Don Carpenter fished this area and had fair luck, but only after they had thoroughly covered the shoal water from the dam to the third island without a strike, and moved to the deep water on the edge of the channel, where a half ounce of lead was necessary to hold bottom on account of the great amount of water that is still coming down.

Don's first strike was a big cat, but the next three were smallmouths, the largest of which weighed three and a half pounds, and odd to relate, when opened, was full of spawn, so ripe that it was eyed. You know, Don is the kind of an angler that wants to know what they are feeding on—never a bad idea either, for stomach contents are always a good gauge for the best bait to use.

* * * *

After that it was George's innings; three hits, one after the other. The catch would, without a doubt, have been larger, had they found out sooner that the bass were striking on the minnows and not mouthing them first.

For this fishing, get your boats at the bridge over the canal—50 cents per day, with outboard motors available also, for a small fee, but they are not necessary.

Inadvertently we listed Capt. C. F. Willoughby's phone wrong, although those that called it were set right by the Great Mills operator. It is Great Mills 16-F-3, Ridge, Md. At the same time (so many have asked) there is a good place to stay at Ridge, for those early birds that want to stay overnight so that they can get away at the crack of dawn. It is Lynch Freeman's and his phone is Great Mills 16-F-21.

* * * *

On Monday the returns from the Point Lookout battle front showed a slight letdown rom the preceding four or five days. The catches run from four or five on the boats that fished but an hour or two in the late afternoon up to 25 for those that spent the whole day on the water. The one exception to this was the party of C. W. Hunt, of Alexandria; they took 61 for a total weight of slightly over 300 pounds, fishing with Capt. Willoughby.

It was odd to ote that on Tuesday many of our calls were coming from Virginians, and as far down as Richmond. Looks as though anglers down that way will travel just as readily and as far as Washingtonians will, when the fishing is right, and in spite of the fact that rockfishing is never what might be called poor in their own section.

Again on Tuesday all o the boats came in with large catches, some few of the individual fish running as small as 2 pounds, but the majority better than 4 and the large fellows anywhere up to 15 (?).

* * * *

Jack Tendler, Joe Bush and Milton Gordon, fishing with Raub Drury, had 42; Capt. Brady McKay, 88; Capt. Ed McKay, 60, but what matters, when every boat had their quota—in direct proportion to the size tackle they were using.

There is at present no sign of any weather that will be liable to break these shoals, so if you can find an unattached boatman—get going, but don't wait until the last minute to make that reservation—it will be impossible.

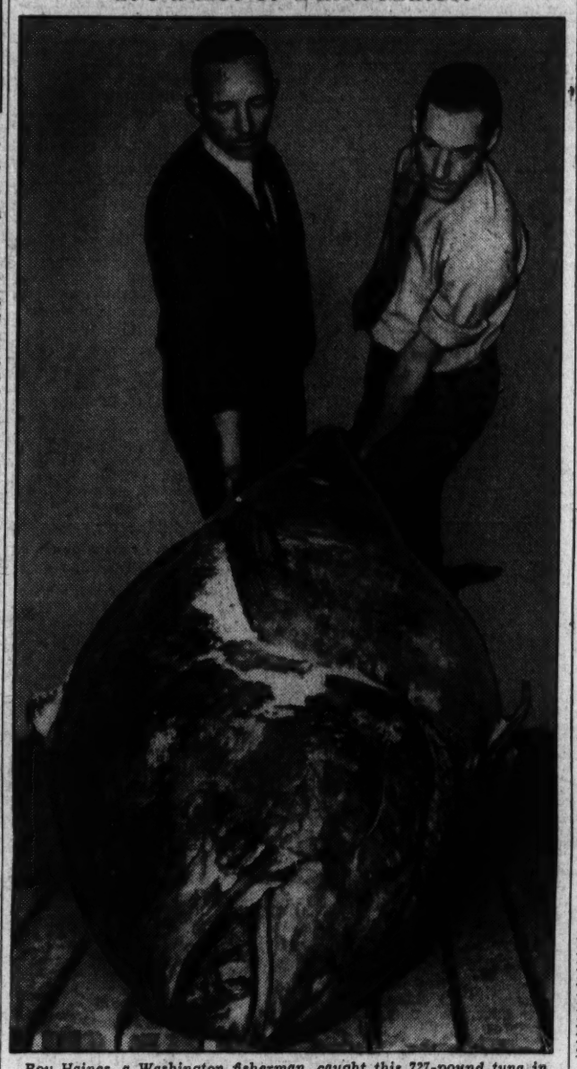
Roy Haines, local angler, whose acme of sport piscatorial is found only in search of the great bluefin tuna in the tide-rips off the Nova Scotian coast, received on Wednesday, packed in a freight car full of herring, the 718-pound fish that he boated off Liverpool late in August.

It was frozen immediately the boat docked, and will be kept that way here at the Terminal Storage until cold weather, when Roy expects to display it at the Arcade Market; possible with the hope that he will convert a few of the local lads to this big-time fishing.

'Detail' Wants Games.

The Detail 150-pound football team, composed of such players as Fred C. Reidy, former Eastern star; Walter McBride, former Western star; Leland Mosedale, former Roosevelt star, and Edward Robertson, former Central star, is looking for games with other teams of the same weight. Please write to Manager Robert Schombert, in care of The Washington Post.

It's a Lot of Tuna Mates!



Roy Haines, a Washington fisherman, caught this 727-pound tuna in New England waters and helped unload it yesterday at the local Pennsylvania Railroad office. He is shown here (right), being helped by John F. Weisman. The big fish is 9 feet 6 inches long.

dance, our coach came up to me and said 'Baugh, that was tough about Sheridan today. Mr. Schmidt is outside in the corridor and said he wasn't interested in Red. He said Red wouldn't do.

..." 'Gee, I'm sorry, coach,' I said. 'We were in their trying, though.'

" 'Yeah, but what I've been meaning to tell you is that Mr. Schmidt liked the way you were throwing those passes and running back those kicks today. He said if you handn't figured on going to any other college, you could go to T. C. U. He'd see to that.' "

Hollidge Leader In Bankers League

Hollidge of Riggs Bank paced the Arcade bowlers last night with a high game of 150 while Moyer took set honors with 373. American Security and Trust won team honors with 611 and 1688.

In the Dynamite League, Strub of Tornadoes took high game honors with 143, Crymes of Wrecking Crew high set of 359 while Faasers team was high with 545 and Wrecking Crew high team set at 1595.

G. W. Rally Planned.

One of the major events in George Washington University's homecoming program is the big rally scheduled to be held at 11 p. m. at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday night.

Oil Industry Taxes Exceed Billion a Year

Gasoline Cheap But Tax Is High, Says President Byles of A. P. I.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—With an air of optimism over 1938 business prospects, President Axtell J. Byles, of the American Petroleum Institute, today reviewed the state of the oil industry on a keynote that "gasoline is cheap, only the tax is high." In an address at the first general session of the institute's eighteenth annual convention, Byles said that gasoline prices are about half what they were in 1920.

"This industry, in good times and bad, has not only met every public obligation without asking for financial aid from the taxpayer," he said, "but is contributing to the support of government in the form of taxes upon its properties, products and operations at the staggering rate of $1,181,000,000 per annum.

Byles said the tax load was only slightly less than the $1,373,000,000 the industry pays labor, and was four times the amount paid persons who furnish the capital.

He estimated minimum requirement of gasoline inventories as of March 31, 1938, would be approximately 80,000,000 barrels, compared with 61,651,000 barrels last March 31.

"Economically it would appear that an average daily crude oil production of 3,500,000 barrels in the country as a whole for the six months period which began October 1, 1937, would bring the industry into a relatively satisfactory gasoline inventory situation on March 31 next, he said.

Chase National Sues Large German Bank

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Commerz-Und Privat-Bank Aktien Gesellschaft, of Berlin, one of Germany's leading financial institutions, was sued by the Chase National Bank in the State Supreme Court today for $3,220,560, representing principal and interest on a $4,000,000 gold note.

The bank, suing as trustee under an indenture of November 1, 1927, set forth in an application for a warrant of attachment that $2,979,000 in principal and $241,560 in interest is due on the note, which was payable in Berlin on November 1 last. Samuel Armstrong, vice president of the Chase Bank's corporate trust department, stated in an affidavit that participations in the German bank's note were sold to the public and $2,979,000 of these were outstanding.

Cotton Steady; December 7.86

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Cotton held steady today with moderate demand absorbing Southern selling. March, which had sold off from 7.99 to 7:93, closed at 7.96 with final prices 1 to 7 points net higher.

Foreign and trade buying gave the market an early boost but liquidation in December was attracted and partial reactions developed. Dullness of both spot cotton and cotton goods was reflected in limited trading.

Exports today 29,542 making a total of 1,985,049 for the season thus far. Port receipts 23,960; United States port stocks 3,273,175.

Bank Executive Advises Advertising

B. Russell Shaw, vice president of the Morris Plan Bank, addressed 40 members of the American Business Club yesterday at their weekly meeting at the Hay-Adams House. His subject was public relations, and he advised constructive advertising and new services in order to gain customers. He cited President Roosevelt's salutation "my friends" as being a great public relations message.

The American Business Club is composed of younger businessmen who meet to exchange progressive business notes.

Crop Damage In Argentina Lifts Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Fears of enlarged crop damage in Argentina, with freezing weather there predicted for tonight, did much to hoist wheat values today 2 cents a bushel.

Argentina areas already affected by frost include the region that as a rule produces 40 per cent of Argentiana's wheat yield. Adding impetus to wheat price upturns were advances of securities, as well as 4 cents a bushel skyrocketing of rye values.

Soaring of the rye market followed notice that the United States Government would buy up surplus domestic rye, grind it into flour and turn it over to relief agencies.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞@2 cents above yesterday's finish, December 89⅛@89¼, May 89@89¼, July 84½@85⅝; rye 3⅛@4 cents up, December 71¼; corn unchanged to ¼ off, December 56⅛@56⅛, May ½@⅝, July 59⅝, and oats ⅛@½ advanced, December 30½. Provisions results varied from 2 cents setback to 12 cents bulge.

Stocks Move Ahead With Utilities in Demand; Trade Points Downward.

New York, Nov. 10.—Improvement in most financial markets provided widespread recognition of the dependence on political factors, which for a change were regarded as more favorable. United States bonds were a shade firmer and other issues hardened, while stocks and commodities went ahead. The turnover in stocks increased to around 2,000,000 shares with best prices near the close. Gains of 2 to 5 points were numerous. December wheat rose 1¼ cents to 89⅛ cents a bushel.

Public utility stocks held their strength and activity as the market was inclined to view the overtures from Washington as indicative of better days, but the principal gains were among the industrial shares. United States Steel was almost buoyant, in spite of the October report on shipments which were at the lowest of the year, but the highest for any October, with one exception, since 1929. At its best Steel rose nearly 4 points. Bethlehem, Smelters, Anaconda, Kennecott, the farm implements, chemicals, airplanes and rail equipments were well favored.

Building Shares Lag.

General Electric and Westinghouse were bought on rising hopes for the utilities, which also accounted for the firmer tone among the coppers. Westinghouse gained half a dozen points. Most of the rails hardened. Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania and Chesapeake & Ohio moved forward. Oils recovered a fraction to more than a point. The farm stocks climbed 1 to 3 points. Building shares, with few exceptions, were laggards, while profit taking held the gold stocks in check.

A "follow-up" on the intimations given yesterday by Chairman Douglas of the SEC that the Government, growing somewhat sensitive to the warnings of business disaster unless something be done to change its policy of frightfulness toward business, would be condescending enough to allow the privately owned utilities to live a while longer helped the markets in the early trading. This time it was President Roosevelt himself, with characteristic Delphic ambiguity, who promised to do something. The utilities would get his "co-operation," it was intimated, provided they would cut rates down to the level which pleased him.

Still Cracking Whip.

The markets no doubt were a bit too quick on the trigger in seeing that as a bull point, for there were plenty of hitches in the promise. To begin with, the utilities do not need and do not ask for Government aid of any sort. They can take care of themselves and secure their own capital requirements, provided only the Government does not go out of its way to oppress them. As some observers were inclined to view the matter, the Government may be willing to "co-operate" in holding off its competitive program if only the utilities will cut their rates to levels which would effectively bar them from the open captal market. To do that would throw them upon the credit mercies of the RFC and put them into the hands of the Federal Government just as completely as though they had to surrender in the first place to the armies of TVAs now being planned for the entire country.

On the bull side the recent reference by the President and minor Government officials to the utility situation may be regarded as favorable solely because it indicates a recognition of the fact that the country is in a business recession and that the most depressed industries need a change in Government policy. Meanwhile, the markets were promised a little light on what form the next series of economic management is going to take. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau will throw out a few hints tonight.

Trade Relaxation.

Trade news at midweek is rather colorless. The Iron Age mentions the disappointment in the steel trade over the lack of motor car factory purchases to develop, and the automotive industry in turn probably is a bit disappointed at the reception to its new higher-priced models. That explains the actual reduction in price by one company and the numerous rumors of reduction in production schedules. The steel trade is still hoping for a heavy demand from the railroads, provided the freight rate increase be granted, but building construction is dead.

Railroad freight loadings for last week, as indicated by reports of leading carriers, again fell below the corresponding period of a year ago. Production of electricity also is beginning to feel the pinch. While above a year ago, over the country as a whole, last year's output in New England and Middle Western industrial centers fell below the corresponding week of last year, for the first time. Retail trade is holding well, but there is this autumn an entire absence of purchasing with a view to forestalling price advances. The public seems to feel that the market for quick consumption goods is turning from a seller's to a buyer's affair.

On still another front President Roosevelt showed that he is at last becoming aware of the implications of business recession. In sharp contrast to recent allusions to prosperity which just didn't happen but which came because of the Administration's planning, the President now is calling to Washington a number of the country's leading industrialists, merchants and bankers, for advice on ways to revive the moribund building industry. No doubt much will be learned by the President from his advisers, who for once come not from the small circle of young college lawyers and braintrusters but from the world of practical affairs.

One thing that will be brought out will be the fact that high costs, principally high wages, are holding down building construction. Another is that rising taxation makes real estate maintenance and development too costly. Admittedly the construction industry has been a disappointing laggard in business recovery, in spite of the supposed advantage of an abundance of cheap capital. On the side of industrial construction the reasons are clear; namely, fear of the Government's program toward business profits, competition in the utility field, uncertainty over taxation, doubts on the currency, in view of the unbalanced budget, and a general discouragement arising from the constant reminder by the President to the public that business men are per se reprehensible. Incidentally, the calling of businessmen and bankers to Washington, as trade recession gets under way, is reminiscent of the uneasy days of November, 1929.

Preparation.

The voluminous reports of the Department of Agriculture on farm crops also carry a more or less subtle build-up for another program of crop restriction. The plain implication of the reports is that prices ought to be lower to consumers of tobacco, rice, peanuts, mutton, fruit and other commodities. That won't happen if the Government can help it. It is calling attention to the prospect for lower prices (to the producer), unless production is cut, and the Government proposes to regulate that.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Set New High Mark

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported today sales for the tenth period of the current fiscal year, October 9 to November 5, totaled $51,032,236, an increase of 3.7 per cent compared with the corresponding 1936 period. Ninth period sales this year totaled $54,758,329. For the first ten periods, January 30 to November 5, Sears sales totaled $437,376,443, an increase of 12.7 per cent compared with the 1936 period. This was a new record.

KodakDeclares 50 Cents Extra

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Eastman Kodak Co., with principal domestic plants at Rochester, N. Y., declared today an extra dividend of 50 cents a share and the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on common stock. The extra is payable December 10 to holders of record November 20, and the regular is payable January 3 to holders of record December 5. Directors also voted the twenty-sixth annual wage dividend, which is based on the common dividend payment, and totaled around $3,555,000, the largest in the history of the company. The wage dividend is payable March 1 next.

Great Northern Paper Extra.

Great Northern Paper Co. declared an extra dividend of 63 cents a share and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on common stock, both payable December 1 to holders of record November 20. An extra dividend of 12 cents was paid September 1 last. The company's principal plants are in Maine.

Sloss-Sheffield $1.50.

Penn. Votes 75 Cents.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. today declared a dividend of 75 cents a share payable December 20 to stockholders of record November 20. Last July the company paid a dividend of 50 cents a share.

Curb Advances; Trading Active

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—The curb market pressed forward fractions to around 5 points today in active dealings. Higher-priced shares recorded the widest gains followed by the utilities which advanced along a wide front following the Administration's friendly gesture to the power companies.

Newmont Mining advanced 5 points to 65 and Sherwin-Williams was up 4½ to 91. Advancing 2 points or more were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Northern States Power "A" and American Gas & Electric.

Chain Store Sales 5.8% Over Year Ago

New York, Nov. 10.—In spite of the general recession in business, retail trade, as reflected in chain store operations, continues substantially ahead of a year ago, according to the monthly survey issued yesterday by Childs, Jeffries & Thorndike, Incorporated. October sales for the first 25 chains to report were $291,964,800, an increase of $15,979,486, or 5.8 per cent over a year ago.

The comparison percentagewise was not as favorable as in recent months, but from a dollar standpoint October sales were the largest of any month this year, and with the exception of December, 1935, the largest reported for any month since 1929.

Tobacco Markets.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 10.—Maryland—Net receipts for the past week declined to 183 hogsheads and sales to 312 hogsheads, as the season nears its close. No change in prices was noted. A few hogsheads of new crop ground leaves have been sold at prices reported between 4.00 and 22.00. They appear to have less color and less body than the 1936 crop.

Brazil Continues To Burn Coffee

New York, Nov. 10.—Ironically, the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange learned by cable today Brazil's coffee burning during the last half of October reached 886,000 bags, compared with 811,000 bags during the first half of the month. Since July 1, the start of the new crop year, Brazil has destroyed 6,763,000 bags, bringing the total since June, 1931, to 54,244,000 bags.

Brazil's plans for the crop year, which will end next June 30, call for the destruction of slightly over 20,000,000 bags and it is believed in trade circles that this program will be carried through despite the recent revision of general coffee policy which brought with it a drop of over 2 cents a pound in less than a week.

Bob Burns Says—

There've been so many women suing their husbands for divorce on grounds of cruelty that I began to wonder where all the brutes were comin' from.

The other day I heard that one of them divorce cases was comin' up in court and I went down just to see what kind of a lookin' monster the husband was. When the case was called, a great big woman got up and walked up to the judge's stand and she says, "Judge, I can't live with that man another minute and I wanta divorce!"

The judge says "On what grounds?" and she says, "Cruel, inhuman treatment." The judge says, "Is your husband here to contest the case?" and she says, "I should say not! That little, measly shrimp is afraid to come in the same room with me!"

Graham Rites Today; Burial Set in Illinois

Judge Gained Fame in Study of War Cost, Heading House Inquiry.

Funeral services for William Johnson Graham, 65, presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, who died unexpectedly yesterday, will be held at 10 a. m. today at Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Aledo, Ill.

Judge Graham came to Washington in 1917 as a Representative from Illinois. He served in the House until 1924 when he accepted appointment to the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Headed Post-War Inquiry.

Born in Newcastle, Pa., in 1872, the judge moved to Illinois in his youth and was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1893. He later studied law in the offices of James M. Brock, of Aledo, and was admitted to the bar in 1895, practicing in Aledo for several years.

Holding the position of State's attorney of Mercer County, Ill., from 1901 to 1909, Judge Graham was appointed delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1912.

In Congress, he attained prominence through his work as chairman of a House committee appointed in 1919 to make an investigation of the War Department's expenditure of $16,000,000,000.

Discovered Biggest Skull.

Outside politics, Judge Graham had won recognition for several important archeological discoveries relating to the American Indian. In June this year he discovered the largest human skull on record. The skull, believed to be that of an Algonquin Indian who lived about 300 years ago, was found in Stafford County, Va.

Four years ago, Judge Graham discovered at Port Tobacco, Md., an Indian burial mound containing nearly 150 complete skeletons and many valuable relics.

Judge Graham leaves his wife, Mrs. Edna R. Graham; two sons, John Graham, Newport News, Va., and Robert Graham, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. Rush Obst, also of Washington.

Mrs. Rosenberger Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Amelia Rosenberger, 97, who died Monday at her home, 2507 Rhode Island avenue northeast, were held yesterday at the Lutheran Church at New Market, Va.

Widow of George W. Rosenberger and former resident of New Market, Mrs. Rosenberger lived most of her life at Rosedale, an estate near the Endless Caverns, Va.

Well-known in Virginia and Washington as "Aunt Millie," she retained vivid memories of the War Between the States. She had been in good health until three years ago.

Mrs. Rosenberger is survived by a nephew, Russell Rosenberger, of Harrisonburg, Va.; two grandnephews, Russell Fray, of Beverley Hills, Calif., and Lester Fray, of Brightwood, Va., and three grandnieces, Mrs. Neil Winchester, of Washington; Mrs. Winslow Lewis, Chevy Chase, Md., and Mrs. John Yancy, Harrisonburg, Va.

Maj. Johnstone's Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Maj. Jerome E. Johnstone, 56, chief inspector of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, who died Tuesday night in Mount Alto Hospital, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Arlington National Cemetery.

Maj. Johnstone died as the result of injuries he received in a fall in the Naval Academy football stands several weks ago when he attended a football game.

Born in Wamego, Kans., Maj. Johnstone came to Washington eight years ago from California. Prior to his working for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, he served as an egineer in the office of the District inspector of buildings.

A veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, he was made a major of Infantry in the latter. He resided at 1700 T street northwest.

Maj. Johnstone is survived by two sisters, Miss Lott Johnstone and Mrs. William P. Montgomery, both of Washington.

Maurice A. Flynn Dies at Hospital

Maurice A. Flynn, 50, of 904 Quincy street northeast, sergeant of the guard at the Government Printing Office, died Tuesday in Sibley Hospital after a short illness.

Surviving him are three daughters, Margaret, Catherine and Theresa Flynn.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 8:30 a. m., at Hanlon's undertaking establishment. Requiem mass in St. Anthony's will follow at 9 a. m. Burial will take place in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A. E. Ingram, 70, Former Envoy, Editor, Expires

Funeral to Be Tomorrow for Ex-Chief of Foreign Service Journal.

Funeral services for Augustus E. Ingram, 70, former American consul general at Vancouver, British Columbia, who died at his home in Washington Tuesday night, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral parlor, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

In failing health since he resigned as editor of the American Foreign Service Journal on April 30, 1934, Mr. Ingram died as result of a heart attack.

Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Ingram received his education at Shrewsbury School, England, and in private law offices in Los Angeles. He entered the Department of Agriculture in 1898, transferring to the State Department several years later.

Mr. Ingram served with distinction at Paris, Antwerp, Nottingham, Stockholm, Berlin, Montreal, Bradford, Havre and Vancouver. He resigned from the foreign service in April, 1925, while serving as consul general at Vancouver. He became editor of the Foreign Service Journal in December, 1928.

Since his retirement from the foreign service, Mr. Ingram has made his home in Washington. He is survived by his widow and a sister, Mrs. Eva Pearson, Sydney, Australia.

Mass to Be Celebrated Today for Mrs. Kelly

Requiem mass for Mrs. Una Kelly, 42, member of the Del Ray, Va., Parent-Teacher Association, who died Tuesday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be celebrated this morning at 9 a. m., at St. Mary's Cemetery. She had been ill four months.

Mrs. Kelly was born in Limerick, Ireland, coming to this country 10 years ago. She resided at 114 Windsor avenue, West, Del Ray, with her husband, Master Sergt. Thomas Kelly, U. S. A., retired, and two children, Clare, 8, and Frances, 7.

Philadelphia 'Broke,' 1,500 Workers Ousted

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP).—Mayor S. Davis Wilson said tonight that 1,500 city employes were given dismissal orders, effective in five days, because of lack of money for salaries.

Death of Davidge Held Accidental

Canceling an inquest he previously had ordered, Dr. E. H. Marstellar, Prince William County, Va., coroner, yesterday issued a certificate of accidental death in the case of William Davidge, jr., of Greenwich, Va.

Young Davidge, a former resident of Washington, was found dead Tuesday under a railroad trestle near Manassas. His body was lying in the shallow waters of Broad Run Creek.

Devidge is survived by his wife and his father, mother and sister, who live in Washington at 1826 I street northwest.

Dies in Trestle Fall.
